OF US

To celebrate the 6th anniversary of our Reaper In Pink, the inimitable Mori Calliope, Dead Beats have dusted out the cobwebs in their skulls to put together this scrapbook!

Through these years that don't stop coming, we've made many wonderful memories together, but Calli's also recounted some old memories with us, telling thrilling tales from the bygone era of "back in za day!" So, we thought it's about time we flip it around and spin yarns of our own, sharing nostalgic moments we flashed back to thanks to the songs Calli's sung, the games she's played, and any other deathly activities. We hope this collection of throwbacks goes to show that past, present, or future, we'll always remember you!

Happy anniversary!

[Dragonball Z Kakarot] what is a dragon ball

When Calliope started her Dragon Ball arc it brought back memories of watching it with my dad. He loved it a lot and he'd always ask me when a new episode was coming out and one of my last cherished memories was watching the Battle of Gods movie with him before he passed and I will never forget that day. Thank you for letting me remember that feeling Calliope and happy anniversary.

[PaRappa the Rapper]i gotta believe!!

Just like Calli did, I have fond memories of cracking up at the goofyness of PaRappa while I played handing off the controller with friends back when I was a kid. I'm really glad it finally happened, cuz it was a bit like re-living a memory as well as getting to enjoy seeing someone else enjoy (and get frustrated by) it.

[Sekiro: Shadows Die Twice]this is where I got filtered

Thinking back on streams I saw of Calli. I remembered how focus and silent Calli was when facing Lady Butterfly in Sekiro. No words spoken. Just the sounds of game. When she finally beat the boss, that small laugh in sign of relief. It got me remembering how exactly I felt when facing the Orphan of Kos in Bloodborne. I remembered very clearly as it was the night before I went to college for the first time. I was up couple hours. Room was completely dark. Heart was pounding loudly as I was focus so much. Finally beating that boss... I felt so happy. Hands was still shaking. Around 2 or 3 am. I died so many times to that boss. So when I saw Calli laser focus and being happy defeating that boss. I relate so hard to that. Truly a wonderful and awesome gamer Calli is! Happy Anniversary Calli!!! You rock so awesome!!!

[UNARCHIVED KARAOKE] Singing My Reaper Heart Out!

Calli singing Fukai Mori really takes me back to watching Inuyasha with my mom back when I was young. It was the second anime I ever watched, so the memories really do flood back hearing the song again. But to be sung by one of my favorite people in the world? It's a magical experience. I truly love all her music. I wish our Mori a happy anniversary! And for many more to come. The memories we made back then are important, but the ones we currently make are just as important as well, and I look forward to what more will be made in this community.

[UNARCHIVED EMOTIONAL KARAOKE]hello darkness my old friend

In the months of june and july of 2026, Calli did a bunch of karaoke streams. In one of them, the sad songs stream, she sang two songs one after the other: Let It Be and Yesterday, the reason why these songs were so nostalgic to me were because those are the songs i sang to my grandma in her hospital bed before she passed away in early 2024. Mori was the biggest support i had during that time, her songs and streams helped saved my life, they'll always give me comfort in the stormy days (Like when i had to move from the house i grew up for 20 years in the start of 2026). Thank you for being here Mori, you are a amazing person, without you i'd never met so many incredible people, you make my days shine bright and i always look forwards to the next day thanks to you and all the boneheads from this community that i'm so happy to be a part of. I'll always be proud of being a deadbeat and calling you my one and only Kamioshi, you saved my life and i'll always be thankful for that 🥹

[WATCH-A-LONG]The Boondock Saints (1999)

I remember seeing Boondock Saints with my dad at home when I was waaaay too young to be seeing this kind of movie but my dad really wanted to see it. I'm also the oldest and my parents were still kind of figuring out how to parent. I only vaguely remember the movie but vividly remember my dad's panicked reactions to the many not kid friendly scenes. I guess it didn't occur to him to just turn off the movie or watch it on his own. At the time of the watch-a-long I had moved to a new state for work taking me further from my family than I had ever been. Watching it with you and the Deadbeats helped a lot and I will be forever thankful for that. Happy Anniversary Calli and thank you for 6 years of being our reaper/dad/sheriff/oshi!

[UNARCHIVED KARAOKE] ENDURANCE - Until 2,300,000 Subscribers!!

In this endurance stream back in 2023, Calli sang a some Gorillaz songs which were my absolute greatest obsession for almost a decade. She sang Clint Eastwood, Feel Good Inc, and On Melancholy Hill which are my 3 most favorite songs off their first 3 albums. Her singing them reminded me of being a kid back in middle school staying up playing their albums on repeat learning the lyrics. I'd obsess over Gorillaz lore and listen to the rare CD dramas with the characters giving interviews. I'd watch tons of videos of people unboxing of Gorillaz CDs or posters. My Christmas and B-day lists were all Gorillaz merch. I can effectively now say that my passion with Gorillaz has been replaced by passion towards Vtubers and Mori Calliope. Gorillaz may have been my first obsession, but Mori Calliope has proven a worthy successor to dedicate my passion towards. Happy anniversary Calli! Hope yall can collab on a song one day. The future is coming on, and I can't wait to see what you make of it. 💖

[Dragon Ball Z Kakarot] the balls are (SPOILERS!!)

When I was a kid, dbz aired in the morning exactly an hour before my school bus would arrive. So I would get up an hour earlier to get ready and just sit down and watch the episodes. Watching Calli experience dbz for the first time really gives me the feeling of the little me watching it for the first time. Watching the buu saga and going to school to talk about the episode was one of the most fond memories of my childhood. And it feels just like that whenever Calli asks questions about lore and characters. That feeling of watching dbz for the first time manifests in the form of Calli.

