From the Editor

It's safe to say this summer didn't look quite like I expected it to when I wrote my last column. My health continued to force me to slow down more than I'm particularly good at, with additional surgeries and treatment keeping me home from more than a few places I would have rather been. Turns out, slowing down isn't all bad. I spent time with family I hadn't seen nearly enough, made it to what felt like seven zillion sports camps, games and practices, and got to be a little more present for the parts of summer that usually seem to disappear before I realize they happened. Of course, there were plenty of cattle shows I hated missing. But there was still a lot to celebrate from afar. Animals we bred and sold had success for their new owners, partnership cattle topped classes, lease animals gave kids some pretty great moments, and our own cattle had a successful summer, sometimes without us ever making it ringside. There was also a little good-natured celebration when one of our bred-and-owned Holsteins brought home banners from State Fair, apparently enough proof that the NY Holstein editor isn't just an Ayrshire breeder anymore? One thing I didn't miss was watching my daughter, Addie, graduate from Little Britches and Cloverbuds. If you've seen her around the shows, you already know she's counting down to being old enough for 4-H next year and Expo the year after. She's got some pretty big plans in place already and no shortage of determination to go with them.

Maybe that's part of why it felt so good to finally get back ringside at State Fair. Entries were up, excitement was high, and having Holsteins back in the Coliseum felt a little like the State Fairs I remember from years ago. Seeing so many New York breeders, exhibitors, juniors and families together again brought some of that "old State Fair" feeling back with it. Of course, putting on a cattle show in the middle of a fair that welcomes nearly a million people comes with chaos and some very understandable frustrations. A huge thank you to Charlie, Teri and their crews for the work they put in to make the week happen, and to every breeder and exhibitor who came, worked through the challenges and helped make the return to the Coliseum such a success. And YES! State Fair always delivers its share of characters we have to deal with as exhibitors. But for every one who left us scratching our heads, there were dozens more who stopped in the aisles or along the rail, watched cattle being fitted and shown, asked questions and had a genuinely positive experience with our industry. I understand firsthand how frustrating it can be when you're trying to get cattle through a crowded pack or answer what feels like the tenth "dumb" question of the day. But when someone genuinely doesn't know how their food is produced and is curious enough to ask, it really isn't a dumb question. So, an equally big thank you goes to the exhibitors who answered those questions, made room for another kid to see a cow up close, or took a few minutes out of an already hectic day to give someone a positive experience with dairy. Those fairgoers are ultimately our consumers, and having nearly a million of them come to us is an opportunity most of us don't get every day. This year was a pretty good reminder of that.

Feels a little crazy that summer is already behind us. By the time this hits your mailbox, cattle will be settled in at World Dairy Expo and Madison will be buzzing. If you're there, come find me in the trade show at the Animal Health International and Aspen booths, I'd love to catch up! As we head into another fall season, I hope everyone has a successful harvest, a great fall show run and a good start to the school year. As always, thank you for supporting the News, our Association and the people who make both so special.

See you in Madison! - Taylor

Congratulations to Team USA!

Evan Cooper and Addison Brown were among six young dairy professionals selected to represent the United States at the Young Breeders School in Belgium, September 2–6. Their experience went well beyond the show ring, giving them the opportunity to learn alongside - and compete against - their peers from around the world.

Participants were assigned heifers and spent three days learning and practicing the details that go into cattle fitting, grooming, presentation and showmanship. Hands-on workshops also covered marketing, communications and animal photography before the week concluded with two days of competition, giving participants the chance to put those skills to work.

"One of the coolest experiences of my life."
- Addison Brown

For Addison, the week ended with some impressive results: preparing the Junior Champion animal and placing 1st in her Showmanship Class. But the experience also offered a different perspective for her on an industry that reaches far beyond home. "Sometimes we get a little narrow-focused on just America. We don't really think about the rest of the world and the dairy industry all across the world. At the end of the day, we all love one thing. We love cows and we love dairy." For Evan, he truly appreciated the connections made beyond the ring. "As much as the whole team enjoyed the competition, I think the part we all appreciated the most was the trip itself. Going over to Europe and meeting so many different people in their industry was definitely once in a lifetime."

