MESSAGE FROM NEIL GODBOUT

Executive Director of the Prince George Chamber of Commerce

Hello and Hadih. Welcome to the second issue of Community Connection, the Prince George Chamber of Commerce's 2026 member directory.

Let's start with cake. The Chamber will celebrate its 115th birthday on October 21 with an open house and birthday cake from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. at our office on 7th Avenue.

The Fort George Board of Trade was registered under the federal Boards of Trade Act on October 21, 1911, four years before the founding of the City of Prince George, by a group of local business leaders who recognized that working together to grow the economy was the right thing to do for the community. Today, our 550 members carry that same belief, that connecting through networking at events and advocacy on policy issues to all levels of government is good for business and supports growth in the local and regional economy.

The Chamber has been especially busy on advocacy in the past year. In partnership with Downtown Prince George, we hosted the Voices for Change Safe Streets Rally last October. In the wake of the fires that destroyed the Crossroads Brewery and Restaurant and the Nechako Bottle Depot, more than 1,000 local residents joined us at CN Centre to talk about the street disorder problems deeply affecting Prince George residents and businesses.

That event prompted meetings between our groups and Premier Eby, the federal and provincial public safety ministers, and supported the efforts of Prince George city council in Victoria and Ottawa for more community support. Much remains to be done to make Prince George streets safer for everyone but there's no doubt our concerns have been heard by government.

In our 115th year, we've also been working hard to make your Chamber better. Last fall, we moved into our new location at 1564 7th Avenue, giving us our own dedicated space to meet and work with members. We decorated the office with works for sale by local artists, a daily reminder of the importance of the contribution of the arts to our local economy.

To increase confidence that your Chamber is operating at the highest professional standards, we became an accredited Chamber of Commerce last fall through the Chamber Accreditation Council of Council. Following up on that, I'll be receiving my Accredited Chamber Executive designation from the Chamber of Commerce Executives of Canada this October.

Other organizations have recognized the Chamber's work on behalf of our members and the broader Prince George business community. The Canadian Chamber of Commerce awarded us an Inclusive Growth Award last fall for our meaningful partnership with the Lheidli T'enneh First Nation, including changing our bylaws to allow our board of directors to be sworn in by the elected chief of our host First Nation, a first for Chambers in Canada. Chief Dolleen Logan was also invited to speak at the Canadian Chamber of Commerce's 2025 AGM in Mississauga, where she received a standing ovation from the national Chamber delegates for her inspiring message that reconciliation happens through collaborative relationships devoted to reconcili-ACTION.

The BC Economic Development Association also recognized the City of Prince George and its local partners, including the Chamber, with its Community Resiliency Award for the Support PG Tariff Response.

This magazine is just one of our ongoing works to connect our members to each other and to show the strength and resilience of the Prince George business community.

As part of our contract with DEL Communications in Winnipeg, this magazine was printed in Prince George by Papyrus Printing Ltd. The Chamber and its members receive this magazine at no cost, while the Chamber receives a percentage of the advertising sales, a helpful source of revenue.

All of our members are important, but I would especially like to recognize our Premier Partners. Last year at this time, we had just two and now we have seven – The Ascentech Group, Northern Health, Laser Pavement Solutions, BC Hydro, Paladin Security, the Ramada Plaza by Wyndham, and Vitreo Minerals. These organizations – public and private, large and small – reflect the diversity of our membership. Thank you for your ongoing support of the Chamber.

On behalf of the staff (partnership manager Colleen Sparrow, and office manager Natasha Edwards), and the volunteer board of directors, led by President Kristine Newell, the Chamber appreciates the support of the members in this directory and welcomes the opportunity to add you and your business in next year's directory.

All the best – Neil Godbout 🌐

2026 Annual General Meeting

The Prince George Chamber of Commerce held its 2026 Annual General Meeting at CrossRoads Brewing College Heights. We also celebrated receiving the 2025 Inclusive Growth Award from the Canadian Chamber of Commerce for our Partnership with Lheidli T'enneh First Nations.

