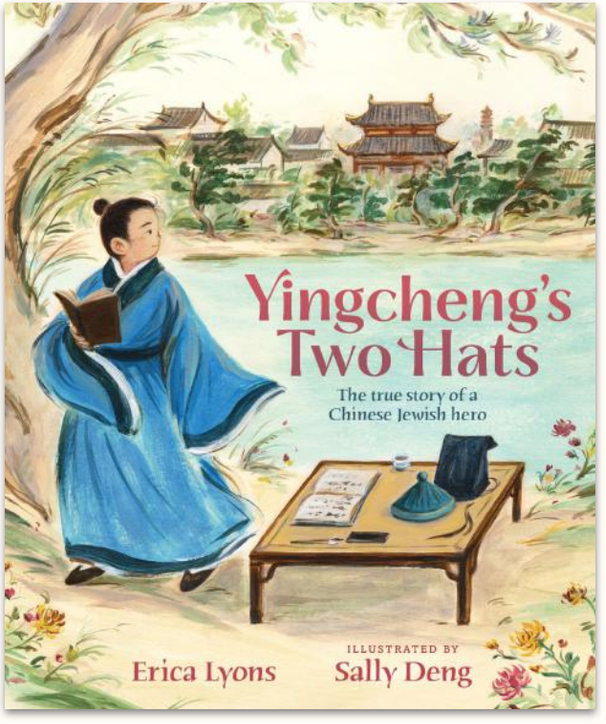
Yingcheng's Two Hats

The True Story of a Chinese Jewish Hero

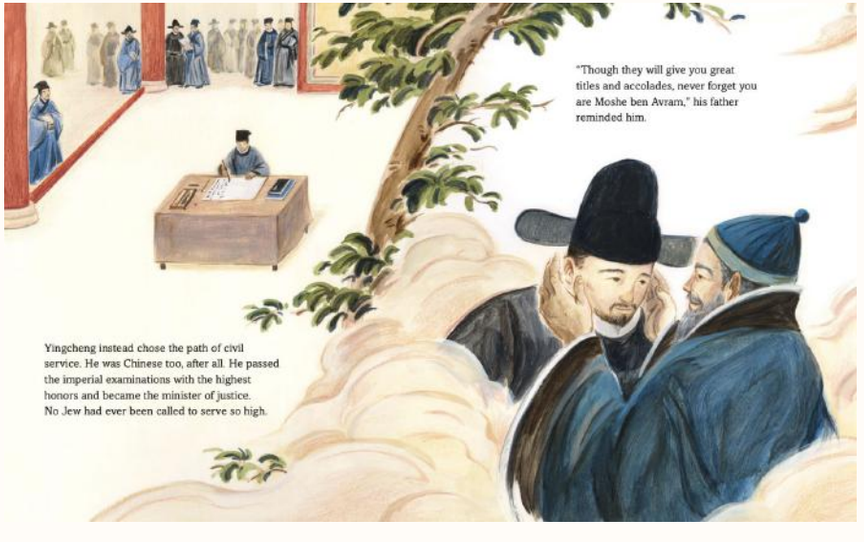


By Erica Lyons

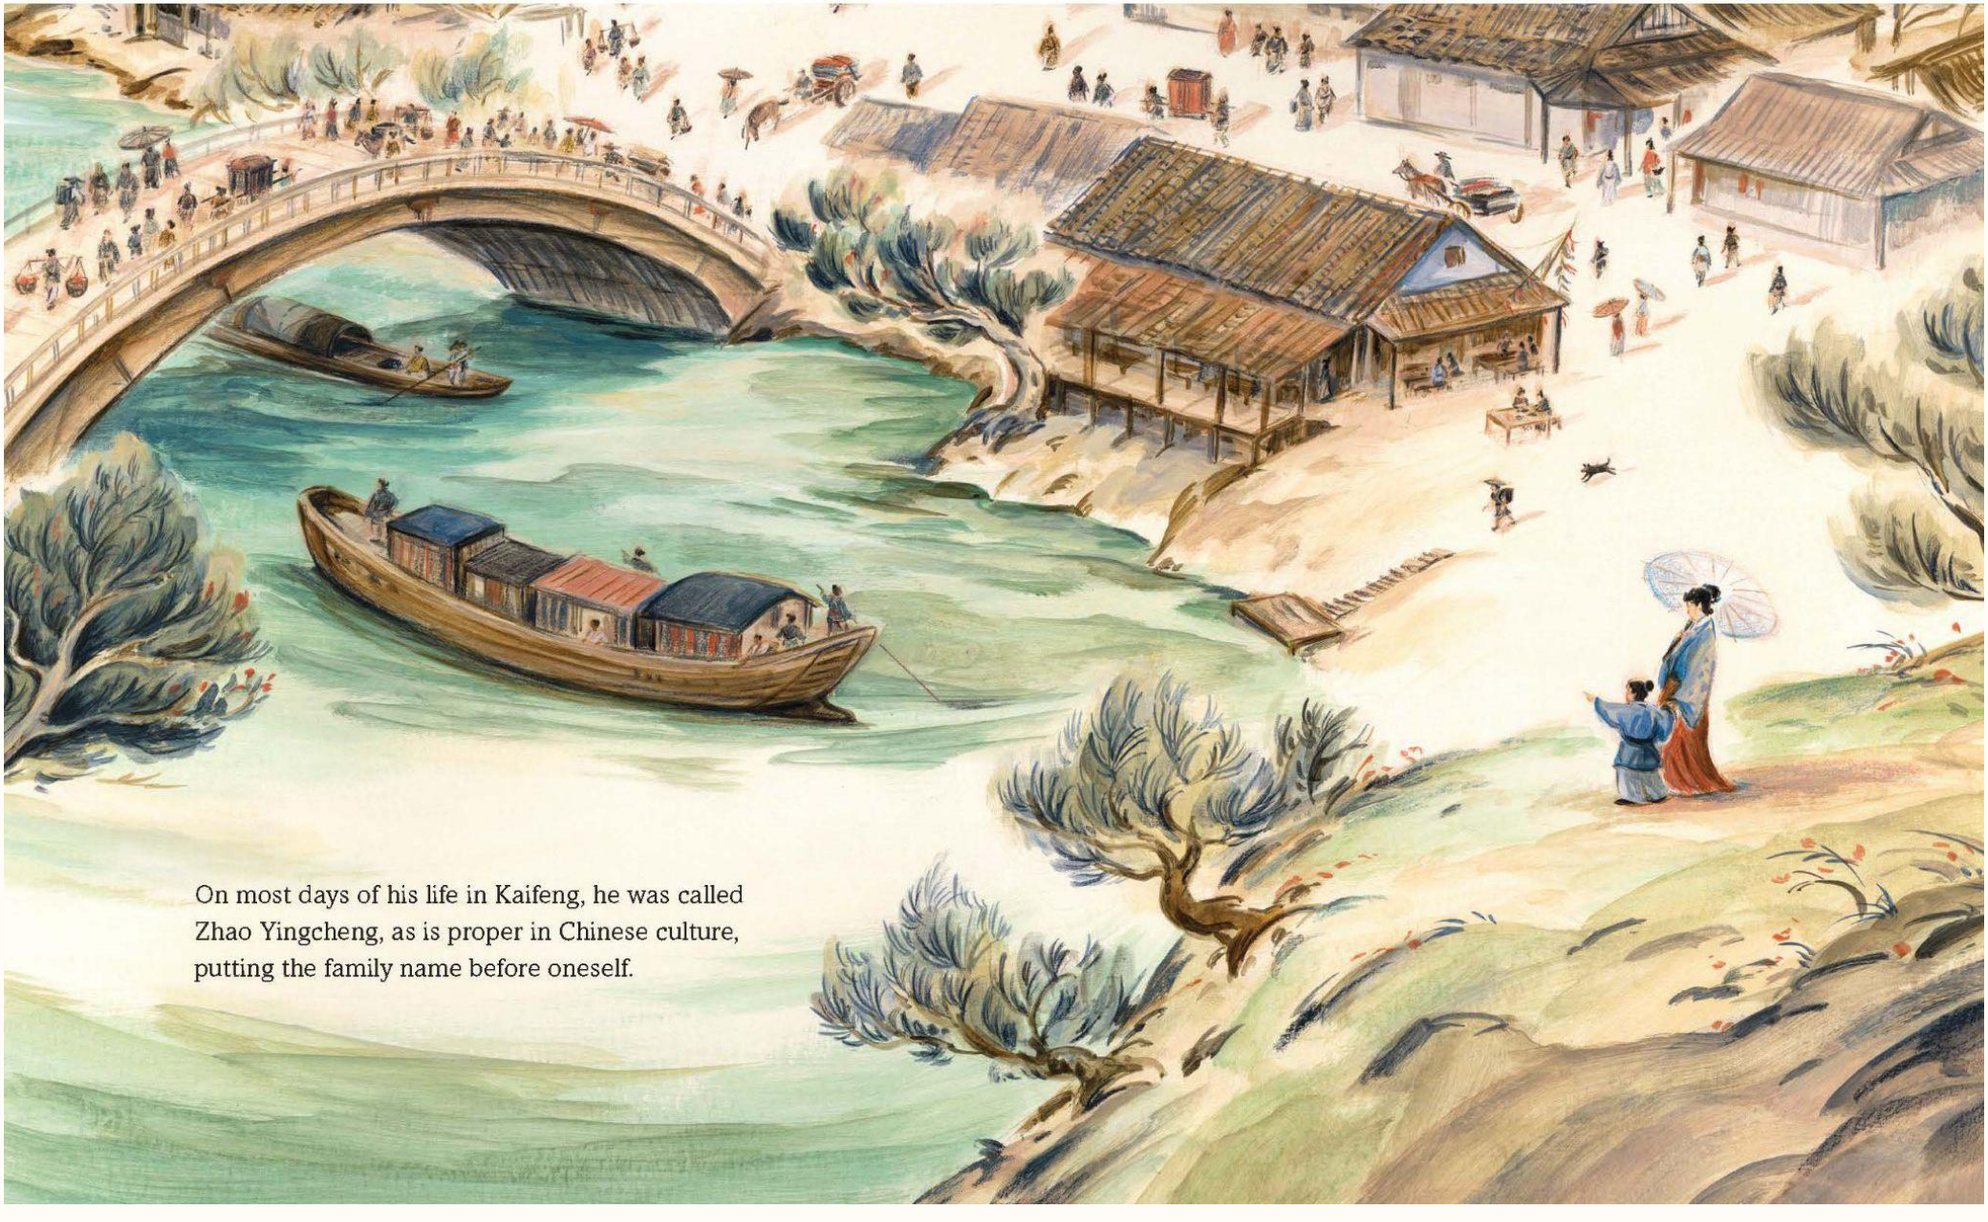
Illustrated by Sally Deng

In today's world, where misconceptions about the Chinese and the Jews are rampant, comes this true story of a boy who was from both cultures, and a real community with a history few know.

From the seventeenth century comes this true story of Kaifeng's Zhao Yingcheng, also known as Moshe ben Avram, the highest-ranking Chinese Jew in the Imperial system. In the 1600s, he managed to conquer rebels, sponsor schools, rebuild his synagogue, and represent the best of both of his identities.



$18.99 US • Hardcover • 9" x 11" • 32 pages • 9781646147663 •
Rights: World All Languages



On most days of his life in Kaifeng, he was called Zhao Yingcheng, as is proper in Chinese culture, putting the family name before oneself.

