Series Synopsis

Sometimes one bad decision is all it takes. The investigators' latest cases uncover crimes from all levels of society.

Murder in the North follows police officers facing complex cases and personal challenges. With gripping investigations and emotional depth, the series offers a thrilling look into the lives behind the badge.

Murder in the North

Lars Englen

Chief inspector.

"I'm an aging macho with a heart of gold."

Lars Englen is a sharp, level-headed investigator with a keen eye for detail. Calm under pressure, he pieces together even the smallest clues with precision.

Privately, things are more complicated: his marriage has failed, his relationship with his daughter is strained, and his reserved nature keeps others at a distance. Still, he has a good heart – and a deep passion for solving crimes.

Murder in the North

Finn Kiesewetter

Chief inspector.

“Not the easiest person, but I stand by my convictions.”

Finn Kiesewetter is a detective with the Lübeck Homicide Commission and Lars Englen’s more impulsive counterpart. He often acts before thinking and doesn’t shy away from speaking his mind – even if it causes friction.

A widower with a complicated past, he’s a devoted father and still battling a long-term alcohol problem. Despite his struggles, Kiesewetter is a committed investigator who won’t rest until justice is served.

Tomke Jenssen

Detective.

“I’ve learned that you need a thick skin in this job.”

Tomke Jenssen is a squad member with the Lübeck Homicide Commission.

She is ambitious and keen to advance her career. She is a canny, highly focused detective who takes a serious and thorough approach to her work.

Murder in the North

Ida Müller-Dogan

Detective.

“I am a passionate investigator and fight hard for justice.”

She is a bright, capable detective who took a three-year break to raise her daughter. Previously with the Flensburg homicide unit, she moved closer to home in Lübeck for her family’s sake.

She’s highly organized, handles risk with care, and balances ambition with her role as a mother – always striving for the right work-life mix.

Other characters

Henning Strahl

Henning Strahl is a sharp and meticulous forensic pathologist. He plays a vital role in the Lübeck team, analyzing evidence with precision and objectivity. Though prone to lengthy explanations, he's a loyal colleague and shares a close friendship with Finn Kiesewetter.

Nina Weiss

Young and confident, Nina Weiss quickly proved herself as a valued member of the team. Dedicated and well respected, she has just returned from maternity leave and continues to play a key role in supporting investigations.

Heike Zobel

Dr. Hilke Zobel is a sharp and experienced prosecutor who backs Englen and Kiesewetter's team – as long as the rules are followed. Though she questions Kiesewetter's methods, she often defends him, even to her superiors.
