EDITORIAL

IT is with a feeling of unusual gaiety that we begin this Editorial, for we realise that never again will we be compelled to wear a gloomy prophetic look that witnesses to the violent torrent of words pent up within our breast—words, alas! that flee away like stars before the dawn, immediately we begin to write. There is another reason too. As we write, the Tram Strike has just ended, and those horrible nightmares in which we seem to be stranded in a tall city, walking, always walking, along baking, sunlit pavements grow fewer. Unfortunately the strike never prevented any of us from attending school. It merely relieved us of superfluous fat and gave us back that "school-girl complexion," since it obliged us to walk in to school.

This term is unusually short, yet it is remarkable how many things are crowded into it. Cricket holds the major position; then come Athletics, Swimming and Tennis; finally, at the very end of term we hold our Annual Sports, an event always eagerly awaited. Apart from sports, we have to face examinations which are so near now that we expect some one to come to school soon declaring that he has seen various ominous signs and portents forbidding him to enter for his examination. Examinations, however, have swift feet. They overtake the laggard and sweep along with them the conscientious objectors to their ways. They cannot be avoided: our sympathies are with those who have to pour forth their knowledge to stony examiners at the end of this term.

Among the list of improvements, we must mention that there is now at Belgrave Square a concrete cricket pitch at which the Seniors practise. It has proved to be a very successful innovation.

In September the School gains most of its new boys; but it is at the end of this term that most boys leave. Their feelings are mixed, gladness to be free from the routine and occasional dullness of school life vying with sorrow to leave a place where most of them have spent six years or more, and which has played as integral a part in their lives as they have in its. Henceforth their paths are in different directions, some to the University, some to business, perhaps some abroad.

SCHOOL NOTES

School re-opened on the 29th April, with the more or less punctual attendance of everyone.

On 16th May, Mr. S. C. Chen, Headmaster of Trinity College, Foochow, gave the School a lecture in which he outlined the work done in the school of which he is Head, and gave us a description of the modern Chinese boy.

During the term, Mr. Rae, of the Student Christian Movement, gave the Seniors a short address on the Movement and the work it does in University life.

We are pleased to congratulate the Rev. G. S. Nowlan, our school catechist, on his appointment as Rector to St. Matthias's Parish; also Mr. Eric May, who produced "Don Quixote" for us last year, on his winning the Silver Medal for Tenor Solo at the Feis; and, lastly, M. C. Fowler on winning the Silver Medal for Greek Testament in the Synod Examination.

The School was given a holiday, as usual, on the 30th May, being Ascension Thursday.

The School played the Masters in Cricket on Friday, 24th May; the result was a draw. The Old Boys also played us and won. A fuller account of these two matches will be found elsewhere.

On Jubilee Day, 6th May, the School heard over the wireless the Royal procession to Saint Paul's. The reception was good and all were pleased to have heard it.

The Co. Dublin Schools' Sports have come and gone, but without any added glory to us.

The Library continues its unobtrusive but helpful work under the able guidance of Mr. Chillingworth. This year we are indebted to W. L. Tansley for a splendid gift of thirteen books, and also to D. J. Featherstone and J. L. Worrall.

GERMAN.

The High School has again been presented with one of the two awards given by the German Government to the Department of Education to be assigned to the two schools which have had the best record for teaching German during the past School Year. The award consists of a gift of valuable books and a painting which has been hung in the Board Room.

Owing to the late start of the summer term, it is too early yet to say whether this year's team is an improvement on last year's. The batting has greatly improved but the bowling is not quite up to standard. The value of good fielding is still greatly underestimated by the majority of the team and consequently neglected.

The S.C.T. has played two league matches, winning one and losing the other. We defeated Sandford Park School, but lost to King's Hospital.

The Junior Cup Team is very young and should do well next season. In the first round of the cup we defeated Kingstown Grammar School by over 120 runs. In this match Motyer played a very good innings of 96 not out. In the second round, however, we were defeated by King's Hospital.

The Second XI and "Under 14" have done very well and won all their matches.

In our match with the Old Boys we were defeated by a narrow margin. In this match the School did very well against a strong attack. The annual match with the staff resulted in a draw on time.

The following is a table of the matches played to date:—

	Played	Won	Lost	Drawn
Senior XI	5	2	2	1
2nd XI	4	4	0	0
Junior XI	4	1	2	1
"Under 14"	5	5	0	0

SWIMMING NOTES

Captain ... G. I. McCabe

Vice-Captain ... W. H. Houston

As Swimming has only just begun, it is hard to say what our teams will do this year. We commenced on Monday, 1st April, and have the Iveagh Baths on Monday from 3.30 until 4 and on Friday from 3.30 until 4.15; we have also the services of Sergt. H. F. Case as trainer. We hope to form a Polo Team again this year, and, with the enthusiasm and hard training, it will be easy to make up for what we have lost by discontinuing that part of the swimming. The Juniors this year show definite promise and are really enthusiastic. The Seniors, judging from the form they have shown even at this early date, should stand a good chance in the Intermediate Squad.