Last Days

I remember when last days came out it was 4 years after my dad passed away and the song hit me right in the heart idk why it just reminded me of the things i should've done when my dad was alive, while it gave me some regrets it helped reminded me of my fond memories with my dad. For example my dad was always a big tsundere he never really showed his true feelings towards me and always say I'm acting like a clown and such but behind my back he would actually boast about me to his friends, and sometimes during night times he would wake me up at 2 am to go for mcdonalds or just hang out at a nearby food place and just watch soccer together, oh and i remember that every weekend we would stay up late to watch WWE his favourite was john cena, until he lost to randy orton and then he changed his oshi, but yeh happy anniversary calli and thanks for helping me remember all these amazing memories of mine and thanks for being my second dad PEACE

nice to see Calli get more and more into Dark Souls/Elden Ring, one of my fav series. My friend introduced them to me and we went through a bunch of runs together. I like doing some unconventional builds/ weapons and hyperoptimizing the questionable things. One time i ended up wanting to run the shield weapon in ds2, which is basically at the end of the game. So decided to sandbag with 2 normal shields until then and mostly watch my friend carry. Eventually though there's a bit where you have to fight the Persuer alone, and i had to be tenacious as a reaper to struggle through that [HANDCAM OFFCOLLAB]takamori card battle in Magic The Gathering!

The MtG stream you and Kiara did remind me of my memories as a kid playing TCG's. This has been a hobby of mine for most of my life, and it started when I was very little. I wanted to buy cards and play after seeing the anime for Pokémon and Yu-Gi-Oh. I used to spend most of my time playing YGO with my little sister, cousins, and friends. My favorite decks were Blue-Eyes, Chaos Dragons, and Shaddolls. 2016 is when I got burnt out from TCG's, but what led me back into it was meeting friends who played Magic the Gathering. Now for the past 4 years I've been into TCG's again. Commander is the only format I play, and my favorite decks are Gishath and The Ur-Dragon which is also my magnum opus after almost 2 decades of deck building experience. I've made new friends because of my return to TCG's, and I was even watching the MtG stream with one. Thanks for being who you are. I'm glad I decided to see your debut live and it's nice to see you get into things I love and have fond memories of.

This is my magnum opus that took me literal years make with all the knowledge I gained from almost 2 decades of deck building. I've always wanted to show you it because I poured my heart and soul into this project.

end of a life always make me feel nostalgic to times past. things that ended but of which i have fond memories of. For me it was my time at Oakfield Festival. this was(sadly) a small Festival in northern Germany. It was organized by friends and steadily grew in size. each year my friends and i went there. It had a good atmosphere, even Parents with their kids joined. At some point i also started working there. setting things up the days prior handling the cashier. i was part of the Team and part of something big. it was a lot of fun and always a highlight of the summer for me. it is a nice memory for me and every so often a topic when talking with friends. listening to end of a life always reminds me of my time there.

Watching Calli being amazed at the modeling and painting parts of the Warhammer hobby reminded me of when I first started years back. It took me a good while to realize that there wasn't a set way to paint the figures, and the more and more I learned about how lenient the building and painting process was the more I became invested and the creative juices flowed. And with that, I began making lore for my cool minis too. Names, backstories, and why they look as they do. Thank you for bringing back such fun memories!

Seeing Calli play Master Duel for the first time gave me a lot of nostalgia for when I first got into Yu-Gi-Oh! back in middle school. By that time, I dove head first to a card shop being overwhelmed by how much went into the game that the anime never really seemed to explore. Much like Calli, it took a lot of time and reading my own cards to get better to the point where I still play to this day. That being said, around 4 years ago, a card was announced that bore a striking resemblance to Calli called Exosister Martha. Seeing the connection, I felt inspired to draw her in that monster's outfit as well as make the entire Exosister Deck. As of now, I continue to use this deck for Genesys, an alt format that really lets this deck shine. Congrats on the tournament wins and most importantly Happy 6th Anniversary Calli.

[Asura's Wrath]angriest man on earth meets the end (part 2 final)

The playthrough of Asura's Wrath reminded me of the intense emotions I experienced through out on my first time experiencing the story. From the undeserved betrayal at the start, to the accumulating loss. I had a lot of somber emotions throughout, sobbing on his first transformation, tearing up again by the fist bump and then sobbing harder at the very end of the story. Her own reaction to the fist bump for whatever reason brought up all the somber thoughts I had of the story that I had forgotten about asides the highs. Where it was all interwoven throughout the entirety of it under the guise of a wrathful father. A somber yet beautifully poetic story of a seemingly unending wrath. Going onto witnessing her experience something I hold in high regard for its engaging story telling and like it made me feel like I resonated as a fan just a bit more. Thank you Calliope Mori for being an influence in my life, helping me to dream even larger and aim for the best. Wishing you a wonderful anniversary of recollection, gratitude, and even more of your dreams coming true.

rip throat

This karaoke stream (now one of my favorites) reminded me of a moment I shared with my dad back in 2013. That year, the Call of Duty Zombies map "Origins" released, which had a badass opening cutscene where the main characters fight off zombies to "Shepherd of Fire" by Avenged Sevenfold. I remember my dad liking that band a lot, and when I heard the song come on while riding in his truck, I told him about how "This song plays in a game I like!" and started singing and air-guitaring along. While A7X wasn't on the setlist for the karaoke stream, the power with which I was singing along to "Monster" and "Animal I've Become" (other songs I remember him listening to that I enjoyed) brought me back to this moment of bonding and introspection into my growing music taste. Wishing you a happy 6th anniversary and more moments of fatherly bonding!