"I think everyone on the team has at least a couple people we will stay in touch with for years."
- Evan Cooper

Putting the "FARM" in Farm Team

An idea rooted in local farming has grown into a unique way to showcase agriculture - and the people behind it - in the Mohawk Valley and beyond.

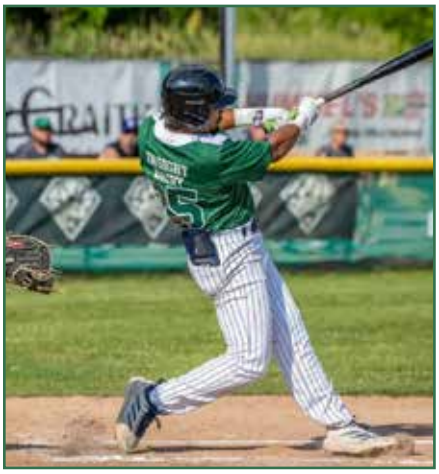

Fans at Mohawk Valley Diamond Dawgs games this summer may have noticed something a little different on the backs of the players' jerseys. Instead of traditional sponsors, a special set of Diamond Dawgs jerseys put the names of local farms and agribusinesses front and center. Farms including Dygert Dairy and Seventeen 23 Farm, along with agricultural businesses such as Double A Custom Harvesting, Seneca Dairy Systems and Herkimer Veterinary Associates, were among those represented on the field throughout the season.

Each player was paired with an agricultural sponsor, turning the collegiate summer baseball team into a "Farm Team" in a very literal sense. The jerseys represented farms and businesses from across the Mohawk Valley and surrounding area, bringing names familiar within the agricultural community onto the field and in front of a much broader audience. But the idea wasn't simply to put farm names on jerseys. Throughout the season, players also had opportunities to learn more about the farms and businesses they represented, with some meeting the families and people behind the names on their backs. The idea came from Dr. Chris Nellis, whose family has been involved with the Diamond Dawgs for more than 15 years and who has long believed agriculture needs to be willing to tell its own story. "I have always recognized the importance of promoting our industry. We can never do enough," Nellis said. "There is a large void out there."

The connection between baseball and agriculture actually began somewhat unintentionally for the Nellis family. They started hosting Diamond Dawgs players in 2011, initially more because of their love of baseball than as an effort to promote farming. "We have a big farmhouse and love baseball, which seemed like a perfect fit for us," Nellis said. "Little did we know that by offering a home on a farm for 2+ months every summer, it would allow us to immerse these young men in our industry and life, experiences they crave and come to appreciate." Living on the farm naturally led to questions from players who hadn't necessarily been exposed to agriculture before. "They had questions and were very curious about farming and we were open to share … the perfect marriage," she said. Over time, Nellis began to recognize the reach those conversations could have. To date, her family has hosted 58 Diamond Dawgs players.

"As time passed it was exciting to know that if we educate these young men and if they can pass their experiences on to at least one more, we gain," Nellis said. "To date we've hosted 58 young men, so multiply that by them touching a few others — the impact could be huge." That experience eventually helped inspire an idea that could take the agricultural connection beyond the Nellis farm and into the ballpark itself. Local businesses commonly sponsor players and have their names featured on jerseys. Nellis wondered what would happen if those jerseys instead showcased the farms and agribusinesses that make up such an important part of the local economy. "Many teams have local sponsors/businesses put their names on the back of these jerseys," Nellis said. "It was my plan to get all the jerseys to have the names of local farms and agribusinesses." There was also a piece of local baseball history that made the "Farm Team"

"I have always recognized the importance of promoting our industry. We can never do enough…"