TENNIS NOTES

Our tennis team this year has certainly improved since last year as the results of our matches have shown. We have played two matches, the first against Presentation College, Bray, and the second against St. Mary's College, Rathmines, in the Leinster Schools' Cup, and, although we were beaten both times, the individual matches were very close.

BOXING NOTES

Captain ... W. R. Bryans

Vice-Captain ... M. S. C. Rooney

Trainer—J. P. Nelson.

This season has been the most successful since the boxing classes began. We were successful for the first time in our annual tourna-

HIGH SCHOOL "ELLERKER CUP" TEAM, 1934-5.

A. S. BURROWS.

There has been a very large entry for our own tournament which is being played at Belgrave Square. It might be added that the court at Belgrave Square has improved greatly since it was relaid last winter, and we hope that on account of this more interest will be taken in tennis than there has been during the last few years.

ment with St. Andrew's College, for the Ellerker Cup. The most outstanding beginners this season were D. A. Orr, P. R. Owen, and T. E. P. Darling; all three won every fight they had this season. The Boxing Club wishes to convey its thanks to its Trainer, J. P. Nelson, who was very popular with the team he trained. We also desire to thank the members of the Staff who took an interest in the Club. The following is an account of the tournament:—

HIGH SCHOOL v. ST. ANDREW'S.

T. E. P. Darling (H.S.) beat J. Hemmingway.
10st. 7lbs.

This was a closely contested bout in which Darling gained the decision by superior boxing and by some well-placed left hooks in the last round. Hemmingway was definitely superior at close quarters.

G. S. Prince (H.S.) lost to O. Seymour (St. A.).
8st. 7lbs.

Seymour used his height and reach with marked advantage. Prince, however, fought very pluckily, landing some heavy punches that told on his opponent in the last round.

J. D. Smyth (H.S.) beat C. Coulter (St. A.).
8st.

Smyth was by far the better man. Coulter was unfortunate in breaking his index finger in the last day's training.

W. B. Smyth (H.S.) beat E. Gillespie (St. A.).

Smyth, boxing coolly, repelled a strong attack; his hard punches to the face and his superior lasting power gave him a comfortable win.

P. R. Owen (H.S.) beat W. Parke (St. A.).
7st. 8lbs.

W. G. Crockett (H.S.) beat C. Wilson (St. A.).
7st.

D. A. Orr (H.S.) beat J. Lockhart (St. A.).
6st.

A. S. Burrowes (H.S.) lost to R. Mitchell (St. A.).
5st. 7lbs.

G. T. Stephens (H.S.) lost to J. Hays (St. A.).
4st. 7lbs.

In this tournament St. Andrew's were unfortunately unable to fix a fight for our Captain or Vice-Captain.

A GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE IN NEW SOUTH WALES

THE plague I am describing is the second this year, and is the result of the hatching of the eggs laid by the grasshoppers of the first plague. When one has seen the damage a small plague can do, one no longer wonders why Pharoah wished Moses to get out of Egypt.

One might naturally ask "But can these pests not be controlled?" The answer is "No." Though there are many and effective means of exterminating them before they take to the wing, still it calls for universal action, a thing almost as impossible to achieve in Australia as it is in Ireland.

To be able to grasp the methods used to destroy them, one must first understand something of the life and habits of the "hopper." When he is hatched from the egg he is only a minute specimen of animal life, daily growing bigger and stronger. He is born without wings and moves from one blade of grass to the next, seeking his food by hopping with his powerful hind legs. He and his kind live thus for six weeks, always congregated in great batches. Then they begin to fly and the fun begins. They fly in bunches of a couple of millions or so, for a distance of nearly five miles a day, devouring everything green they meet. There are two cases on record where they have eaten green window blinds and curtains. When one realises that a few thousand grasshoppers can eat a paddock of a hundred acres till it is bare in a few days, one can see the amount of harm that untold millions of them will do, especially as more and more are taking to the wing behind them, forming a continuous stream that lasts for weeks on end.

Every one of the methods for their extermination must be tried before they begin to fly. One way is to plough them back into the land when they are just hatched. This method is not very effective as the plough is bound to turn up more eggs as yet unhatched. Another method is to drag burning sacks across them. This also is not very effective. About the best—and the most expensive—way to cope with them is to poison them with a mixture of bran, treacle and arsenite of soda. This concoction is laid in the path of the approaching "hoppers" at sundown, when they have taken up their position for the night and have plenty of spare time to digest it. This also is useless once they have grown wings. The ideal way to get rid of them is by aeroplane, because out towards the centre of Australia where there is nothing for miles and miles but sand, there will always be millions of acres of eggs unknown to man. Still, whatever we do, the hoppers still hop out from the West.