Wanted, Wasted

Whenever I hear Wanted, Wasted I'm transported back to my first time ever cosplaying as a Deadbeat skeleton at Connect the World in 2023. It's the song Calli sang at this concert, and it reminds me of when I stood next to her standee out in front of the venue, penlights in hand, while fans surrounded me chanting "DEADBEAT" "DEADBEAT" and taking pictures. I remember thinking that it was worth dressing up like this to show my dedication to Calli, to prove that there WERE people who showed up to this concert for HER. I've been cosplaying as a Deadbeat skeleton ever since, at every concert held in the US. I'm eternally grateful to Calli for giving us skeletons a place to call home, and for letting us love and support her as much as we do. Happy 6th anniversary, my kami oshi and inspiration. [PERSONA 3: RELOAD]the stream where Mori doesn't cry (FINALE PART 3)

Me and the deadbeats met Calli in 2020 where she listed Persona as one of her favourite games AND begged Atlus game company to be able to play the game, then finally in 2025 she was able to play Persona 4 Reload which was so nostalgic to me and many deadbeats! In the final stream finishing off the main story, once again Kimi no Kioku is playing.

But instead of listening to it alone during summer break at like 4am, it was with Calli and the deadbeats. Maybe it was the company, maybe it was the years I lived ever since my first play through; the narrative of the Persona 3 touched me much deeper and made both the ending and Kimi no Kioku MUCH MUCH more emotional, many a tears were shed that night. Happy Anniversary Mori Calliope! Me and the deadbeats will support you for the long run! You remind me to work hard, to find my place in this world, to cherish my friends and family, and more importantly, to be kind!

Memento

While I could ramble on about how the whole song felt nostalgic to me, I would say that the intro would be the clincher that was a call back for me. It takes me back to two memories that I still remember today very well. The first was me discovering what it was like drawing and falling in love with it, and at that point, it kind of became the center of my world. The 2nd was discovering an illustrator that captured me so hard that I found an ambition and goal that I wanted to do with my art. The intro lyrics reminded me of how I started and begun to love drawing and why I continue to draw today, which means a lot for me to keep on continuing. Thank you Calli for these past 6 years! As before, and even now, you still continue to inspire me and brighten my days! Happy Anniversary Calli!

To start, Happy Anniversary Calli! Although i only became an active fan within the year, you've definitely had a huge impact on me; Big ups and blessings to the journey ahead! One of my earliest memories that always sticks to me to this day was when i first picked up video games while i was just a little Dead Beat; similar to you, Crash Bandicoot was introduced to me by my mum, with the second game in the series (Cortex Strikes back) being my first ever video game, one which, along with the three mainline games, was something I'd play with my mum almost every day after school. Having listened to your own nostalgia trip with this same series had really reminded me of those cherished memories, and from that, perhaps, was the very first stop in the road which would eventually lead me to enjoying the wonders of the internet and, eventually, here as one of your Dead beats.

I've always been a huge fan since debut, but I've never really had the ability to go to any of the live concerts until recently at the Synchronize, and the all for one concerts in NYC in 2025, where I cosplayed as a deadbeat for all 3 events. I think it was this stream. Sadly, I didn't catch it live and only watched the VOD after I had started diving into Calli's content, listening to her music, and slowly falling in love with everything she created. Looking back, this was the moment I truly chose her as my kami-oshi. From the very beginning, I connected with her personality and the way she carried herself. Watching her older videos and joining her livestreams turned me from a casual viewer into a genuine fan. Chatting with fellow Deadbeats before and during streams, and seeing Calli interact with everyone, made me feel like I belonged. But it was these Pokémon streams that started it all. They reminded me of my childhood, playing Pokémon with friends and sharing every little moment together. Watching Calli and chatting with Deadbeats felt just like that, a group of friends enjoying the journey together. That's when I knew I'd always be cheering her on~ [MINECRAFT COLLAB]Reaper and Kusotori on a Mxrderous Quest! I hope?

It was the very first Minecraft stream and also a collab with Wawa, right during the Minecrafft renaissance. Seeing both playing minecraft (possibly for the very first time too) take me waaay back when I would have a LAN party with my friends. We would take turn switching place of the party every week, some days my friend would visit my house and other days we would bike to our another friend since we all live in a neighborhood. It was such simpler time back then which really reflected in this stream. Just 2 friends figuring out the game and surviving. I found this to be such a charming and comfy stream. Whenever Calli had a minecraft stream, I would also just turn on the game and play along in a solo world, because just seeing her playing sparked such joy that I almost forgot existed. She's my source of strength, and inspiration at my lowest. I found new friends, stepped out of my comfort, and for the very first time, passion and a reason to keep on fighting and not giving up. Thank you so much for everything Calli. My dream is to one day finally cheer for your concert live with the crowd.

