EDITORIAL

AS all our readers will have perceived from the last issue, the cover and dimensions of the ERASMIAN have again undergone a change; and we are quite certain that they will agree that the appearance, printing, and general get-up of the last issue were far superior to the one immediately preceding. We hope that our optimism is not too great in imagining that the reading-matter will also undergo a change—for the better.

While perusing the periodicals of other schools the chief fact that has struck us—and it takes something pretty startling to penetrate to our intelligence—is that the number of contributions from pupils of the school is far higher than in our own case, and that whereas our own contributions are drawn almost entirely from the ranks of Sixth Form, in other cases there are sometimes as many as half a dozen forms from which contributions have been received. We are fully aware that in many cases these school magazines are in reality controlled by members of the staff, and that contributions are demanded as though they were school-exercises, but it is impossible that such should be the case with all the school magazines with which we are familiar. We would rather go without contributions than see them procured by such a method. We must carry on our own magazine largely by our own efforts, but in the present state of affairs it is well-nigh impossible to run it without outside help in the way of contributions. Surely, nearly every boy has at some time or another written or tried to write something for his own amusement; and we suspect that there are many boys among the Junior forms who would willingly contribute were it not for fear of their attempt being scoffed and jeered at by their companions. We cannot be expected to ask everyone personally for contributions, but we can and do expect contributions from anybody who has any literary ability. We can assure any contributors who lack confidence in themselves that if their contributions are not deemed worthy of publication they will be returned without having been seen by anybody but ourselves.

We are very glad to hear that there will be an effort made next term to revive the School Debating Society, which has not been functioning now for quite a while. We understand that debates will probably be held only once a month, so that there is little danger of anyone complaining that it will interfere with other activities. When the society ceased to function a while ago its numbers were almost entirely—if not altogether composed of Six-

Formers, but there is no reason why this should be so next term. A lively debate is a source of great amusement, and in addition it often takes a good deal of self-control to speak boldly before an audience, whom you know well will probably have a few cutting remarks to make after the debate has finished.

And now, as this is our last editorial, we bid you farewell in the hope that you will be able to forgive all our shortcomings when you remember that we have been trying to do our best for you.

Yours truly,

THE EDITOR.

SCHOOL NOTES

SCHOOL re-opened on Tuesday, April 10th at 9.15 a.m. We were very much disappointed to see everybody back again, looking the same as before.

The Iveagh Baths are now being hired by the School on Friday afternoons from 3.30 to 4.15 p.m. and not on Thursday afternoons from 3.30 to 4 p.m. as formerly. The half-hour on Monday from 3.30 to 4 p.m. still remains unchanged.

The Swimming Club have temporarily abandoned their drill in methods of life-saving. This is a great pity as we were fervently hoping that something might go wrong when they came to practise in the water, so that we might have a few sensational reports of drowning accidents with which to liven up our next number.

We are indebted to Mr. Wilson for a fine new set of hurdles. All we require now is a few hurdlers.

The School Sports will take place at Lansdowne Road on Wednesday, June 27th at 1.30 p.m. (13 hrs. 30 for the benefit of Continental listeners).

The Masters have very sportingly agreed to raise a cricket eleven to play the school. If we beat them, we hope that they won't ask us to meet them some afternoon on the golf course. Anything, of course, would be preferable to the intellectual reunion held daily (Sundays excepted) in the Clock-room at 3 o'clock.

The Cricket season has been very disappointing so far. All the windows of the houses in Belgrave

CRICKET CLUB

Captain		G. W. KEEGAN
Vice-Capt.		A. D. MASON
Hon. Sec.		C. L. KEEGAN

THERE has been a definite improvement in the standard of cricket this season. Eight members of last year's senior team are still with us, forming the nucleus of a sound, if not brilliant all-round team. The batting of all is greatly improved and five members of the 1st XI have averages higher than last year's best. Our bowlers are the best we have had for a considerable time, and the success of the 1st XI so far is mainly due to their efforts. The standard of fielding is, however, by no means equal to that of the batting or bowling. Schoolboys are inclined to underestimate the value of fielding and consequently neglect it. A little keenness in this direction would make a real improvement.