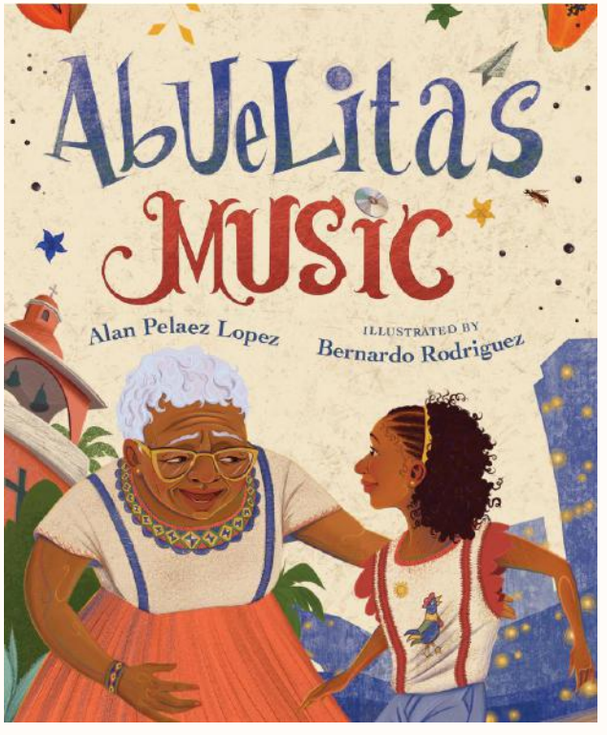
Abuelita's Music



By Alan Pelaez Lopez

Illustrated by Bernardo Rodriguez

Nayeli misses her abuelita. Though her mami promises that one day the whole family will have papeles, and they'll travel the world together, their Boston apartment feels empty without the sounds, colors, and rhythms that Abuelita brought from their homeland, Oaxaca.

And on the days Nayeli misses her abuelita the most, only one thing will do: music. When the vallenatos and boleros are playing, their apartment becomes their own country: one where no one is undocumented or alone.

Mistland

By Maggie Heinze

Hanlon Philomena Hughes has lived her whole life under the shadow of her parents. Or rather, their reputations: Once world-renowned archaeologists, Henry and Philomena Hughes lost their jobs and their good names pursuing a made-up group of magical islands off the coast of Ireland. And eventually, their lives—as they disappeared in a terrible storm right after Hanlon was born.

Until one night, Hanlon and her best friend accidentally summon a mysterious and terrifying bird-man: a Waello. And so begins the journey that Hanlon realizes she's been desperate for all along. For the myth is real and her parents are alive, and Hanlon and a ragtag team of explorers must voyage to a Mistland full of creatures, heroes, and monsters to bring them home.

CHAPTER FIVE

Hanlon, Oscar, and Poppy sat across from one another at the kitchen table. The kitchen itself held its breath as they looked over the letters, newspaper clippings, trinkets, and photographs spread out between them. Oscar lined them up in piles according to their purpose (tools, photographs, articles) and he studied them closely. There was a magnifying glass (which had belonged to Hanlon's dad), a pocket knife (which had belonged to her mom), a trowel, a leather glove, a worn journal. The letters were from Hanlon's Uncle Otto. He was her dad's only brother and Poppy's only surviving son. Poppy hadn't seen him in years and Hanlon wasn't so sure she'd ever met him at all.

"What did Uncle Otto write you so many letters?" said Hanlon. There were at least a dozen letters stacked and tied together.

Dadaji's Paintbrush

By Rashmi Sirdeshpande

Illustrated by Ruchi Mhasane

Once, in a tiny village in India, there was a young boy who loved to paint. He lived with his grandfather, who taught him to paint with his fingers, to make paints from marigolds and brushes made from jasmine flowers.

They didn't have much, but they had each other.

After his grandfather dies, the boy notices a little box with a note that read: "From Dadaji, with love," with his grandfather's best paintbrush tucked away inside. But he feels he will never want to paint again.

Will the boy overcome his grief and find joy in painting and his dadaji's memory again?

The AI Incident

By J.E. Thomas

Malcolm Montgomery is the new kid at Shirley Chisholm Charter Middle School. In no time at all, he's been slapped with the weird kid label. Is it because he's a foster kid who's been in nine homes? Or maybe because he burps when he gets nervous . . . which is often? Malcolm has a plan to finally get adopted by a forever family before it's too late. But then on Visiting Professionals' Day, his school invites Dr. Alphonse Hatch, president of Hatch-ED—one of the fastest-growing artificial intelligence companies in the state—to give a presentation. Dr. Hatch brings his AI-powered robot, and events get set in motion that create . . . THE INCIDENT.

Xolo

By Donna Barba Higuera

Illustrated by Mariana Ruiz Johnson

It is said the mighty feathered serpent god, Quetzalcoatl, helped create the earth. He is the hero who stole back the bones of humanity from the evil god of the Underworld. In his quest to bring humans to the earth, Quetzalcoatl's dog-headed twin brother, Xolotl, was present. Not much is known of Xolotl, the god of lightning, death, and misfortune. A monster.

This is what really happened.

From Newbery Medalist Donna Barba Higuera and illustrator Mariana Ruiz Johnson comes a singular reimagining of the Aztec myth of the origin of man—and man's best friend—that is nothing short of a modern masterpiece.