When I started my own restaurant, I worked hard and truly believed I could make it a success. Unfortunately, things didn't go as planned, and I had to start over again. Thanks to the experience and skills I had gained, I was able to get back on my feet faster than expected. However, I didn't realize just how burnt out I had become. I kept moving forward, but somewhere along the way, I lost the excitement and passion I once had. That changed when I saw Mori Calliope perform "Overkill" at hololive 5th fes. "Capture the Moment." Hearing that song live brought back the feeling of giving my best to something I truly cared about. It made me realize that I hadn't lost my passion — I was simply exhausted. Since then, Calli's music has been something I return to whenever I need to recharge. It reminds me why I love creating things and gives me the energy to keep moving forward. Thank you, Calli, for helping me rediscover that spark. Congratulations on your 6th anniversary! Thank you for sharing your incredible music, stories, and inspiration with us over the past six years. Seeing Mori play Live-A-Live's rerelease was serendipity. This little game that I found on a forum somewhere, something I'd never heard of and had to go through translating just to even play it, had somehow found its way to her. It took me back, to patching that ROM, running into so many errors, and thinking to myself, 'why even have a patch if its a bad game?' It reminded me of persisting, never giving up. And then, loading it for the first time. The new items, especially the diary, reminded me of how much I laughed when I saw the original items for that chapter, and how I guffawed when I saw what they did. Even if it was changed, I still love how the powerups were straight up tequila and cigs. It reminded me of the thrill of facing my first HUGE boss, and by the skin of my teeth finishing that fight with double digit hp. It took only one chapter, but I knew I'd run into something special. Ever since, I've been the biggest fan of JRPGs, fantasy, and a sucker for time travel done epic.

Calli's 1st emo karaoke reminded me of being an emo kid growing up. Back in the day, there wasn't social media to connect you with similar people. So it really felt like you were the only one in the world feeling these emotions, and going through those struggles. But when you listened to an emo song, even if you were alone, it made you feel seen and less lonely. I was often afraid to show my negative emotions to others. But emo music showed me it's okay to be sad sometimes! It was the 1st time I had seen someone publicly perform some of these songs that were important to me while going through a rough period. Seeing Calli open up to the Dead Beats inspired me to find more courage in my life too! Even now I look back on it fondly. Thank you Calli! Happy anniversary!

The V in my username stands for Victory. It represents the number of Victories I've had at the end of each chapter in my life, with Victory 4 being the one I'm currently pursuing. Along the way, I've met and parted ways with a lot of people on both good and bad terms. Sometimes I find myself thinking about them and how it could've gone differently. These verses from End Of A Life are my thoughts put into words.

No use in trying to find friends
'Cause in the end nobody sticks around
You don't get to say, "I miss you", you don't get to be dismayed
You don't get to be emotional, feel blessed, you got it made
There's nothing left back there for me
Pretend it's the end of a made-up story
I've come a long way in my journey and I owe a bit of that to the kind words from a wise reaper. You taught me to fight through hard times and I intend to keep fighting to the next Victory. So with all that said, thank you for being you and happy anniversary. Here's to many more.

labbing with dead beats!!

When Calli was winning against all the Dead Beats that matched up before me, it reminded me of the time I was playing at a local tournament. There was this player who won 5-6 matches in a row. The amount of pressure to win was pretty heavy, especially with all the spectators watching. That's what it felt like when I played Calli, because even if it was just the Dead Beat members watching, I was praying I'd be the first one to win against the yet undefeated reaper in that stream. I did win, and as the lucky number 4 player too. Winning against Calli (and the ping) reminded me of that time, back when I didn't expect to win. That members stream hit that nostalgic fighting game moment for me. Thanks for the GGs and Happy Anniversary, Calli! May you have many more great anniversaries to come!

[ENigmatic Recollection]reaper's new goal is...THAT!!

RIPx is the reason I started watching Mori so every time i hear it, it makes me think of early Myth but I can't help but laugh at how much Mori cringes when she hears it lol. That song will always hold a special place in my heart because it's where it all truly started. I can't believe it's been 6 years already, like where has the time gone? Mori you have been my day one oshi, you've been a contestant in my life for 6 years and I hope that's the case for many more years to come. You have grown so much as performer and person in general, thank you for everything you do for HoloEN and all the fans! Happy 6 years Mori Calliope, big ups and all the love!

[Crash Bandicoot N. Sane Trilogy]
revisiting my first lov- g g g GAME SERIES!!

Calli's own passion/nostalgia about the Crash series reminded me of my own child days. Despite becoming an avid Nintendo fanboy in the long run, PlayStation 1 was a strong part of my childhood. Lots of fun memorable games played on this system like the Crash Bandicoot trilogy + CTR of course, but also the likes of Spyro, Ape Escape, Rayman, MediEvil, etc. But one of my most precious Christmas memories of that time was getting Klonoa: Door to Phantomile on PS1. To this day, I still consider it one of the most beautiful video games I've ever played in my life, and it pretty much defined what I love most about video games (And my knack for platform games in general). Calli's joy about a silly bandicoot brought me back to those forgotten innocent times I wish I could relive... Happy 6th Anniversary Calli! Thank you for all the joy & the nostalgia you're bringing to us!

[ASMR] CAT SOUNDS!
feat. Tutu and Ghostcat

Just hearin her so happy and uplifted after finally getin the pets she planed on having for so long, it reminded me of how I got my little devil. I lost my last cat suddenly and violently, I felt so sad I didnt think I should or could have taken in any other pet after her. But then almost a year later, for my brithday my friends surprised me with this littel tabby, she couldnt have been older than 2 months and they got her to cheer me up; and despite growing up with cats around the house my whole life, I'll never forget just how happy and gratefull I felt seein her walk around my room. Its been 5 years now, shes a grumpy looner that spends most of her time outside in the summer and only wants to get cuddly on her terms, but I wouldnt change her for the world. Im glad Calli could get her own furry balls of happyness in her life, with all the joys and troubles they bring. Happy Anniversary Calli, thanks for all the memories you've helped me made and remember, heres to many more to come enter, the VILLAIN of this tournament!!!!