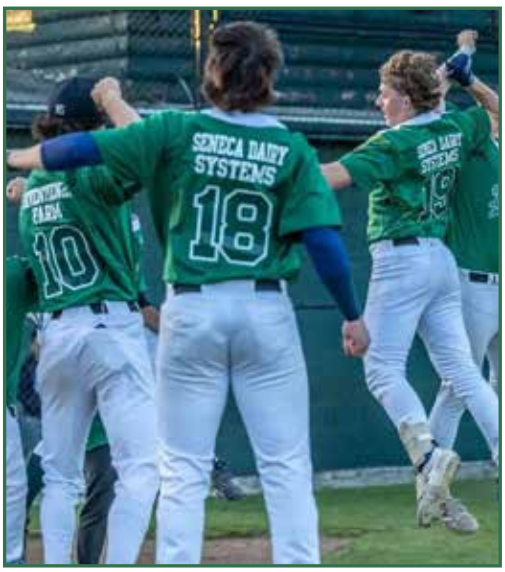

name especially fitting. The Diamond Dawgs play their home games at Veterans Memorial Park in Little Falls, the former home of the Little Falls Mets, a minor league affiliate of the New York Mets. That gave Nellis the connection she needed to bring the idea together. "To bring the idea full circle I used the notion that in the early years the baseball field we called home was home to the 'Farm Team' for the NY Mets," she said. "Thus creating our new 'Farm Team.'"

The first person she pitched it to was Diamond Dawgs General Manager Travis Heiser, whom Nellis works closely with and considers a friend. "When I pitched the idea to him he was excited, no hesitation, just the green light to go ahead," she said. There was even an unexpected Holstein connection between the two. Nellis recently attended the funeral of Heiser's grandfather and noticed his 40-year Holstein member pin displayed on his suit. When she mentioned it to Heiser's father, she learned how proud his grandfather had been to receive the pin and that he had been a well-known local Holstein breeder. With Heiser and the Diamond Dawgs behind the idea, the next challenge was finding enough farms and agricultural businesses willing to participate. "My plan was to send letters to everyone we did business with and others throughout the area," Nellis said. "Our farm committed to several and hoped to convince others." She was optimistic they could find enough sponsors to make it work, but initially thought it might take a few years for the idea to grow. Instead, enough farms and businesses stepped up to launch the Farm Team during the 2026 season, with additional sponsors already interested in being part of it in the future.

For Nellis, seeing the team actually run onto the field wearing the farm-sponsored jerseys made all of the work worthwhile. "For me personally I was so excited and proud when the team took the field wearing these jerseys," she said. "The excitement grew with the season, fans, peers and players all appreciated it." More importantly, some of the connections went beyond a name printed across the back of a uniform. "Many players went on to meet the family or business on their jersey and wore them with pride," Nellis said. "The project was fresh, exciting, and had a life of its own." That interaction was exactly the kind of opportunity Nellis hoped the Farm Team could create.

Agriculture remains an important part of the Mohawk Valley, but she believes there's still work to be done in helping people understand the full scope of the industry — especially everything that exists beyond the farm itself. "I think there has been and continues to be respect for the industry, but to demonstrate the impact agriculture has in the Mohawk Valley and how large the role is," she said. "They also often don't think beyond the farm gate. Agribusiness is huge." The Farm Team builds on agricultural promotion already happening through the Diamond Dawgs, including Dairy Night, while putting agriculture in front of people who came to the ballpark simply to enjoy a baseball game. "I think this project dovetails well with the Dairy Night at Diamond Dawg games and other parallel conversations can go a long way," Nellis said. "We have to tell our stories, no one is going to do it for us, every little bit will help."

