JEROME "HUTCH" HUTCHINSON, JR.

Founder & Chief Servant Officer, ICABA World Network

A VISIONARY LEADER BUILDING CONNECTIONS, CREATING OPPORTUNITIES, AND ELEVATING EXCELLENCE

Jerome "Hutch" Hutchinson, Jr. is a visionary entrepreneur, pioneering media executive, global community builder, and passionate advocate for the transformative power of relationships, collaboration, and servant leadership. For more than three decades, he has championed a powerful conviction: individual excellence creates achievement, but collective excellence creates enduring impact and legacy.

As Founder and Chief Servant Officer of ICABA World Network, Hutch leads a global relationship-driven ecosystem connecting accomplished Black professionals, entrepreneurs, executives, and organizational leaders to the people, information, resources, and opportunities that accelerate success, expand influence, and advance prosperity.

His guiding philosophy, "Together We Go Further Faster," reflects his belief that trusted relationships, intentional collaboration, and shared opportunities are powerful catalysts for professional achievement, entrepreneurial growth, wealth creation, and sustainable community advancement.

FROM MEDIA PIONEER TO GLOBAL IMPACT

In 1998, Hutch launched Kentucky's first Black-owned teleisision station, WYCS-TV, establishing himself as a pioneering entrepreneur committed to expanding representation, ownership, and opportunity in the media industry.

In November 2009, he founded ICABA World Network to create an intentional platform for accomplished Black professionals and entrepreneurs to connect, collaborate, and elevate. Today, ICABA is a global ecosystem that includes a dynamic online community, signature events, leadership initiatives, recognition programs, and media platforms that showcase excellence, advance wealth, and elevate leadership.

SPEAKER. STRATEGIST. COACH. CATALYST.

A compelling communicator and engaging facilitator, Hutch brings a distinctive combination of entrepreneurial experience, strategic insight, community-building expertise, and authentic servant leadership to his work. His presentations challenge audiences to rethink how they build relationships, exercise influence, lead organizations, create opportunities, and define success.

I have practiced law for more than three decades across AmLaw 100 litigation, Fortune 500 in-house leadership, boutique firms, and now fractional general counsel work for the organizations I advise. I have served as Deputy General Counsel, Chief Compliance Officer, Chief Privacy Officer, Divisional Head of Human Resources, and leader of global compliance, ethics, privacy, ESG, enterprise risk, and employment law programs across more than a dozen countries.

I work with law firms, corporate leadership teams, executives, compliance leaders, and mission-driven organizations on how people actually make decisions when the pressure is real, how teams communicate when it matters most, and how organizations adopt AI without losing the human judgment that makes it worth using.