Watching Calli play Yu-Gi-Oh! Master Duel reminded me of a time in my youth when I collected the cards, played the game, and watched the anime. I didn't always win matches or even follow all the rules (mostly because I didn't have a good understanding of them), but I still had fun regardless. One time I dueled against a family member, who summoned a Blue Eyes White Dragon onto the field while I summoned a Dark Magician. We had Starter Decks at the time, and I won by applying an attack boost to my Dark Magician and destroying the Blue Eyes. In hindsight, I probably didn't win, but we counted it as such back then. Again, not a good understanding of the rules at the time, but I still had fun. Thanks for the nostalgia, Calli! Happy 6th Anniversary! Here's to more!

Calli's message throughout End of a Life has meant a lot to me recently after having friends and family not show their support after obtaining my own success and goals. To see them change just because I have succeeded or because they do not agree with who I'm in a relationship with and because my beliefs don't match their own has made me reminisce on the old times with them when they didn't show judgement. It's a bit sad to look back on now, but I am still grateful for those memories. One of these moments was when I went to Round One and took a bunch of photos of the crane games they had there. Taking this photo almost 3 years ago before I became a fan of Mori is a bit funny to see that she was there in my life even back then. Her music helps me process a lot of the messy feelings I may have into something understandable to me. With the supportive friends and partner I have now, I'm able to look back at this time with a bittersweet smile rather than one of reluctance. Thank you Mori!

[KARAOKE] Singing...! With an Announcement!?

When Calli mentioned about her friend liked Adachi and they played P4 together, it reminded me of the time my friend from the university anime club got me into P4. We were watching P4 anime during the time and talked about how badass Yu was and he joked that I was like Yukiko. I couldn't play P4 because I didn't have a PS2 or PS3 at the time. He gave me his old PS2 console and P4 as a present. A few months later, I bought P4G and we both talked about the game and from then on, we remained friends and fans of Persona series. I still keep in contact with my friend and we are both excited for Persona 4 Revival. Happy Anniversary Calli! Thank you for all the great memories! You have come a long way from the P3 Atlus begging stream, to streaming Persona 3 Reload and singing Persona songs! I hope that one day, you will be in a Persona game either as a vocalist and/or a voice actor! Johnny Yong Bosch (EN VA for Adachi and Yu) was a guest for a local con and I got him to sign the game!

I would like to thank Calli for sharing her stories of friendship in the Unpacking stream and her recent Summer vacation days. I wish her nothing but the best of moments. What helped me big time in my life is that, when I first started my job. My very first full time job, it is a fly in fly out rotation job at a mine site. And it was my first time being away from my family & friends. What I am grateful for is Calli's music that helped me cope through a new part of my life. And her work ethic of doing the best and enduring through hardships. I felt like I wasn't alone in something hard like being in a new environment. Plus the fanbase she has is amazing. I made so much friends with DeadBeats over the years. They also help me when things are down and rough. So thank you DeadBeat friends, and Thank you Calli for everything like music and fun streams. This is my physical copy of Pokémon Platinum, my first Pokémon game and my favorite one.

Watching you doing Nuzlocke lite challenge in Brilliant Diamond brought me back a lot of memories about it, and a special event! When the 12th Pokémon movie was released in my country, there was an event at the theaters where they distributed Arceus. So I asked my dad if we could go to see the movie together. Even though he didn't know much about Pokémon and wasn't really into it, he still went to the theater with me. Since then, Arceus has become my favorite Pokémon. singing and leaving no record of it!!

So many of the songs from MCR, Panic at the Disco!, and Limp Bizkit in the karaoke leading up to the Let's Just Crash MV premiere sent me right back to playing Tony Hawk's American Wasteland with my... let's just say strange soundtrack choice. It's a bit of a walk, but that set triggers the memory for me. I had gone through the soundtrack of American Wasteland and muted every track except for Holiday by Green Day, because I loved that song at the time, so it would just play over and over on loop when I played the game. Every time it would loop, I'd get excited again. It's kind of like how you feel about Disenchanted from MCR. One of those songs you know so well that you just feel it in your bones. As it turns out, the game also had tracks from MCR, Fall Out Boy, and Taking Back Sunday. I appreciated those later. Happy 6th Anniversary and here's to many more!

Treats For You Dead Beats!

This whole cooking stream felt like I was cooking with my sister. All the scuffs, the banter, the random interruptions by Ghost Rider, they all reminded me of when my sister and I used to live with our parents. Nothing's changed, we still talk daily, and meet up when we can, but once every couple of years is different than living with my favorite person in the world. Especially with being so far from home, I guess I just feel very alone, and this stream made me feel like I was home again. I love Calli's antics, and miss these cooking streams, even with all the scuff that came with it because the hilarious antics more than made up for it. I wish Calli did more of them along with her usual content, because I loved the Valentine's one. So, to Calli, thank you for being there through thick and thin, and I loved supporting you for 6 years, and I wish you many more anniversaries! Happy 6th anniversary!