After seeing the response during the first season, Nellis believes the Farm Team has plenty of room to grow. "I believe this was a great beginning to a much bigger story," she said. "I believe with my support from Travis and my relationship with the Diamond Dawgs this can continue to grow and change with promotion of agriculture leading the way." There are already additional farms and businesses interested in becoming involved. But Nellis would also like to see the concept extend beyond Little Falls. The Diamond Dawgs are one of several collegiate baseball teams playing in communities across New York where agriculture remains an important part of the local economy. Many of those teams already host dairy nights or other agricultural promotions. "There are many other collegiate teams across NYS that play in this league, many are centered within other large farm communities," Nellis said. "I would love for other teams to steal this idea and go with it." For an industry continually looking for ways to reach consumers outside of the usual agricultural audience, Nellis sees the ballpark as an opportunity that's already there. "I challenge others to use this as a vehicle for more promotion of agriculture," she said. "The audience is coming to you … let's tell our story."

"The audience is coming to you … let's tell our story."

Junior Corner

Josiah Freier

Hello everyone! Welcome to the Junior Corner. I'm sure it's been a busy, but rewarding, summer! It's hard to believe autumn is just around the corner, but looking back, New York Junior Holstein youth have truly put on quite a show these past few months. From the National Holstein Convention in June, to the Golf tournament in July, the Picnic in August and the recently wrapped up State Fair, our members have been working hard and their dedication is showing!

Our busy season kicked off in Orlando, Florida, where New York was represented very well by our Juniors at the National Holstein Convention. Congratulations to our Junior Dairy Bowl team, who won top honors in a heated sudden death match to become the national champions! The team included Abigail Freier, Trent Greenfield, Eli Donlick, and Rory Cornell, along with coach Christel Donlick. The winning streak didn't stop there. In the Dairy Jeopardy contest, Elsie Donlick won the Senior division, and Larsen Swan and Haddessa Adsit earned 3rd place in extemporaneous and prepared speeches, respectively. New York is incredibly proud of these outstanding youth!

Next, we headed into July for the annual Golf tournament. This event combined friendly competition and plenty of laughs with the effort to raise funds to support youth programming and opportunities. A huge thank you goes to the sponsors, golfers, and volunteers who made the day a great success!

I know it seems far away, but it's time to start gearing up for the state convention. The Junior Executive Committee is already planning exciting things to make it a convention to remember. Don't wait until the last minute to revise your DJM books, write up speeches, or practice Dairy Bowl. The work you put in at home will translate during the competition!

While the show season is still going strong, congrats to every hard working exhibitor, and a massive thank you to the parents, breeders, and mentors who work behind the scenes to make it all possible. Good luck to everyone at the remaining fall shows!

Elizabeth Vincent

From the Dairy Quiz Bowl Chair

Hello Dairy Bowl enthusiasts! This is Elizabeth Vincent, your Dairy Bowl Chair this year. Dairy Bowl is my favorite competition at the New York Holstein convention, and it's my goal to make it your favorite, too! Lately, I've been keeping up with the fall show results (you might want to pay attention to this, too, if you're competing in Dairy Bowl this year) and I am looking forward to cheering on New York breeders at the National shows. I will be sending emails looking for volunteers soon!

Juniors, Coaches, and Advisors - please take a look at the rules for the Dairy Bowl contest. Even though some of you have participated for many years, a refresher of the rules never hurts! Don't forget that the contest is run a bit differently than the 4-H contest, and the rules are slightly different.

Lily Marshman

From the Education Chair

As the Education Chair, I would like to take this opportunity to share insight into the prepared and extemporaneous public speaking contests. Through the prepared public speaking contest, juniors will become comfortable researching, writing, and presenting on topics related to the dairy industry with poise and professionalism. For those willing to take a risk, the extemporaneous speaking contest will teach juniors to think critically and quickly by presenting on dairy-industry-related topics with limited preparation time. These contests build essential soft skills, and I credit both contests with helping me become the leader I am today. Visit https://www.nyholsteins.com/convention-contests.html for all the details on both contests!

Executive Manager's REPORT

By all accounts The New York Holstein Association State Show held in conjunction with the New York State Fair was a tremendous success! Just over a year ago we were in the middle of contract negotiations with the Washington County Fair when we realized that the traditional 2026 dates for State Show conflicted with the All-American Dairy Show and Eastern States Exposition. Washington County Fair was not able to adjust their dates and the NYHA Show Committee made the difficult recommendation to move the State Show back to The NYS Fair.