The S.C.T. has played three league matches, winning two and losing one. We defeated Mountjoy School and Sandford Park School, but lost to Masonic on their ground.

The Junior Cup team is young and inexperienced, and should do well next season. In the first round of the Cup our Juniors defeated Presentation College, Bray, by an innings, but were defeated by C.U.S., whom they met in the second round.

The "Under 14" is a very keen team and is doing well.

In a match with the Old Boys, who fielded a weaker team than usual the School were victorious. We hope to meet them again in June. This year a match has been arranged between the School and the Staff, and we notice that some of the Staff have already been putting in practice at the nets. We have no doubt but that the attendance at this match will break all records.

SWIMMING NOTES

Captain, P. R. PURCELL. Vice-Captain, D. H.
MCNEILL. Hon. Sec., D. C. EWEN.

SINCE the beginning of the season we have had the services of Mr. H. F. Case as coach, and we are glad to report a marked improvement in the standard of swimming of seniors and juniors alike.
This is very satisfactory, as several new swimming events have been introduced this season by the Schools Section of the Leinster Branch of I.A.S.A.
The list of events confined to schoolboys now reads:—Junior, Intermediate, and Senior Championship; Junior, Intermediate, and Senior Squadron Championship for Schools, and Junior, Intermediate, and Senior Diving Championship.

The age limits are as follows:—Junior, under 15 on the 1st of August; Intermediate, under 17 on the 1st of August; Senior, under 19 on the 1st of August.

We ask all boys to concentrate on training during the summer months, when they will have the advantage of swimming out of doors.

Many boys have become members of Pembroke
S.C., and these will be able to compete in the boys' races of that club in Blackrock Baths.

The School Gala will be held at Iveagh Baths on October 4th.

THE SCHOOL LIBRARY

The Library continues to flourish under the able guidance of Mr. Chillingworth.

The following have presented books:—B. S. R.
Blennerhassett (two books), R. F. Jackson, V. Baker and N. Orgel (one book each), Mr. J. T. Drennan,
B.L., "Cæsar's Conquest of Gaul," by T. Rice
Holmes.

McNEILL, D. H.

Co. DUBLIN SCHOOLS' SPORTS.—High Jump Champion, 5 ft. 4 ins., new record; Half-mile Champion, 2 mins. 8 secs., new record.

ALL-IRELAND SCHOOLS' SPORTS.—Mile Champion, 5 mins. 2 secs., new record; Half-mile Champion.

ATHLETIC CLUB

Captain—D. H. McNEILL.

WITHIN recent years Athletics have slowly but surely gained a prominent place in school activities, and "The High School" has produced since 1930 many athletes who have obtained the highest honours in County Dublin and All-Ireland Championships. This year we have a distance runner in our Captain, D. H. McNeill, who is considered by experts to be capable of really great things when he "fills out" and gains experience.

The annual sports this year will probably produce a very high standard in the War Memorial Cup Competition as most of last year's senior athletes are still in School. The Junior Cup Competition is more open than for several past years. At a meeting of the Sports Committee it was decided that in the Senior Cup no competitor should be allowed to enter for more than five events. This rule is in direct accordance with the general trend of modern athletics, and it will undoubtedly wipe out the risk of even one boy overstraining himself. Also it will induce boys to select those events for which they are best suited. As a result we hope to see the general improvement in Athletics continued.

We opened the season early this year with a contest against St. Columba's, at Rathfarnham, on Tuesday, 27th March. Training had been light, as the team was picked on past reputations, and rendered a very good account, as we won by six events to five. We won all the senior events:—100 yards, 220 yards, 880 yards, long jump, high jump and the relay. On the 100 yards Chillingworth showed splendid form, returning 10 4-5 secs, with A. E. G. Moore close up for second place. The half-mile was won by McNeill, the high jump by McNeill, and Lewis created a surprise by winning the long jump.

