Foreword

A Message from HE Dominic Williams British Ambassador to Cambodia

As a parent myself, I know the most important decisions we all make, are those concerning our children's future. I particularly feel the weight of decisions connected with my children's schooling, because ensuring our children receive a good education gives them the best chance of a successful and prosperous future.

What is a good education? Naturally enough, I would argue that a British education has all the right ingredients.

British curricula draw on centuries of experience, while making effective use of the latest technology and the latest advances in teaching methodology. British schools focus not only on first-class academics, but also develop the critical thinking and soft skills that are essential for success, and encourage interests outside of the classroom, that help children grow up balanced and happy. And British schools are part of an education eco-system used worldwide, making the education they offer readily understood and transferrable between countries and opening up pathways into the world's best universities.

Of course, each child is different, each family is different and there are many factors parents must take into account. Which school best supports your child to maintain or develop abilities in their mother tongue? Which school offers the best additional learning support for your children's particular needs? Which school offers the right extra-curricular programme that supports your children's wider passions? Which school offers the most tailored pathway into your children's next steps, whether that is higher education in Cambodia or overseas or the world of work?

I am proud that BritCham Cambodia has therefore approached the task of putting together this Good Schools Guide with parents at the front of their mind. This Guide aims to ensure parents have ready access to the best information on leading international schools in Cambodia, to aid their own independent comparison and decision-making.

Thank you to the team at BritCham for all the hard work that has gone into this Guide. I wish parents happy reading, and hope many of you will entrust your children to one of the excellent British schools contained within.

Quality, Trust, and Choice: Why This Schools Guide Matters

Over more than a decade working in education in Cambodia, I have been involved across schools, universities, and public policy, from early work supporting children to re-engage with K12 education to more recent leadership in higher education. My own education in the UK, culminating in a PhD from the University of Glasgow, has shaped a practical understanding of how quality, safeguarding, progression, and accountability translate into real educational outcomes.

Cambodia today is at an important point in its education journey. A young population, growing international engagement, and rapid technological change have expanded schooling options, particularly within international standard education. With this growth comes complexity. Parents and students must navigate differences in standards, safeguarding, pathways, and how effectively schools prepare learners for further study and life after school.

This International Schools Guide is intended as a practical response to these challenges. It does not rank schools or endorse institutions. Instead, it provides transparent benchmarks for quality, clarity around recognised standards and affiliations, and visibility of safeguarding commitments. Presented in a consistent and accessible way, the Guide supports informed choice and encourages a clearer understanding of quality in education. British education standards and safeguarding approaches are referenced because they are widely recognised and have been developed to support quality, accountability, and learner wellbeing. The intention is not to replicate systems wholesale, but to consider how established principles can be adapted to local realities and aligned with Cambodia's education priorities.

The BritCham Education Committee plays a facilitative role in this work, bringing together schools, universities, education providers, and partners to share perspectives and support initiatives that strengthen quality and trust across the education ecosystem. The Committee does not regulate or accredit institutions. Its role is to convene and contribute through platforms such as this Guide.

As Chair of the Education Committee, my hope is that this Guide helps shift the conversation from marketing to meaning, and from isolated choices to a clearer understanding of education pathways. It is offered as a practical contribution to informed choice, trust, and quality in education.

Building UK–Cambodia Relations, One Classroom at a Time

In Cambodia, the British Chamber of Commerce recently marked its 30th anniversary, underscoring its evolution from a largely social network into a structured, outward-facing professional business chamber. While networking has always been central to chamber life, policy engagement was historically informal and often channelled through broader international platforms.

That is now changing.

With strong support from the UK Department for Business and Trade, the British Embassy in Cambodia and His Majesty's Ambassador, BritCham is adopting a more proactive role in representing member interests. This shift is underpinned by the establishment of structured sector committees, designed to enhance focus, credibility and meaningful engagement.

Education is the first sector committee to be established.

At a time of rapid expansion in Cambodia's international education sector, clarity, standards and trusted reference points matter more than ever. Aligned with the UK International Education Strategy and its ambition to grow education exports beyond USD $50 billion by 2030, this guide supports UK-linked academic organisations and provides a practical reference for schools, parents, investors and policymakers. Demand for 'brand UK' education, valued for its globally recognised quality and assurance, continues to gather momentum in Cambodia.

Translating member insight into policy dialogue.

The BritCham Education Committee provides a formal platform to convene stakeholders, align priorities and translate member insight into policy dialogue. Reporting to the BritCham Board, it supports engagement with the British Embassy and Cambodian counterparts on safeguarding, quality standards, qualification recognition and skills development, reinforcing education as both a strategic export and a cornerstone of the UK–Cambodia relationship.