DMing for Myth way back when reminds me of when I first played a tabletop campaign, and we spent hours creating characters and just learning the basics. I wanted to be the tank for the party so someone suggested Fighter. In the first session we went with a classic cave diving quest and I remember in the first round those damn murloks rolled high and i basically got one shot. party cleaned up and technically I tanked for them, but that's also when I decided to go all in on developing my character and started learning everything about the game which made the rest of the campaign even more fun. Ever since I've been into watching and playing all kinds of TTRPGs so I was super excited for Mythbreakers and the other streams later on. Hi Calli, I hope my message finds you well, I am not super active Deadbeat per se, since I've been busy with irl stuff pretty much, sorry for not being the most attending Deadbeat. That one stream when Mori was playing the recorder and harmonica definitely brought back memories of me back in high school when I was trying to be a public nuisance, playing the harmonica and recorder while crab walking around the halls like a maniac which kind of backfired and made people like me and in their words "seem less scary now" I didn't know this, but apparently I was the only kid to ever receive detention in that school (story for another time). This is my copy of Shrek 2 for the PS2. This was one of the first games I've ever played. I was in the hospital as a kid and the room had a PS2 and I just remember playing this a ton with my mom. Later that year my parents got me and my brother our own PS2 and some of the games we got were Shrek 2 and Shrek Super Slam. It was also probably one of the only games I actually ever got my mom to play with me so it holds a special place in my heart. Calli’s rapper outfit in the New Underworld Order concert reminded me of when I was a university student. High School Confusion & “Through the Blue”

“Through the Blue” holds every day of my high school life. I’m from China, where school pressure is brutal. Middle school was fine, but high school hit hard. My rankings dropped, and I felt lost. That’s when I found Calli—and this song. Unlike her rap tracks, it’s soft and weary. It reminded me of endless Monday mornings—trying hard but getting nowhere. I missed my old energy, wanting to “fly to the sky.” Instead, I felt stuck in “Wish I could be a little stronger.” Calli’s gentle voice made it all real. Many Dead Beats feel the same. Sharing this with you all, united by her, means the world to me. Maybe it’s a love song. To me, it’s a letter to my past self. I hope we all make it through the blue—together.

Thank you to the community and organizers. Dead Beats forever.

Happy 6th Anniversary Mori! While I've had experiences with Pokémon beforehand such as the anime and various console games like: Stadium, Colosseum, and XD Gale of Darkness; The original Pokémon Diamond was the first main generation title I ever had to pleasure to own for myself. I still remember the memory well: My grades in school were very good, so my parents were willing to get the game for me at Target. Little me was very hyped while waiting in line, holding that case and carry pouch. I started playing it immediately in the car drive back home. And boy oh boy did I played the heck of this game. Mori playing Brilliant Diamond brought back many of those fond memories and stories little me made back in the day, along with the many fun adventures I had connecting and battling with friends and family members. Happy 6th Anniversary, Calli! Whenever my college friends and I threw a party, we always ended up singing karaoke together. One of my go-to songs was your "End of a Life." My friends would cheer and clap as I sang, especially when I nailed the rap part flawlessly. I don't consider myself a great singer, but I always gave my best when performing "End of a Life" and even taught myself how to sing it well. My friends often told me how cool it was that I could sing the entire song. Unfortunately, it's been several years since we last hung out. Adult life got in the way, and we gradually drifted apart. I think I'm beginning to understand "End of a Life" more deeply as time passes. Regardless of how my friendships have changed, I still cherish the memories of singing that song with my friends at parties. Every time I listen to it, those memories come flooding back. Mori Calliope 2nd Concert "GriMoire"

I remember landing a brand-new job that marked significant career growth around the time of Grimoire, and I knew for sure one of the things I wanted to spend my first paycheck on was a streaming ticket for Grimoire. My favourite part of the concert was DONMAI and the new outfit reveal - it actually became my favourite Calli song because of that. I would have characterized my fandom of Hololive as being more of a casual/lurker before Grimoire, but watching Grimoire was definitely what pushed me to want to attend more Hololive panels at conventions, enter Meet & Greet lotteries, and attend concerts live, which led me to attending my first concert IRL for the Vancouver SYNCHRONIZE date where Calli performed Future Island. I hope to see your 3rd SoloLive in-person someday! I'll always associate Calli's huge milestone of being the first Hololive member to perform a sololive at a US venue with my own career milestone. When Calli is the DM, or story teller? for a tabletop RPG group session, reminds me of the time when I tried to play as a DM for the first time during high school with my friends. I made some homebrew DND monsters for them to fight and everything. I only did it once cause I was really bad at it, I was a nervous wreck, stuttered a lot of the time, and was really embarrassed, but it was really fun. seeing her take charge of all the chaos from other players during the campaign reminded me of how fun these are, and that I kind of wish I continued being the DM regardless of how scuffed it was.

[Mad Father]Ends are Sad. LET'S FINISH THIS.

Calli playing Mad Father reminded me back in 2017 where I started playing the game before finishing high school. At the time when I first started playing the game, it was a whole new experience and introduction to the rpg maker genre. This specific stream reminded me of that time as one of the endings was about saying goodbyes and leaving the people you care about, reminding me of graduating and saying farewells to former friends as we went off to different chapters in life. As high school ended, I went on to college, used discord and met first online friends, figured out my future and played other rpg maker games, as one way to describe my next chapter. Rewatching that ending and hearing the music brought me back those old memories I keep close, even if it is bittersweet, it reminds me of the good times in the past. I'm glad Calli streamed it as one of her first games, making me remember the good days of my past, but use it for my present and future after finally finishing college.