In the County Dublin Schools' Championships our relay team was just beaten into second place by Terenure College. In this event Chillingworth, Moore and McNeill ran very well, and Shaw, who came in at the last moment as sub., ran his lap exceptionally well. It was very unfortunate that Ewen was out of the junior shot through injury, as he was fourth in this event last year, and he would probably have been placed this year. In the senior high jump McNeill did very well, clearing 5ft. 4in. for second place. In the half-mile McNeill created consternation by returning 2 mins. 8 secs.—a new record, beating the existing record by 8 1-5 secs.

At the All-Ireland Championships McNeill again proved what a remarkable distance runner he is. Here he was competing against the best schoolboy athletes of Ireland and in the half mile he caught the favourite in the straight and ran out his race in stout-hearted fashion to win in 2 min. 10 secs. In the mile he won "just as he liked" and set up the remarkable figures of 5 min. 2 secs.—yet another record. This performance of McNeill's—wins in the "half" and "mile"—was referred to by the Press as "one of the two outstanding double events of the day."

There is every reason to look forward to our Sports with anticipations of an excellent meeting.

We have now—thanks to Mr. Wilson—a complete set of proper collapsible hurdles of the correct height for schoolboys. It is hoped that even more boys than before will compete at the Sports and give support to what was for many years the Cinderella of school activities.

TENNIS NOTES

Captain—A. D. MASON. Vice-Capt.—J. C. LONG.

THE tennis court at Belgrave Square has been levelled during the winter and wire netting has been put around it so that there is more inducement for boys to play at the Square than previously. In spite of this the attendance has been on the low side; a state of affairs accounted for by the fact that most of those who are enthusiastic tennis players belong to outside clubs and prefer to play there.

The entries for the tournament number 76, which must surely be a record. When the playing of the ties commences there is no doubt but that the attendance will vastly improve.

A hard court was hired at the beginning of the season for the prospective tennis team, as the Court at the Square was not yet fit for play, and the interschools' competition was close at hand. This competition, previously a knock-out cup, has been changed to a league with two divisions. The school tennis team has been very weak this year, failing to register a single success. However, this is not quite so bad as it seems as most of the team are on the young side and promise to do much better next year.

We are very grateful for the gift of a Tennis Court Marker which has been presented to us by the Rev. John Tobias and the Select Vestry of Rathmines Church.

WE had a disappointing finish to our season this year, as we were again defeated in our Annual Contest with St. Andrew's College, this time by five bouts to three. The contest took place in the Trinity College Gymnasium on Wednesday, March 28th. We were rather unlucky in being without the services of R. W. Mason and J. C. Long, two hit wildly when he did get within range, and although he got in a few effective punches, he wasted much precious energy. Lockhart showed fine judgment in using his left, and won a fairly close contest on his merits. Smyth will have to learn to hit straight and avoid swinging his blows.

W. B. Smyth (H.S.) lost to F. Mitchell (St. A.).

This was probably the most exciting and evenly-fought contest of the evening, both combatants hitting out in fine style. Mitchell, who appeared of our best boxers; but we do not grudge our opponents a splendidly won victory. The bouts in nearly all cases were well fought out, both teams showing that they had been properly trained. Results:—

6st. 7lbs.

J. Smyth (H.S.) lost to Lockhart (St. A.).

Smyth fought pluckily, but his opponent's superior reach was too much for him. He was inclined to the stronger, had superior powers of endurance and was evidently superior in the last round of a very close contest. Smyth started well by hitting hard with his left, but in the last round he was perceptibly fatigued and his punching had lost much of its sting. His opponent scored well by taking advantage of his carelessness in guarding himself adequately. Smyth, who is almost a novice to

Boxing, will do a lot better when he learns more about footwork.

8 st.

G. Prince (H.S.) lost to McConnell (St. A.).

This was another very close bout in which the decision might easily have gone the other way. Both combatants were evenly matched in height and reach. Prince started aggressively, but his opponent's left lead followed immediately by a sharp right won him many points. Prince continued to make good use of his left, but McConnell's harder hitting just won him a fight in which both combatants fought hard to the final gong. Prince, like Smyth, could also improve his footwork with advantage.