We hope you find this guide a useful and trusted reference.

Cambodia International Schools Safeguarding Association

Cambodia International Schools Safeguarding Association

Toby Waterson

Chair

Cambodia International Schools Safeguarding Association

Safeguarding is a fundamental responsibility in international education, particularly as schools operate in competitive yet collaborative environments. While institutions strive to demonstrate quality and attract families, they also work together through shared initiatives such as sports fixtures and professional networks. Safeguarding is one of the most important areas where collaboration strengthens outcomes for children. When schools share learning, discuss risks, and develop consistent standards, protection for students becomes more effective and sustainable.

In international schools, safeguarding carries particular significance. These schools serve mobile families, diverse cultures, and students transitioning between educational systems. Parents entrust schools not only with academic progress but also with their children's wellbeing. As institutions often regarded as benchmarks of quality, international schools have a duty to model strong safeguarding practices that reflect global standards while remaining sensitive to local context.

The growth of digital learning has added further complexity. Students now learn, communicate, and socialise online beyond school campuses. While technology enhances learning opportunities, it also introduces risks such as cyberbullying, online exploitation, and privacy concerns. Effective safeguarding must therefore address both physical and digital environments. This requires clear policies, regular staff training, student education on online safety, accountable leadership, and strong collaboration between schools and families. A proactive home-school partnership is essential, particularly in navigating digital risks.

The Cambodia International School Safeguarding Association (CISSA) was established to strengthen safeguarding practice across the country's international schools. By building a professional safeguarding network, CISSA enables school leaders, counsellors, and safeguarding leads to share knowledge, identify risks early, and support one another in what can often be challenging work. CISSA promotes internationally aligned safeguarding standards adapted to the Cambodian context, supports professional training and development, and encourages preventive approaches rather than reactive responses.

Supported by partners including BritCham Cambodia, British Embassy in Cambodia, and Child Protection Unit Cambodia, CISSA reflects a shared commitment to raising safeguarding standards. As Cambodia's international education sector grows, safeguarding will remain a central benchmark of quality. When students feel safe and supported, they are better positioned to thrive both in school and beyond.

Meet Our Leadership

Headmaster, Bromsgrove School UK

Michael Punt

“Hello and welcome. My name is Michael Punt, and I am the Headmaster of Bromsgrove School in the United Kingdom. As the 42nd Headmaster in our long history, I am proud to lead one of the oldest schools in the UK, founded in 1553. The opening of Bromsgrove International School Cambodia in Phnom Penh is a tremendously exciting development, and I have no doubt that the school will offer some of the finest educational facilities in Cambodia.

At Bromsgrove Cambodia, as with all our schools, we will work closely with Ms Barson, the Founding Head, and her team. I hope I may have the opportunity to meet you at Bromsgrove Cambodia in the near future, and you will always be very welcome to visit Bromsgrove UK.” Thank you.

Founding Head of School

Philippa Barson

Greetings from Bromsgrove School Cambodia.

I am delighted to welcome you to our community, where we combine the academic strength and values of our UK partner, Bromsgrove School UK, with the warmth, flexibility and vision of a forward-thinking, pupil-centred international school.

We take great pride in our close collaboration with colleagues and in our shared governance, ensuring that we remain true to our values while responding to the needs of our local and international families. We are also deeply committed to safeguarding and pupil wellbeing, with clear practices in place that are informed by both UK standards and international best practice.

What truly sets us apart, however, is the care we give to every aspect of school life. Our co-curricular programme provides children with opportunities to grow beyond the classroom, whether through service learning, fieldwork or the exploration of new interests. We offer tailored support and a range of wellbeing services, ensuring that individual needs are recognised and nurtured. As one of our Year 4 pupils shared, “I really feel cared for in my school. It’s not like my old school. Bromsgrove cares about the little things too.”

Looking ahead, our ambition is to be recognised as one of the leading British international schools in the region, offering a nurturing environment in which pupils can thrive and achieve their very best, whether they go on to a global university or follow their own unique pathway. In an age of rapid technological change, we embrace innovation while valuing the guidance of experienced teachers, always keeping diversity, inclusion and respect at the heart of all that we do.

The King's School, Vattanacville

Welcome to Our Wonderful Learning Community!

The King's School Vattanacville is a premium British international school located in central Phnom Penh and the third global campus of The King's School Canterbury, the oldest British school in the world with over 1,400 years of educational heritage. We deliver the same academic standards, values, and educational ethos as our founding school in England, offering families in Cambodia access to an authentic British education.