"I loved watching the leadsmen walk into the Coliseum for the first time. They'd look up and their eyes would just light up!" Teri Martin

The success of the show was due to the quality of the cattle exhibited and the efforts of many people. Matt Sharpe served as the NY Holstein representative on the NYS Fair PDCA Committee. Holstein USA employees, Kelton Tanguay and Diana Parker, helped with check-in and verified papers. NYHA Co-Manager Joanne Peck ensured exhibitors were current NYHA members, assisted with awards and the Promotion Booth. Members of the Junior Executive Committee, Abbie Ainslie, Hadessa Adsit, Everett Brayman, Addison Brown, Macy Crothers, Camryn Crothers, Abby Hirt, Lily Marshman, Tyler March, Olivia VanEvera, and others went above and beyond to ensure that the juniors had a fantastic experience! From organizing the farmers olympics, purchasing and passing out awards, working in the promotion booth, selling raffle tickets, competing in judging and showmanship, as well as participating in The Dairy Challenge, NYHA Junior Members were everywhere! Charlie Luchinsinger and Teri Martin, along with their NYS Fair staff, worked tirelessly to ensure an incredible experience for the State Show exhibitors and spectators.

"Charlie and his staff were amazing! They went above and beyond in every aspect to make sure this show was perfect."
- Aaron Eaton

The National Show application will be resubmitted with the goal of "the best state show in the country" regaining its National Status. As Diana Parker of Holstein USA said, "Showing in the coliseum is befitting a National Show!" I've been asked about the location of next year's State Show. The NYHA Show Committee will meet this fall and make their recommendation to the NYHA Executive Committee. The date and location will be announced shortly after the final decision has been made.

Thank you to the exhibitors for showcasing your best at this year's NYHA State Show!

FROM THE NYHA President

Steve vanLieshout

Hello Holstein members, friends and enthusiasts.
As I send this short message, Cindy and I were able to relax and enjoy the open show at NYSF. It's always interesting as we both play rail judge and who is in line with official judge. In addition to great Holsteins and friendly people, it's so pleasing to see the overwhelming number of our junior members who not only are there, but are exhibiting great cattle alongside the adults or are actually helping the show to go on.

While most of the show scene is revving up for fall shows, be assured that NYHA Executive Committee and managers are preparing for what can be called our business season. The fall board meeting will be in October which leads to state convention in January. My how the time flies.

Best regards,
Steve vanLieshout

Rooted in Tradition + Growing for Tomorrow

2027 NY Holstein Convention

JANUARY 15-17, 2027 SYRACUSE, NY

With the 2027 NY Holstein Convention just a few short months away, planning is underway and ideas are flowing for another fantastic gathering of Holstein breeders, enthusiasts, and supporters of all ages.

This year's theme, "Rooted in Tradition and Growing for Tomorrow" represents our devotion to the traditions that make the NY Holstein Convention a special annual gathering, while also keeping our eye out for opportunities to innovate and bring new ideas to reality. Our goal is to plan a convention where all ages can come together to share stories of the past, understand and learn from what has come before us, discuss what is happening now, look forward to what lies ahead and encourage each other to be involved in making our industry and our association the best that it can be.

In an effort to keep participating in convention an affordable option for families, we are currently developing a robust sponsorship program. If you, your farm, your club, your company, or another entity that you know of may be interested in supporting or sponsoring the convention, please do not hesitate to contact me at hollypullis@gmail.com or 315-750-5847.

Whether you have been to convention every year since you can remember or are looking for a new way to brighten your mid-January, begin now to make plans to join us in Syracuse, January 15-17.

NY Junior Earns National Dairy Shrine Scholarship

New York Junior Holstein member Alexis Schultz of Marion, N.Y., has been named a recipient of a 2026 National Dairy Shrine Maurice Core Scholarship.