9st.

W. Bryans (H.S.) lost to Polson (St. A.).

This was not quite so close a contest as the two immediately preceding. Polson, making use of a slight advantage in height and reach, scored well with a quick left lead to the face. Bryans opened by attacking and had his opponent on the ropes more than once. He directed his attack chiefly to his opponent's body, but as he was apt to swing his blows a little, and to leave himself unguarded in doing so; his opponent was enabled on more than one occasion to score fairly easily. Some of Bryan's punches, however, reached their mark, and proved decidedly effective, but in the last round Polson was lasting better and was able to take on the role of attacker.

9st. 7lbs.

M. Rooney (H.S.) defeated Curtis (St. A.).

This fight was easy for Rooney, as his opponent was obviously a novice, and showed himself handicapped by lack of experience. In fact, he could probably have ended the fight within the allotted time had he chosen to do so. His footwork was good and his hitting seemed to have plenty of weight behind it, but it could have been quicker and cleaner. Curtis fought pluckily, but was kept upon the defensive all the time.

10st.

G. W. Keegan (H.S.) defeated Shrago (St. A.).

Shrago spoiled this fight to a large extent by the "rush-and-hold" tactics which he adopted to get within his opponent's reach, which was longer than his own, and for which he was repeatedly cautioned by the referee. Keegan, however, was not disturbed and showed a fine knowledge of boxing. His right hand follow-up after a left lead was very effective, and was chiefly instrumental in winning him the fight fairly decisively.

D. McNeill (H.S.) (11st.) lost to W. Houston (St. A.) (12st.).

This fight had to be stopped after the end of the first round as McNeill was being badly beaten by a stronger and heavier opponent, who knew how to make full use of his advantage in weight. McNeill had a slight advantage in reach, but this was very little use against the bustling tactics of his opponent.

ELEMENTARY

The master was most eloquent,
His lectures were a bore.
And often his big class of boys
Would sit and softly snore.

Said he one day : "Now tell me, boys,
What is the mighty force
That makes this world go round and round,
And so controls its course?"

"What is the thing that makes this life
On earth at all worth while;
That makes the dulllest face relax
Into a cheery smile?"

"This was a puzzler," thought the boys,
"By gosh, what does he mean?"
Then one of them got up and cried,
"Fourth Upper Magazine!"

[Taken from the Fourth Upper Magazine with grateful acknowledgments.]

S.O.S.

"Will Lionel Nathaniel Monster, last heard of in the vicinity of Loch Ness, Scotland, please come at once to Bray (Ireland's Bognor Regis), where his father, Public Interest, is lying dangerously ill?"

Hearing the above SOS on his portable waterproof wireless, Monster got out his tricycle and rode to the coast. Only waiting to have his picture taken by two reporters from the Crown and Anchor, he donned his Glasgow Guarantee swimming suit (your money refunded in the event of your being drowned) and plunged into the Irish Sea.

Using a fast Japanese crawl stroke, he rapidly made his way to the south, stopping for a short while en route to shave with a broken propeller blade which he had salvaged from the bottom.

At last he saw the familiar headland crowned with buildings which reminded him of Dyak villages he had seen in his wanderings. He unswallowed his portable raft and lay on it in a graceful parabola, scanning the water-front with his binoculars.

It was then that he realized that there was no need for him. Public Interest had revived. Packing up his belongings, he turned on his back and slowly swam away, ruminating on the ingenuity of humans. They had started a Grand Prix on the promenade.

LOUGH BRAY

JUST hurry along a heather path by the side of the babbling stream and all of a sudden you will be confronted with a gleaming, motionless lake. There she lies without a ripple, seeing and hearing all that goes on around her, yet seeming not to, ceaselessly lapping and slapping up at the rocks on her banks and sighing as though reluctant to leave their company. Half of her is covered with bright glaring heat from the sun, and half in dreary shadow. On her left side towers a butting cliff rasping, eroding brooks leap in a frenzy to reach the lake.