This year, we intentionally chose to host the AGM at CrossRoads Brewing College Heights in support of local business and to continue advocating for safe streets in Prince George following the devastating fire that destroyed the downtown CrossRoads location last year.

New Office Location

In 2025, the Prince George Chamber of Commerce proudly moved into our new office located at 1564 7th Ave. After several weeks of renovations, the space quickly became a welcoming reflection of our community, filled with local pride and creativity.

Shortly after settling in, we created an artnership with Studio 2880 to feature artwork from talented local artists throughout the office. The artnership helps showcase the incredible creative talent in Prince George while creating opportunities for local artists to share and hopefully sell their work within our space.

Tax considerations when exiting your business

By Miranda Paterson, Doane Grant Thornton LLP

Exiting a business takes longer and requires more effort than many owners realize. Investing time and attention upfront can significantly improve the outcome and help you avoid costly mistakes, especially when it comes to tax planning. While each step of this process requires extensive tax analysis and review, here are some fundamental tax planning questions to consider when you prepare your business for sale.

What are you selling?

Before you explore strategies to manage your tax profile, a crucial first step is to determine exactly what's for sale. Even the simplest business is made up of different components, each of which has value to a potential buyer. For example, a local stand-alone bike shop could be carved up into different assets including inventory, brand, real estate, etc. Or are you considering selling the shares of your business? An advisor can help you define the scope on the outset to help get you on the right track from the start.

What's the best way to structure the sale?

There are two primary ways to sell a business: An asset sale and a share sale.

Put simply, in an asset sale, the corporation sells assets, but the seller retains ownership of the corporation. Sellers generally face a greater tax liability, as the company may be required to pay corporate tax on accrued gains and the shareholder may have further tax liability on the distribution of proceeds.

A share sale is generally more favourable tax wise. Proceeds are typically taxed as capital gains, which benefit from a lower inclusion rate compared to regular income. Additionally, a seller could benefit from the lifetime capital gains exemption on qualified small business corporation (QSBC) shares, provided the company shares qualify as QSBC shares.

Sellers transitioning their business to family should consider whether they qualify for the intergenerational business transfer rules. These rules allow certain family business transfers to be taxed as capital gains instead of full taxable dividends.

How will the purchase price be paid?

Eventually, you will need to consider how the purchase price will be paid and the impact of how different forms of consideration can drastically change the tax outcome. An advisor can help review and weigh your options carefully.

A cash transaction: the seller directly receives payment from the sale.

An equity rollover: A common method for sales to a private equity firm. It sees the seller reinvest part of the proceeds back into the business, allowing continued interest, profit from future value growth, and tax deferral. However, the tax advantages are generally only available when shares in a Canadian company are received.

A vendor take-back note: A buyer could fund part of the sale with a vendor take-back note, which triggers upfront taxation. However, a capital gains reserve may be available in some instances.

An earnout: Part of the purchase price is dependent on post-acquisition performance, which can help to ensure continuity and a smoother transition. With a sale of shares, earnout proceeds could be treated as capital gains under certain circumstances.

How should you receive sale proceeds?

Choosing to receive proceeds in a holding company allows possible tax deferral opportunities. Otherwise, the seller will need to explore their options for capital gains exemptions.

Will you conduct due diligence?

Consider hiring a third party to conduct independent sell-side due diligence to examine the business and identify potential issues early. Addressing these in advance can help reduce risk and strengthen negotiations, which can help secure a higher purchase price.

Are you prepared to pivot?

Even the most thought-out deals evolve in negotiations, so it's critical to understand the impact of each change. Advisors can provide important guidance throughout the process, but the decision remains yours. Remember to give yourself time to consider your options and adjust plans to achieve the best possible result.

Planning your exit?

Remember, understanding how the answers to each of these questions can affect your deal requires in-depth tax analysis and review. Connect with our tax professionals to understand your options, manage risk, and maximize after-tax value before you go to market.

Spirit of the North: Bringing healthcare closer to home

It's* ABOUT TIME

For generations, Northerners have faced long journeys for specialized healthcare, travelling hundreds of kilometres from family, work, and support systems to access the care they need.