A VISIT TO THE GODS

WE must first dispel the optimism of the reader in that our tale is not to be a startling revelation of the next world, but simply the reminiscences of a visit to the gallery in the Gaiety. This little fact has to be explained, because once we overheard an individual saying, after his first visit to the Gods, that the appellation is extremely "antonymous," or, at least, words to that effect.

A visit to the gallery in the Gaiety is impressive. It is indeed an experience not to be had elsewhere in Dublin. We feel sure of that, for we have heard tell that one seldom escapes alive from the gallery in the Olympia or the Queens, and dead men tell no tales. We personally have had quite a number of such experiences, and the last time we were at the Gods in the Gaiety was with the Carl Rosa, when La Traviata was on the bill. Having found to our cost a few nights before that the culture of the Dublin public this season was at an astonishingly high premium, we went early, and, as a reward for our pains, secured a place in the queue just opposite the shoemaker's shop, from whence, day, being in exceptionally good spirits, we commenced by giving ear to the various musicians (may the Muses spare our slander of the name!) The competition in this trade is now enormous, and it is no uncommon treat to have three parties performing at one time, at various positions along the queue, thus affording to the chosen few in the centre a riot of harmony which could not be obtained even at Queen's Hall on Wagner night. Banjo-players were folwith the aid of a ladder and a strong telescope, one is able to catch an occasional glimpse of the gallery door. However, we quoted the High School motto, and settled down to our hour's wait.

Being queue-ites of many hours' standing, we have now acquired a system (known as Deus adjuvat eos qui se adjuvent) by which we beguile the time. In expedition of this system to-lowed by young men who sang through their noses with their fingers in their ears, the famous personage who rattles a couple of spoons with entrancing din, and a gentleman who kindly afforded us ten minutes' agony on the flute.

When our musical requirements had been amply satiated, we spent another while in the pleasant occupation estimating the height of the shop on the other side, where they keep oysters.

judging it by the time the raindrops took to fall from the roof of the house to the street. We had got the thirty-two feet per second part all right, but somehow our timing never seemed to agree, and estimates varied from about sixty feet to approaching two hundred. Some day we shall call out the fire brigade and settle the heated disputes once for all. However, by now the lamps under the arcade outside the theatre were lit, and soon we were scrambling, puffing, and shoving up that dreadful staircase to reach at last the vertiginous heights from which it is our ambition some day to cast down that terrible little woman who continually rushes down to a front seat when the lights go down. This woman is familiar to all galleryites, and we always look expectantly for that well-timed dash from the top of the stairs to the seat which she has spied out below. Some day we shall catch her and . . . well, one more familiar land-mark of Dublin will be gone.

To-day we secured our seat close by the little cubby-hole which denotes the presence of the magicians who, in their wonderful way, frequently turn the hero's nose into a deep purple, and give the heroine the character of a chameleon. We do not yet forget the night when we, in our inexperience, sat behind this box, and spent most of the night dodging from side to side in vain endeavour to escape the large heads of the sleek-haired magicians in front. A peculiar phenomenon about this box is the abominable bell which buzzes with a loudness and consistency which has been known to drive otherwise respectable gallery-ites quite insane. Suggestions have been put forward that it is rung periodically in order to keep the over-worked magicians awake, but it is our fixed belief that these magicians are firm misanthropists and ring it themselves in order to drive us unfortunates into complete insanity.

However, on this night they did not succeed in their foul purpose, or, at least, it is not yet evident if they did. Indeed, the whole evening was singularly free from annoyance. After the first act we got rid of the pair of boney knees which had succeeded in driving our spine an inch further towards our chest, and when they had been removed and the umbrella of our next-door neighbour, the end of which had nearly found a permanent resting place in our foot, comfort was ours. During the intervals we retired for the usual highly intellectual criticism in the foyer. For the benefit of the uninitiated, to find this rendezvous of Dublin's select, one should proceed straight along the passage off which is the bar, descend the stone steps, stop at the first landing on the way down which has a window, lean against the wall, and look as intelligent as possible. You are now in the foyer.

The last act was as usual the scene of our martyrdom. There we sat, feeling the wooden bench to become harder and harder beneath us (when the lights go down it really turns to stone), and shifting from side to side, all the while trying to give the impression to our neighbours that we were really enjoying ourselves. At one time we breathed with gratitude to our friend, Euripides, "Alas, for the seats on which we sit," but someone behind cried out in pain, and threatened to shoot at sight if we said it again. However, there is always an end to everything, and soon we were on our feet, making enthusiasm an excuse for necessity, and performing the usual heathen ritual of loudly clapping the hands and stamping the feet before departing. Down the steps, outside, and we were at last able to breathe. We sidled quickly along to the next exit and tried to look as if we were coming out of the dress circle.