Meanwhile the surface of the lake is every now and then being disturbed by ever-widening circles, merging and tipping against each other—a fisher's paradise. Advance but a little around the left bank of the lake and a charming chalêt on the opposite side, sympathising in its greenness with the pines around it, hides shyly behind its barrier of trees, its appeal enhanced by the wide stretch of glistening water before it. Behind it rises the cliff to complete the faerie dream.

dappled in brown and gray, heather and rocks, rearing its bold proud crest skywards, blotting all further view as though jealous to reserve all attention for itself. On her right rises a gentler slope of refreshing green, bathed in golden sunshine. Right around from the cliff to the green bank there runs a rim, down from which a steep declivity falls to the shores, and down which in winter, raging

Now the sky became overcast. Big blue-black clouds flow over the rim and fill the sky around. The surface of the lake becomes uniformly sombre. The cliff behind grows blue and a gray mist drifts down upon the lough. The wind whips up and rushes pell-mell around a bend, bearing down upon the water like an outraged Fury. The instant it touches the lough gentle wavelets begin to flow towards the bank, increasing in size until they would do credit to a river in flood. On the crest of each wave lies a line of foam which is gradually driven shorewards until the bank is lined with boiling, bubbling spume. The blue cliff, overspread with drifting mist, the chalêt becoming visible and invisible alternately through the scudding fluffs of the moist clouds, the wavelets leaping under the guidance of the wind to crash noisily on the shore, complete a picture rarely to be seen. Then suddenly the wind ceases to antic and harass the wave-wearied lake and rain begins to pelt down in impetuous sheets. It beats down on the lough, making writhing circles like a hundred thousand fish all trying to leap out of the water at the same time. It is only a cantankerous five-minute shower, though it is sufficient to clear the sky, and shortly after all is restored to normal.

The cliff is again tinted in dun and green; the blue sky again lies serenely passive above the encircling rim, and again the lough grows calm and abates its frenzied battle with the shore, ceasing to moan around the bases of the rocks which lie scattered along the bank like so many sheep in a meadow. Now too, looking in the opposite direction, out towards the blue sea, the volcano-like cone of the Big Sugar Loaf begins to appear, sharply silhouetted against the sky-line. On another side lonely Prince William's Seat and heather-girt Glendhu are in sight. All is in peace, smiling merrily under the gay sun's genial influence. The lough coos softly, enticingly. Nothing could resist its persuasive whispers. It flashes. It glows. It darts angry glances, pillars of shining light. Slowly then the sun sinks, bathing the lake with its fiery beams, and slowly too the waters grow darker and colder until nothing is left of the familiar noon-day sight. It is time then to abandon Lough Bray to the leprechauns.

SOME USEFUL INFORMATION

The following extracts are taken from the answers of candidates in the School Scholarship Examination:—

"A Temperate Zone is a place where whiskey is not allowed."

"Stalactite is a sort of coal to be found in Carlow. It is said that one or two shovels of stalactite coal lasts nearly all the day."

"The Meeting of the Waters is the place where Sir John Moore wrote his famous song."

"Charlemagne was a very brave man. He was kind-hearted and humourous and liked his people very much. There is a place called after him "Charlemont Street."

What would Mr. de Valera and Mr. Cosgrave think of this statement:—"Ireland has been a republic (sic) for a long time. She calls herself the Irish Free State"?

METRICAL MUSINGS

The problem which besets the mind
Of him who would aspire to write
Smooth-flowing verse of various kind
Is choice of metre, for the might
Of metre makes or mars a line.

Most popular in English verse
Is the Iambic, swift and strong,
For Lyrics it is neat and terse;
It suits the dirge, it suits the song.

Next there are Trochaic measures
Yielding undiluted pleasures,
Quick to captivate the ear
Swift to charm all those who hear.

Dactylic metres all fill with delight
Useful for themes which are jolly or light,
But the metre composed of the Anapest foot
Claims attention of him who would 'scape
from the rut
Of the Iambic verse and the Trochaic metre
For it's smoother than either and very much neater.