Schultz is studying Dairy and Food Animal Management at the University of Wisconsin–Madison and was one of nine students from across the country selected to receive the $1,500 scholarship.

The Maurice Core Scholarships recognize first-year college students majoring in dairy or animal science or another industry-related field. The scholarship honors Maurice Core, longtime Executive Secretary of the American Jersey Cattle Association and former Executive Director of National Dairy Shrine.

Schultz will be recognized alongside fellow National Dairy Shrine scholarship recipients during the organization's Awards Banquet held in conjunction with World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin. Congratulations, Alexis!

Telling the Holstein Story

Ryleigh Wadsworth brought her NY Junior Holstein roots to a summer behind the scenes at Holstein USA. We caught up with her to get her take on the experience and where she's headed now.

For Ryleigh Wadsworth, an internship with Holstein Association USA brought together two things that have already shaped much of her life: the Holstein breed and a growing passion for agricultural communications. The Saratoga County native served as Holstein Association USA's Digital Content & Communications Intern, trading her familiar place as a Junior Holstein member and exhibitor for a summer behind the camera, writing stories, creating social content and learning just how much happens behind the scenes at an association that has been part of her life for years.

Ryleigh grew up showing Registered Holsteins and participating in 4-H. After her family sold their farm in 2007, she and her brother would pull cows from the freestall barn their dad managed, put them on a show program and eventually began buying cattle of their own again. When they turned eight, their dad also made sure Junior Holstein became part of the equation. "He was our Dairy Bowl coach and put us through Junior Holstein activities," Ryleigh recalled.

What started there grew into years with the Tri-County Junior Holstein Club and New York Junior Holstein. Ryleigh served as a club president, state recording secretary and promotional chair before finishing her junior career in 2026 as New York Junior Holstein president, an opportunity she called "a very high honor for everything Holstein Association has done for me and my family." Somewhere along the way, she also figured out she wanted to stay in agriculture, just maybe not doing the same thing every day. Ryleigh started at SUNY Cobleskill studying agricultural science with plans to transfer to Cornell. An experience through Cornell's Junior Dairy Leader program helped change that plan. At the National 4-H Dairy Conference in Madison, she heard a Cargill marketing professional speak and realized there were careers in the dairy industry she had never really considered. "That's when I found out that there was more to being in the dairy industry than just milking cows every day," she said. For someone who readily admits she isn't particularly good with routine, communications made sense. She likes having multiple things on her plate, staying on her toes and doing something different from one day to the next. She also found a passion for promotion and outreach, particularly with connecting people who didn't grow up around agriculture with where their food comes from. That eventually took her from Cobleskill to Oklahoma State University, where she is now entering her senior year studying Agricultural Communications.

And then there was the Holstein USA internship. Ryleigh had known she wanted it for a while, and made sure the communications team knew it, too. "I really promoted myself for an entire year to the Holstein communications team that I wanted to be their intern very badly," she laughed. The interest went beyond finding a summer internship. Holstein USA was somewhere she could see herself after graduation, and she wanted the chance to find out whether it was as good a fit from the inside as she thought it might be.

"It's okay if you're nervous. That means you want it bad enough,"

Her summer started with National Holstein Convention, helping create social media posts, plan content, brainstorm photos and videos and work on scripts for both senior and junior activities. From there, no two projects looked quite the same. She worked on video, podcasts, press releases, social media and ideas for The Pulse. One project took her to Fairmont Farm in Vermont, where she interviewed the Halls, people she already knew and looked up to, and had the opportunity to share their story through Holstein USA. "That was really cool," she said, "to be able to highlight them on the platform of Holstein Association USA."

Working with Emily Bosch, Ryleigh was eventually given the opportunity to edit press releases herself, something she points to as a favorite part of the summer. Just as importantly, she began seeing more of what happens beyond the communications department: from classification and pedigrees to the data and records Holstein USA provides its members. For a young woman who grew up using those programs, the view from the other side gave her a different appreciation for them.