When I saw you start to play this game, it immediately took me back to 2010/2011! Back then the game had just come out, and I had bought it a copy relatively early. Me and my little brother then proceeded to cover the windows with blankets and turned off the lights so we could play the game in absolute darkness. This probably wasn't the best idea... It took us 2-3 days to get through the game because we kept getting too scared to continue. About a year later, my mom took me, my brother, and my friend to a cabin by a lake for a vacation. Once we got there, the three of us looked at each other and immediately started talking about Alan Wake. We then proceeded to go out into the woods at night, and sprint at one another, from just outside the flashlights range, to evoke that same fear of the shadows chasing you in game. Watching you these past 6 years, I've gotten to re-live so many moments, and experience new ones! Thanks for the memories, because they have been so sweet!

[READING MY OLD DIARIES?!]why am I doing this.

I remember Calli reading her diary and realizing that we have a lot more in common than I thought including writing (Calli her dairy and me working on my novel) and our shared love of pokemon. Working on my stories during high school was a lot of fun. I'm still slowing working toward my dream of becoming a published author and witnessing the talents like Calli who made their dreams a reality inspired me to continue my work even when I get stuck. I'm basing a character off of Calli in my latest work and I hope that one day could have Calli it once it's published. Happy anniversary Calli you've come so far these past six years and there's still so much in store I know you can do whatever you set your passion towards. Keep pushing forward as the deadbeats rally behind you.

end of a life, Live Again

Whenever I think of Calli, I always think of the songs she released back in the day, such as "end of a life" and "live again". I resonated deeply with those songs, because it reminded me that I was given a second chance to live again, and the journey I've been on, and it help me motivate to keep on living. I also love her interactions with Gigi, it's... so god damn funny

[Pokémon FireRed] just getting a bit nostalgic

Seeing Calli play these games brought back so many childhood Pokémon memories, especially from my elementary days. I never played the old games on a console. A classmate installed an emulator and ROMs on my ancient touchscreen Samsung phone, and honestly, I only tried it because I wanted to be part of their circle XD. But once I played FireRed, I was hooked—staying up late just to play. Emerald did the same. After playing titles like White, I wanted more, so I discovered the anime. I watched Pokémon Advanced, Diamond & Pearl (where I found my favorite Pokémon, Lucario), Black & White, and eventually XY/XYZ. XY/XYZ was the peak of my Pokémon obsession. Pokémon Y was also my first physical Pokémon game, which I played on a Pikachu-themed 3DS I got as a birthday gift after pestering my dad XD. I even became a big Ash x Serena fan and looked forward to every weekly episode. I'm not as updated with Pokémon now, but I'll always be a fan.

Your Mori

Been a Musicbeat for most my time, Your Mori has a special place in my heart, because that was the EP that got me hooked, especially the grim reaper is a live streamer, honestly I didn't know what half the song meant, but later middle school me loved it. Well thanks to Mori I found a passion in learning the Japanese Language and can actually speak and understand a bit now xd Somehow, I don't know how Mori does it, every one of her release is exactly what I need in that moment of my life. Scuffed Up age was there when I was honestly struggling to find my way in life, Black sheep was there when I really overwhelmed and led me to receive a National award at the end of 2024, I'm currently studying as a missionary in training, and during my time in west Africa we had an unprecedented drought, it was when Seeing Stars dropped and really gave me the strength to "don't look back move forward Happy anniversary Mori! Please Continue doing what you love because that's what we love! ❤️"

[R.E.P.O.] absorbing mori calliope's braincells

I really enjoy playing REPO, not just because I like pushing my friends off the edge in the trolley, but because I love how horror games bring people closer together in their fight for survival, like showing that new player who's just starting out, the way Gigi did with Calli. But the moment that really stood out for me in that stream was when Gigi told Calli she'd look after her like her own baby when she died or rather when she turned into a little girl which is something I used to do as well. After that stream, I'd always remember it whenever I did it, and I even started wearing orange like Gigi, and that friend who kept dying had to wear pink as a punishment, hehe. Happy anniversary, Calli!

[RESIDENT EVIL 2]Evil That is Resident (MARATHON)

The very first Calli stream I watched live was a late night Resident Evil 2 stream, and something about watching it late at night brought me back to nostalgic times when I was younger when I'd play games on chunky CRT TVs with corded controllers, staying up late playing my favorite games without a care in the world. Lots of Calli streams give me that same nostalgic feeling! Happy anniversary Calli, thank you for being so awesome and for all the great times!! I can't wait to see what you do next and I'm rooting for you every step of the way!

[THE HENRY STICKMIN COLLECTION]what is this game i wonder

It's hard for me to pick a particular one but I enjoyed watching you play this game because it reminds me of old internet, being that it originally came from Newgrounds. It's packed with old references to 2000s meme culture and flash culture, which is something I grew up around, and it was nice to experience those things with you. I hope to make many more nostalgic memories with you. I love you. Happy anniversary!

When End Of A Life came out and i started listening to it, i feel so many emotions inside of me that made resonate with it on a deeper level. When i was living in spain i lived in a small town with lots of beautiful lights and people, had some friends that we have played alot together after some time we all drifted apart but i will always remember those days even if some of them are painfull but beautiful memories. i felt what calli wanted to convey with end of a life and i had similar stuff happen to me and im glad that calli found her way to the stars! Thank You so much calli and i mean it! Happy Anniversary calli to many years more my Kami Oshi!!