Last the horrid atrocity called free verse
Which wanders all over the paper,
And scorns every rule or rhythm or rhyme,
Dallies along taking its time,
Relying on differing length of line,

Should be shunned
And scorned
So now be warned
Don't venture to use it
You are sure to abuse it
As I did in writing these lines.

SHAKESPEARE PAYS US A VISIT

THE SCHOOLBOY'S DREAM.

(After having visited the Tuckshop).

Is this a doughnut which I see before me
Upon the tuckshop counter? Come, let me clutch thee,
I have thee not and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, tempting vision, sensible
To eating as to sight. Or art thou but
A doughnut of the mind, a false creation,
Resulting from an overfilled stomach?
I see thee yet, as tempting and as sweet
As those which I have eaten;
Inviting me to do what I intend to,
And swallow thee as fast as I am able.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,
Or else worth all the rest. I see thee still,
And right upon thy crest a spot of jam,
Which was not so before! There's no such thing.
It is my ailing stomach which informs
Thus to mine eyes.

A FOOTBALL MATCH.

Suppose that you have seen
The High School First Fifteen at Belgrave Square,
Come forth upon the field. And this brave team
With joyful shouts unto each other calling,
Play with your fancies, and in them behold
Players who will soon play at Lansdowne Road.
Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
To sounds confused. Behold the brand new football Borne in the hands of swiftly-flying three-quarters;
Chased by opponents o'er the grassy field
With all the speed they have. O do but think
You stand upon the touchline and behold
A free fight upon the football field a-raging;
For so appears this game majestic,
When played with proper spirit.

A PARODY.

Not a sound was heard, not the slightest cheep,
As we stealthily crept with the hamper;
It was packed with tuck that would make your mouth weep,
And we couldn't afford to scamper.

Over the wall at the back of the school
Then round by the second turning;
The night was cold but we felt far from cool—
You bet! we were inwardly burning.

Half of our heavy task was done
When we ran right into disaster,
We suddenly saw that it wasn't such fun
To come face to face with a master.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
As we hastily dropped the tuck hamper,
And we took to our heels and rushed quickly to bed,
And we thought to ourselves— 'What a damper!'

We thought as we lay in our narrow cribs,
And groaned aloud in our sorrow;
That if the old master had spotted our nibs,
There'd be a court-martial to-morrow.

Half an hour passed, and we lay quite still
To listen for anyone coming;
The only sound came from the window-sill,
Where a big blue-bottle was humming.

"Well, well," we murmured, "We might as well see

If the grub, after all, has been spotted;
Perhaps it's still there, so why should not we Go fetch it? Why not? So we got it.

THE MYSTERY OF MARLETON MANOR

THE scene of the little episode which I am about to describe is laid in a small village in the north of England called Marleton. Three miles outside the village is situated Marleton Manor, a gaunt, old house, built in that heavy, massive style so typical in England. It stands in its own grounds, which are surrounded by a high wall, and contain a large number of trees, almost completely hiding the house from the road.

Marleton Manor is inhabited by an eccentric old bachelor by the name of Dingle. He had come to Marleton some years before the period, the events of which I am about to relate. The house had been empty for a good many years before he bought it and took up his residence in its gloomy interior. He employed no servants from the neighbourhood, but brought with him a mournful-looking man-servant who, apparently, did all the work necessary around the place.

From the beginning there was an air of mystery about old Dingle and his man-servant, by name, Giddings. The former never appeared in the village, the latter only occasionally to make the few purchases necessary. When he did come he went about his business with a sour expression on his face, and spoke only sufficient to enable him to make his purchases. Here it is that we come to the start of our mystery. Whenever Giddings bought anything he invariably paid for it in gold.