As the only school in Cambodia accredited by COBIS, we uphold exceptional international standards in safeguarding, governance, and quality assurance. Small class sizes and a distinctive team-teaching approach, with English and Khmer teachers working together in every classroom, ensure pupils develop strong academic foundations while confidently learning in both languages within a safe, world class learning environment.

The King's School, Vattanacville

About us

The King's School Vattanacville proudly represents one of the world's oldest and most respected educational institutions, with a heritage spanning over 1,400 years. As the third global campus of our founding school in England, we deliver the same educational values, academic expectations, and commitment to character development, offering families in Cambodia an authentic British school experience of exceptional quality.

We follow the British National Curriculum from Pre-Nursery to Year 7, with senior provision, including GCSEs and A Levels, that develop year by year as cohorts progress. This through-school structure ensures academic continuity and coherence, while maintaining the rigour and expectations associated with leading British schools.

A defining feature of the school is our team-teaching model, embedded throughout the curriculum and the school day. English and Khmer teachers work as equal partners in every classroom, ensuring pupils have access to learning, ideas, and academic thinking in both languages. This approach strengthens comprehension, confidence, and long-term academic outcomes while maintaining strong cultural and linguistic grounding.

Small class sizes allow staff to know pupils exceptionally well, enabling precise teaching, effective support, and high levels of academic challenge.

The King's School, Vattanacville

Meet Our Leadership

Carrie Cameron
Principal

The King's School, Vattanacville was established as a passion-driven initiative within the Vattanac Group to bring an authentic and rigorous British education to Cambodia. When the governors reviewed local education options, they recognised that families seeking a genuine British pathway leading to IGCSEs and A Levels often had to send their children overseas. The school was founded on the belief that Cambodian families deserved access to exceptional British education at home-focused not on rapid expansion, but on quality, values, and long-term impact.

As the third global campus of The King's School Canterbury, the oldest British school in the world, the school upholds the same ethos, academic standards, and character education as its founding institution in England. Its mission is to shape future leaders in Cambodia through academic rigour, strong moral character, and respect for local language and culture.

A key educational challenge the school sought to address is the tendency in many English-medium international schools for English to overshadow a child's home language. While academic English is essential, Cambodian pupils must also remain fluent and literate in Khmer. The school's distinctive team-teaching model places an English teacher and a Khmer teacher together in every classroom. Both professionals plan, teach, and assess collaboratively, ensuring pupils deeply understand concepts rather than memorising content in a second language. This strengthens academic rigour while preserving language, identity, and cultural grounding.

The school is currently the only one in Cambodia accredited by the Council of British International Schools (COBIS), providing external validation of its standards in safeguarding, governance, and teaching quality. Teachers hold PGCEs, QTS, or equivalent qualifications, ensuring strong professional expertise.

As a deliberately boutique school in central Phnom Penh, it offers personalised support, strong pastoral care, and a focused academic environment. Its long-term vision is to grow sustainably into a full-through school leading to GCSEs and A Levels, while maintaining its culture of excellence and close family relationships.

This distinctive blend ensures students receive a rigorous British-standard education while remaining grounded in national identity and regional relevance. High standards are maintained through consistent, rigorous professional development to ensure teachers embody recommended Cambridge attributes, supported by carefully selected learning resources aligned with international benchmarks. Safeguarding is deeply embedded in daily practice through five core values that emphasise safety, security, hygiene, discipline, morality, confidence, communication, and strong learning outcomes; these values are reinforced across staff training, student engagement, and the wider school community.

Beyond academics, the school prepares students for life through character education, Cambridge learner attributes, and the Cambridge Global Perspectives program, equipping them with critical thinking, collaboration, and global awareness skills essential for national and international success. Additional learning support is provided by specialist staff and a dedicated Student Management Team who work closely with families, alongside teachers who extend support beyond classroom responsibilities to ensure holistic student growth. Looking ahead five to ten years, ISBB's new campus will serve as the major educational and community hub in Western Cambodia potentially expanding into a boarding school welcoming students from diverse regions.

In response to the rise of artificial intelligence, the school integrates 21st-century skills, strengthens online learning and assessment systems, and seeks ongoing AI-focused training to ensure responsible and effective implementation. Diversity, equity, and inclusion are embedded through a multinational faculty representing nine countries and a collaborative ethos built around shared values of thinking, doing, succeeding, sharing, and striving toward a brighter future together.