DEATHS

ORR (1925-29).—June 2, 1935, at 30 Ashdale road, Terenure, Dublin, A. Leonard Orr, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Orr (Spicers), aged 21 years.

MRS. MARY THOMPSON.

Old Boys will be very sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Thompson, of whom they have many grateful memories. She was a fitting partner for our Headmaster, a gentle, gracious figure whose presence brightened the life of the School and of many wider circles. She had an intimate knowledge of the School and of the boys, past and present; her friendship which we enjoyed when we were members of the Lower School grew stronger with the years, long after our names had disappeared from the list of the Roll Call.

Her death will be regretted by many in Dublin, and especially by all who are interested in music. She was herself a fine musician and loved to gather around her in 40 Harcourt Street those who shared her tastes.

On behalf of the Old Boys we tender to our old Headmaster, whose name we love and honour, our deepest sympathies in his great sorrow.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Editor, THE ERASMIAN.

Dear Sir,—The possessor of several "Club" ties no doubt often wishes he could wear them all at the same time and so avoid any wrangling which, unknown to us, may occur as they hang tidily side by side or are thrown in a heap in the drawer; this, however, in accordance with the present fashions is not practicable, but there is no one which I pick out with greater delight than that of the "Old Boys' Union."

The April, 1935, ERASMIAN is for several reasons of more than usual interest to me. It is undoubtedly a matter for very real regret that the Debating Society has died; many people indeed have been known to fall asleep as a result of too much talk, but I fear this sleep of death has arisen from the directly opposite reason. Few things are more useful to people in life than that of being able to stand up and clearly and in good grammar express what is in their minds. It is indeed a tragedy to hear of the number of Britishers who are quite unable to "say a few words" and often, when they do speak, to hear appallingly bad grammar; it is the more annoying when one hears, as I have often done, Americans and even non-English speaking foreigners speak in English, clearly and with good grammar. One often finds that even the three most elementary and cardinal principles of public speaking, namely, to stand up, speak up, and shut up, seem in many cases never to have been taught. Let us hope that your newly formed branch of the League of Nations will produce—as its original has done—plenty of talk.

This is perhaps the place for me to offer—if I may presume to do so—my congratulations to J. D. Smyth, the author of "A Night under the Stars." It is a real pleasure to read an article so free of grammatical errors, and were it not for the fact that it was written under the horrors of as it says "Examination Conditions" he would have had time to read it over and suitably delete the rather frequent mention of the first person singular.

The longer I live in England the more I realise the truth of the saying "The best English is spoken in Dublin." This, of course, has no reference to accent, but means grammatically the best.

Your note about the tram and bus strike tells me how times have changed, there were in my day no buses and the (horse) trams made no difference, for none of us even if we had pennies, spent them on such luxury; often when late—on my 25 minutes walk from Rathgar—did I wish I had a penny to take the tram, and many boys walked from "the other side of Dublin." I wonder where my friend, the elder Weir—who used to come literally "out of Mountjoy"—is now.

Many thanks to H. McHoul for the interesting account of his canoe holiday in Germany; does he know that there is a British canoe made called the "Folbot," and a Canoe Section of the Camping Club of Great Britain and Ireland? Being a sailing man since the days when I used to sail in the "water wags" at Kingstown, it has often surprised me that one never—while sailing on the Norfolk Broads—sees practically any canoeing and I am wondering whether one who remembers the school being given a holiday to celebrate George Wilkins getting his T.C.D. Fellowship, would find a canoe "too exciting"!

Far away from East Anglia as the Old Boys' Dinner is, it always makes my mouth water; but most readers know what the Irish Sea can be like in Winter time and as one would have to get home again without delay it seems a pity to risk the waste of good food.

Of the masters mentioned by Mr. F. W. Saunders in his letter, William Wilkins and W. S. Cooney are the only two I knew, and, indeed, when train travelling, on being passed by another, it always brings to my mind the sums the latter used to make up himself, and then set us, in which, given the speed and length of each train, you had to calculate the number of seconds they occupied in passing.

This letter also brings back to memory the Morris brothers (Welshmen) who were masters and with whom I "boarded" for a time. One was "W.B." and the other "H.P." Poor "W.B." I believe was afterwards killed in an earthquake in California or somewhere. However I well remember with some difficulty persuading "W.B." to come to the Gaiety Theatre with me, as he had never in his life been to a theatre! These were, of course, "Victorian" days when it was to some extent questionable as to whether it was proper to be seen inside a theatre. Egerton—a son of the man who died in the Royal Theatre fire—was a classmate of mine in the class in which his elder brother (I imagine the Charlie mentioned in the letter) was a master. I well remember having to “prompt” him (a procedure no doubt unknown to the present generation of schoolboys or done by telepathy) when his brother asked him the story of Columbus and the egg.
