

Lola's bedroom

cosy, comfy,
full of character

Lola's bedroom

cosy, comfy,
full of character

Lola's
bedroom

cosy, comfy,
full of character

design kids space

Lola's bedroom
cosy, comfy,
full
of character

Shop The Look

ROOM ELEMENTS

Baha muslin bed house canopy

WALLART

ACCESSORISE

Lola

Sand Linen Floor Mat

Shabby Chic Teepee Tent

Pillows

Moodboard items

The accessories featured are practical and stylish. They're also easy to layer, so you can swap, rotate or add without overwhelming the space.

You may follow the links to each product at designhomespace.com to recreate the look - click here

Or, simply use this as inspiration to find pieces that match your style and story.

If you need my support, send me a message to:
hello@designhomespace.com

Moodboard Instructions in 5 steps

(but only if you're not too busy running the world)

1. Look at the walls first — it's the biggest (and could be the dearest) part.

Start with a base colour: creamy neutrals or soft pinks work beautifully. Then choose—a few scattered wall stickers or a full wallpaper feature wall?

If you're going for wallpaper, measure your space first and ensure you can order the right size. It often sets the entire tone — and is often your biggest investment.

2. The main question: playroom, bedroom, or all-in-one?

This mood board shows a playful teepee tent and a cosy house bed with a bed curtains. But your room might be a sleeping space, a shared room, or a play zone. Maybe it's got a house bed, a bunk, a co-sleeper. What matters is asking: What does this room need to be for your child? Build from there.

3. The room is their universe.

This space is more than just four walls — it's your child's entire world. It's where stories are invented, where forts are built, where playdates turn into wild adventures, and quiet afternoons become unforgettable. A teepee tent becomes a secret reading nook. A house bed isn't just for sleeping — it's a castle, a hiding spot, a stage. Pillows are not just decorations but ingredients for cosy dens and spontaneous snuggling. Create a soft, safe, and beautiful playground that lets them explore, rest, and grow — all in one place. Because to your child, this isn't just a room. It's their universe. And they should love being in it.

4. The little (allegedly optional) things.

Layering the floor and styling the bed is like giving your child the best kind of nourishment. Soft shapes, odd textures, pillows shaped like leaves or hearts or flowers, they don't just decorate; they invite. Invite to imagine, to rest, to invent stories. That's where the play begins.

5. No, it's not anybody's room — it's your child's.

If it feels right to you, it belongs. Garland over the bed? Family photo by the shelf? Pinecones collected on a walk? Yes. This room doesn't have to look like a magazine. It needs to feel like home. That's when the magic really happens.

Lola's bedroom

www.designhomespace.com