The summer also put some of the lessons from Junior Holstein to work. Ryleigh describes herself as independent, but years on club and state teams taught her how to work with other people, when to lead and when to ask for help. Moving halfway across the country reinforced that lesson in a different way. "At SUNY Cobleskill, I was definitely a little bit of a bigger fish in a small pond. I knew everybody. I grew up with everybody," she said. Oklahoma was different. She didn't have the comfort of being known as Ryleigh from the dairy industry or relying on the connections she'd grown up around. She had to learn to introduce herself and build relationships simply as Ryleigh. "I had to learn how to market myself, not for who I know or what I know, but just who I am as Ryleigh and who I am as a person."

Those experiences have helped shape the advice she wants to give younger Junior Holstein members now. Apply anyway. "The worst thing that could happen is a no," she said. "And that's fine, because there are so many opportunities all the time." Ask questions. Call the number on the application. Email the person who posted the internship. Find someone who has held the position before and talk to them. Ask mentors to look at your résumé and cover letter, especially when they may recognize that you're selling yourself short. And being nervous isn't a reason not to try. "It's okay if you're nervous. That means you want it bad enough," Ryleigh said, recalling advice she heard while giving prepared speeches through Junior Holstein. "If you weren't, we'd be concerned."

Ryleigh certainly took her own advice. She moved halfway across the country, spent a year making it known that she wanted this internship and jumped into just about every project the communications team put in front of her. Along the way, she found exactly what she was looking for: a chance to combine the industry she grew up in with the career she's building for herself.

David Wayne Bielby

David Wayne Bielby, age 79, of Blossvale, passed away peacefully after a brief illness, at SUNY Upstate on September 8, 2026, with his family by his bedside.

David was born in Utica on November 30, 1946, to the late Erwin and Lillian Piersma Bielby, and graduated from Camden High School. On February 20th 1971, he was united in marriage to Katherine Kalk. David worked on the family farm in Oriskany prior to the farm moving to Blossvale in 1961.

David was a member of the Holstein Friesian Association and was a charter member of the Camden chapter of the FFA. He also belonged to the Farm Bureau and the Blossvale Fire Department.

David is survived by his loving wife, Kathy; his daughters, Jennifer (Bob Greene) Maracchion, Michele (Chris) Barbato, and Marcia (Jim) Hatzinger; his son, James Bielby; his grandchildren, Amanda (Jordan) Fuller, Cortney (James) Dibble, Garret, Payton, Owen, AJ and George; his great grandchildren, Paityn, Sawyer, and Harper; his sister, Nancy Clark; and his brothers, Erwin "Butch" (Marie) Bielby Jr., and John Bielby. He also leaves behind many nieces and nephews.

He loved to haul anything that needed moving - equipment, lumber, hay, or whatever was needed. He was happiest behind the wheel. In fact, many will remember him by his driving; if you were ever in a hurry and found yourself behind him on the road, you knew you weren't getting anywhere fast. It became one of his most endearing trademarks, a small reminder of the unhurried, steady pace he lived by.

In keeping with David's wishes, there will be no services. There will be a celebration of life at a later date.

A Lifetime of Dairy History, Preserved

A firsthand look at the people, genetics and innovations that helped shape the Holstein breed and modern dairy industry, from an author deeply connected to New York & the Holstein industry.

In History of Dairy Farming in Virginia and Beyond, lifelong dairyman and Holstein breeder Walter V. McClure Sr. traces generations of change in dairy farming and the Holstein breed, drawing from more than 50 years of firsthand experience. The 376-page book features more than 150 historical photographs and explores the development of AI, genetics and breeding, technology and the people behind that progress.

Of special interest to Holstein enthusiasts is McClure's firsthand connection to Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation, from seeing the legendary bull as a day-old calf to watching his influence spread throughout the breed.

A worthwhile addition to the bookshelf of anyone who appreciates Holstein history — and the people who made it. Purchase your copy today on Amazon or contact Walter: 540-798-9828 wvmcclurew@gmail.com