Long wait times, vast distances, and the unique challenges of serving a growing and diverse population continue to impact healthcare access across Northern B.C.

The Spirit of the North Healthcare Foundation's 'It's About Time' campaign is an opportunity to change that.

While the new Acute Care Tower will provide critical infrastructure, the foundation is raising $55 million to fund advanced equipment, innovative technology, and specialized enhancements that will transform care within the facility and help future-proof healthcare across the region.

This campaign extends far beyond a single building. It is a regional effort to strengthen healthcare throughout Northern B.C. by supporting equipment, outreach programs, community-based services, and wraparound care that helps patients before, during, and after treatment.

A key priority is expanding cardiac services, with the goal of bringing up to 90 per cent of cardiac care closer to home. This will mean fewer transfers, shorter wait times, reduced travel, and more families able to stay together during critical moments. Patients will also benefit from significant improvements to mental health and surgical services.

The impact will be felt across Northern B.C., including more than 50 First Nations communities and many remote and rural populations.

This campaign belongs to all Northerners. From Mackenzie to Kitimat, from Haida Gwaii to Fort St. John, and every community in between, it is an opportunity to build a stronger, more connected healthcare system.

We invite individuals, families, businesses, and community partners to join us in helping make this vision a reality. Together, we can ensure that more northern families receive the care they need, closer to home.

Because healthcare close to home matters.

Because Northerners deserve exceptional care right here at home.

Because it's about time. 🕒

Nilhts'i Ecoener Wind Project

Building a legacy of sustainability, powered by partnership

LTFN Chief Dolleen Logan, LTFN Youth Ambassador, and Ecoener Chairman Luis de Valdivia in Spain.

In an area of British Columbia best known for being the 'Centre of the B.C. Forest Industry', the Nilhts'i Ecoener Wind Project will deliver renewable energy and economic diversification. The 140MW (megawatt) wind farm will be built 15 kilometers east of Hixon which is halfway between Prince George and Quesnel. The project will produce enough electricity annually to power 31,000 homes, which is about the number of homes in Prince George.

The Nilhts'i Ecoener project was announced as one of the winners in the 2024 BC Hydro Call for Power. The project is a partnership between the Lheidli T'enneh First Nation and Ecoener, a 100 per cent renewable energy company based in Spain. Founded 37 years ago, Ecoener develops, builds and operates wind, solar, and small hydroelectric energy projects, as well as energy storage solutions, with assets across Europe, the Caribbean, and Central and South America. Ecoener had been looking to expand to Canada and the 2024 BC Hydro Call to Power provided the opportunity.

"British Columbia has shown that major projects will play a critical role in our shared economy moving forward. To facilitate these projects, and projected growth, we need to expand the capacity and availability of clean electrical power," says Dolleen Logan, Chief of the Lheidli

T'enneh First Nation. "For us, partners matter. Our project partner, Ecoener, identified the opportunity to build the 140MW Nilhts'i Ecoener Wind Project with minimal impacts to our neighbours and territory, and these are reasons why we partnered with Ecoener."

Ecoener was aware of wind studies conducted underway since 2015 in the territory of the Lheidli T'enneh and engaged with the Nation to explore the opportunity to develop an energy project together. Following discussions between Ecoener and Chief and Council, the parties agreed to partner in the development of the first wind project in the territory. The proposed Nilhts'i Ecoener Project was subsequently submitted to the 2024 Call for Power and, since being selected, the partners have worked collaboratively to move the project forward. To consolidate the new partnership, a delegation of Lheidli T'enneh representatives visited Spain in the Spring of 2025.

Since then, the project team has focused on community engagement, data collection, preliminary project design, and transportation routes for turbine delivery.

This information has been assembled in permit applications which were submitted this summer to the BC Energy Regulator (BCER). Once approved permits are received in 2027, the project team will focus on final engineering and design for construction to begin in 2028. Construction will continue in 2029 in preparation for turbine delivery and assembly in 2030. The project will operate for the life of the 30-year power purchase agreement with BC Hydro, planned to start in 2030.