Many of the villagers had never even seen a sovereign before, and the sight of one naturally aroused their curiosity. When it became a regular practice for the shopkeepers to receive gold in payment for goods, rumours began to go round, as only they can in a country district, where everyone knows everyone else and a stranger is a common topic for talk. People said that Mr. Dingle must have an immense store of gold hidden in the old house somewhere, and though time went on without any conclusive proof of this rumour, the belief only became the stronger in the minds of the villagers, until it became one of those things which mine host at the Marleton Arms loves to tell to visitors who patronise his establishment.

Now we come to the real beginning of our story. One evening in November two strangers of unpleasant appearance arrived at the inn and inquired if they could be put up for a week. The old landlord was only too delighted to receive visitors at that time of the year, and offered them the best bedroom he had. A very brief biography of these gentlemen will suffice. One we will call Bill, the other Harry. They had come to Marleton as being a good spot to rest a while, far from the maddening crowd of "cops" and "dicks" (detectives). You will gather that they were gentlemen of doubtful occupation.

It was not very long before old Fleming the landlord, had spun the yarn about Marleton Manor to Bill and Harry, and those two lads, forgetting that they were supposed to be on holiday, pricked up their professional ears. They made one or two casual inquiries, and decided to take a stroll next day and grasp some "local colour."

We must pause here a moment and explain that for three or four months every winter Dingle and his servant used to leave Marleton for warmer climes, and leave the house vacant. So it was that when our two friends arrived they could examine it at their leisure.

They did not find it hard to overcome the difficulty of the locked gate, and were soon running practiced eyes over drainpipes and windows. With Harry's help Bill gained the ledge of one of the front windows, and as there were neither blinds nor shutters on it he could see into the room quite plainly. We can imagine his delight on perceiving in one corner a huge safe. He hopped off the ledge on to the ground and conveyed the glad news to Harry waiting patiently for the result of his investigations. They made their plans as they walked back to the inn, and decided to revisit the old house that very night with their kit of safebreaking instruments if conditions were favourable.

In the small hours of the morning Bill and Harry slipped out of their bedroom window and set off for the manor. When they arrived Harry hid himself near the road to give warning of anyone approaching, while Bill climbed the wall and made for the window. He reached the ledge with the help of a rope ladder with a hook attachment, and easily prised back the fastening on the sash; but no sooner had he raised the window than a deep voice said "Get out! Get out!" Poor Bill received such a shock that he jumped to the ground, ran across the garden full tilt, and, scaling the wall like a cat, made for Harry's hiding place. The latter was sitting down thinking how easily he had come out of the business and was amazed to see Bill charging across to him, his face as white as a sheet. When he had stammered out his story Harry laughed at him and said, "Don't be ridiculous, man. There couldn't possibly be anyone in the house. The old geezer has been away the last two months." However he offered to go along being provided with an automatic, and left the still shaking Bill on guard.

When he came to the open window there was no sign of anyone, so he stepped into the room, again no sound to be heard. He started creeping towards the safe and when he was halfway across the room he heard footsteps in the room above. But he was not to be so easily cowed. He dodged behind the safe and held his gun ready, but the footsteps stopped and there was a deathly silence in the house. He decided to investigate. Creeping up the stairs he visited each room in turn, and in none could he find the author of the footsteps. Everything presented the appearance of a house which had been vacant for some time; so, having decided that he had been "hearing things," he went downstairs again and tackled the safe. Uninterrupted in his work it did not take him long to break his way in. Just as he was going to open the heavy door, it started to swing back and revealed rows of bags neatly stacked, but Harry's eyes were not on the bags of gold, for sitting in the safe was the most monstrous gorilla, with its teeth bared and eyes flashing. With a deep, reverbrating roar it leaped on the unfortunate man, shivering with fear, too paralysed to move, and proceeded to tear him limb

THE object of the Union is to provide a bond between the past pupils of the School and to bring them together by games and sports and social functions. It also helps those who have left Dublin to hear of and keep in touch with their School contemporaries. The Union has already been of value to the present boys of the School.

Life subscription is one guinea, which may be paid in two annual instalments. Boys leaving School may, if they wish, have their names placed on the Register of the Union. Part at least of their life subscription must be paid within three years.