[HOLOEN TTRPG]Character Creation! The World of Darkness Awaits Our Hunters... 8]

Mythbreakers was super nostalgic for me! After getting into TTRPGs during college, I tried my hand at DMing to introduce my friends back home to it too. Watching Calli wrangle her gen-mates reminded me how fun it is to run short campaigns for new players. The mix of serious and silly characters, the blend of different comfort levels with RP, the desire to foster their budding enthusiasm but also teach them consequences for being a murder-hobo. It's magical to see the out-of-the-box ideas they come up with to try to make the most of their limited resources, whether it's Gura using her pants to get out of a monster well or my friend casting levitate on a camel to help the party regroup after getting lost in a sandstorm xD Happy 6th anniversary, Calli! Thank you for all the wonderful memories through the years! I hope hololive continues to be a place you feel at home, a playground for your creativity, and a whetstone for your innumerable talents! Nat 20s or 1s, donmail! Keep on rolling!!

[ELDEN RING]guts vs. malenia (part 7) #calliolive

Happy Anniversary Calli!

You facing off against Malenia for a second time (this time as Guts) reminded me of revisiting some of my old favorite games I used to struggle on. Back in the day, I remember trying to work my way through all of the Borderlands 2 raid bosses, and barely being able to complete one of them. Granted, I was going at them solo, very underleveled and undergeared, and not really knowing how any of the fight mechanics worked. Years later, playing through the game again and actually knowing what I was doing, I had a much easier time getting through all of them once I got the gamer muscle memory going. It was satisfying, knowing how much I used to struggle on them. Thanks for all the fun memories you've help us Dead Beats make these past 6 years, here's to many more years of making more!

[READING MY OLD DIARIES?!]why am I doing this.

When Calli read entries from her diary on stream, it really brought back a lot of the same feelings and experiences I had as a kid. I was also super into anime characters and drew them in a random school notebooks, it made me reflect on those memories in a way where I can laugh about them now instead of feeling embarrassed. Growing up, Fullmetal Alchemist was one of the first series I really latched onto, and I was just as obsessed with Edward Elric as Calli was (although I didn't write letters to him the way she did... her dedication was definitely much stronger than mine!) I love that you're able to share your silly sides with all of us. Thank you for always being yourself and I want to keep cheering you on wherever you go. You're the best, Calli, and happy 6th anniversary!

[DRAWTSUDAN]let's just relax today (also-[READING MY OLD DIARIES?!]
why am I doing this)

Listening to Calli's stories from her adventurous first anime conventions, and specifically Anime Expo, resonated with me since I too journeyed to AX once upon a time to be surrounded by like-minded people, during a time where being an anime fan was taboo or too niche. It was thanks to that that I met friends through the AMV community, honed my editing skills to compete, and eventually used those skills to make clips and Shorts for my oshi Mori Calliope! Now this convention is home to many memories of Hololive concerts, Calli sponsorships & collabs, and knowing it was special to Mori as well elevates it even further that someone this cool took a journey in the same road I did. Happy 6th Anniversary Calli!

Christmas Wish #Shorts

Calli speaking about how she wanted Kingdom hearts for Christmas as a kid but no Playstation 2 to play it reminded me of when my Dad knew I wanted Pokémon for Game-boy and he saved up what money he could and bought it for me...however he thought it was for my Snes and I had to wait a month for him to save up again to get me a Game-boy color to play it!

Thanks for all these years Calli, may the future be bright not just for you but all the deadbeats as well!! Happy Anniversary!

[PERSONA 3: RELOAD]the stream where Mori doesn't cry (FINALE PART 3)

I played Persona 3 Reload after I graduated when I was kind of lost in life. When I completed the game, I ended up bawling my eyes out. Persona 3 ended up being one of my favourite games of all time. It taught me to live my life to the fullest without any regrets and offer an act of kindness to others. Since then the phrase, "Memento Mori" stuck with me and I will always cherish my memory of completing Persona 3. Watching Calli finished playing Persona 3 Reload and crying with the deadbeats reminding me of myself when I completed the game. Now 'Death' is my oshi. Despite watching Hololive since the beginning, I have only become a fan of Mori Calliope last year because she's so hardworking, funny, mature and persevering despite many hardships. Happy 6th Anniversary, Mori Calliope! I'm glad to have you as my oshi. No matter where or what you are doing, I'll keep cheering for you!

[Dragon ball z kakarot] majin buu arc second half

Happy 6th anniversary calli! Cannot believe it has been 6 years since you came in with the other myth ladies and stamped yourselves as integral cogs to what we know of vtubing today. You continue to push the envelope and make your big dreams come true and i can't wait to see what the future holds for all of us deadbeats as your journey continues. For my memory, i chose when you played dragon ball z: kakarot. As someone who grew up on the dragon ball series, it was very nice to see someone come in with a fresh perspective of the series. It brought me back to when i was a kid and me and my older brother would watch the series on toonami every night. We would freak out at the same things you did and would jump and cheer and clap whenever something awesome happened. My favorite reaction to your streams was when vegito first appears against buu. Your "YEEEEESS LET'S GOOOO!" when he shows up brought some tears to my eyes reminding me of those old days. Thank you for the nostalgia!

Lose-Lose Days

Lose-Lose Days reminded me of my days I spent with my childhood friends. We chatted about something nonsense, yapped for a whole day and just being silly. I used to believe that I would never find people who I could truly call them "Best friends" or "Companions", because I thought people would always come and go, and never stay by your side for a really long time or even your whole life. That's why Lose-Lose Days really reminded me of those whimsical moments I shared with my friends. Although we are living in different places now, we still text each other sometimes & send support. I love the friendship between Calli and the Myth girls, thanks for creating this lovely song! It brought me back so much precious memories of my friends! Calli has inspired me a lot and brought joy and excitement into my boring life. Her creativity and passion absolutely make me wanna become a deadbeat forever! These past 6 years have been amazing, cant wait to spend more years with our beloved grim reaper!