"Our 140 MW wind project near Hixon, developed in partnership with the Lheidli T'enneh First Nation will allow us to deliver clean energy efficiently and responsibly," says Jose E. Auffray, managing director for Canada at Ecoener.

"This opportunity strongly reflects our commitment to building a legacy of sustainability, powered by partnership, while directly supporting British Columbia's ambition to expand its renewable energy capacity and strengthen a resilient, low carbon power grid."

The project team considers Hixon to be the home community for the project. An open house was held earlier this year at the Hixon community hall and people attending appreciated viewing detailed storyboards that explained key components of the project and asking questions of project team members.

The project will also continue to provide information updates to local governments such as the Fraser-Fort George Regional District, the City of Prince George, the City of Quesnel, and the Cariboo Regional District. The project team has also participated in events hosted by the Prince George and Quesnel Chambers of Commerce. 🌐

Powering northern potential

What the North Coast Transmission Line means for Prince George business

Provided by BC Hydro

Prince George sits at the beginning of one of the largest transmission infrastructure investments in BC Hydro's history and the opportunities for local businesses are real.

The North Coast Transmission Line

The North Coast Transmission Line will twin the existing 500-kilovolt line (pictured) which begins just west of Prince George and will more than double the capacity along this important corridor.

(NCTL) will add 440 kilometres of new 500-kilovolt transmission infrastructure across the North Coast region from Prince George to Terrace. Recognized by Prime Minister Mark Carney as a nationally significant project, NCTL will support Canada's critical minerals strategy, strengthen export capacity, and enable customers across the region to power their operations with clean electricity, helping reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

NCTL is expected to help power major projects that will create approximately 9,700 direct full-time jobs, contribute nearly $10 billion per year to gross domestic product (GDP), and generate approximately $950 million annually in public revenues for the provincial and municipal governments.

First Nations, BC Hydro, and the Government of B.C. are working through an innovative partnership to plan and develop the project, and to provide First Nations with the opportunity to co-own the transmission lines with BC Hydro.

Through contracting opportunities and co-ownership, First Nations will also have the opportunity to share the economic benefits.

Construction on NCTL Phase 1, which runs from Prince George to Glenannan west of Fraser Lake, begins this summer. Investigation and planning continues on NCTL Phase 2, which extends the line construction, approximately 1,400 workers are expected to be working across both phases.

For Prince George businesses, NCTL Phases 1 and 2 bring an opportunity. Our main contractors, including workforce accommodation operators, will need a range of goods and services from local and regional businesses, including equipment and material supply, site infrastructure, transportation and logistics, camp services, and other construction services.

Four worker accommodation sites are planned, including a Phase 1 camp in Vanderhoof, and three Phase 2 camps in Burns Lake, Telkwa, and Terrace. BC Hydro is reusing the camp dorms from the John Horgan Dam site, formerly known as Site C. The work to move, install, service, and operate the workforce accommodations, the workforce, and all the construction activities will generate economic and business opportunity in surrounding communities, including Prince George, the economic hub of Northern B.C.

Businesses interested in participating should register for updates and monitor public procurement opportunities posted on BC Bid (www.bcbid.gov.bc.ca) and monitor BC Hydro's North Coast project website (www.bchydro.com/ncelectrification) for information about how to connect with our main contractors, and for general project updates.

BC Hydro and our First Nation partners are building the North Coast Transmission Line in Prince George's backyard. Businesses that build relationships, and stay informed by registering on BC Bid will be best positioned to contribute to one of the most significant projects Northern B.C. 🌐

A successful first year

*Nillhts'i Ecoener Wind Project
Site, east of Hixon, B.C.*

On a sunny Friday afternoon in late April, Tano T'enneh Enterprises officially opened its new office on 5th Avenue in Downtown Prince George. The event marked a year of transition for Tano T'enneh and the Lheidli T'enneh First Nation (LTFN).

In the spring of 2025, LTFN chief and council decided to establish Tano T'enneh as a separate company reporting to its own board of directors. For many years prior to this, LTFN managed its businesses and equity projects as general and limited partnerships. The establishment of Tano T'enneh Enterprises fulfilled a long-standing vision of past chiefs and councils for LTFN to one day have its own business and economic development company. The opening of the new office brought that vision to reality.

Once Tano T'enneh had been established, the next step for the board of directors was to find a CEO. Following an extensive national search, Evan Salter was selected to lead the Tano T'enneh staff in managing various band-owned companies, partnerships, and investments to secure lasting benefits for the nation. Salter has many years of experience in Indigenous finance and leading Indigenous economic and business development organizations. The mission for Salter and his team is to cultivate a dynamic and sustainable economy, providing employment, contracting opportunities, and increasing the number of revenue streams to support members.

Tano T'enneh is anchored by its three core businesses, all owned by LTFN and managed by Tano T'enneh. LTN Contracting is a logging contracting company which provides forestry services to major partners in the Prince George region. Tano T'enneh also manages several forest licences including the largest First Nations Woodland Licence in B.C. Tano Fuel Ltd. is a gas bar and convenience store on the Shelley Reserve offering fuel, groceries, and popular food services.

House of Ancestors is a thriving conference and meeting facility in downtown Prince George repurposed from a former movie theatre. The popular venue can host up to 350 guests and features a well-known café with Bannock donuts which were showcased during an episode of The Amazing Race Canada in 2025.

Tano T'enneh also manages equity-share businesses. These include LTN Environmental Consulting LP, formed over 20 years ago as a partnership between LTFN and EDI Environmental Dynamics, which provides environmental services within LTFN's territory.

Tano T'enneh maintains a directory of companies that contribute revenue-sharing benefits to the nation through agreements such as MOUs (Memorandums of Understanding), revenue-share arrangements, limited partnerships, and joint-ventures.

Tano T'enneh's emerging portfolio is partnerships in major projects. These include the Nilhts'i Ecoener Wind Project, the North Coast Transmission Line, the Westcoast Pipeline Partnership, and involvement with Enbridge's new Sunrise gas pipeline looping project which runs from Northeast B.C. to Vancouver and into the United States delivering natural gas to customers along the way.

It has been a whirlwind first year for Tano T'enneh Enterprises, but CEO Evan Salter says, "There is more, many more, good things to come". Visit Tano T'enneh at its new office in Prince George or online at tanotenneh.ca. 🌱

Strong communication builds strong businesses

By Alyson Gourley-Cramer, Principal and CEO, Monogram Communications

Whether you're running a one-person operation from your home office, managing a growing business, or leading a company with hundreds of employees, one thing remains true: every business needs a strategic communications plan.

When people hear "strategic communications", they often picture thick binders, corporate jargon, and budgets with too many zeros. The reality is much simpler. A communications plan doesn't have to be complicated, it just has to be intentional.

Communications is about much more than social media or the occasional press release. It's how your business presents itself every day. It's what your customers, employees, stakeholders, and community hear, see, and experience. Whether you're shaping that message or not, your reputation is being built with every interaction.

The businesses that consistently earn trust don't leave communications to chance. They know who they're speaking to, what they want to be known for, and how they'll respond when opportunities—or challenges—arise.

For a small business, a communications plan might simply identify key audiences, establish a consistent brand voice, map out a marketing calendar, and prepare a few key messages. As your business grows, your communications planning should grow with it, connecting business goals with employee communications, stakeholder engagement, media relations, crisis planning, branding, and marketing. The scale changes, but the purpose remains the same: ensuring every communication supports your organization's objectives.

One of the biggest misconceptions we hear is that communications planning is only needed when something goes wrong. In reality, the strongest plans are built long before they're ever needed. They help businesses navigate change, celebrate success, attract talent, strengthen relationships, and respond confidently when the unexpected happens.

Here in Northern B.C., relationships matter. Trust, reputation, and connection are the foundation of doing business. A strategic communications plan helps you earn that trust every day.

At the end of the day, a communications plan isn't about creating more work. It's about creating clarity. Because no matter the size of your business, communication isn't just part of your
