WaPo Berlin

Series Synopsis

DCI Jasmin Sayed leads Berlin's new Nautical Crime Division, WaPo Berlin, backed by a loyal team: childhood friend Paula, seasoned skipper Wolf, lively rookie Fahri, and trainee Marlene.

Set against the vibrant backdrop of Berlin – and with retired sniffer dog Stulle aboard – this unlikely crew always sticks together and gets the job done.

WaPo Berlin

Jasmin Sayed

DCI and head of division.

A passionate detective carrying out her job with conviction.

Jasmin Sayed fled Iran as a child and has called Germany home for 30 years. A firm believer in law and order, she's already proven her dedication as a tireless police officer.

Now leading the new "WaPo Berlin" unit, she relies on sharp analysis and quiet observation – and has just one weakness: good food (when she's off duty).

WaPo Berlin

Paula Sprenger

Detective.

Hast never lost the common touch.

Paula, a true Berliner with a strong sense of justice, is the team's communications expert. Quick to read people, she balances Jasmin's analytical style with emotional insight.

Sometimes she jumps to conclusions but takes setbacks with grace – "you learn from your mistakes." At home, she raises her son Anton with her partner Federico.

WaPo Berlin

Wolf Malletzke

Chief detective and captain.

Treats everyone with respect and avoids snap judgments.

Wolf is a leading expert on Berlin's waterways and prefers a cautious approach – perhaps shaped by his GDR upbringing.

A pragmatic big-picture thinker, he's rarely seen without Stulle, a stray he rescued during an undercover mission in Hamburg. Ever since, the loyal dog has been part of the WaPo crew aboard the "Silbermöwe".

WaPo Berlin

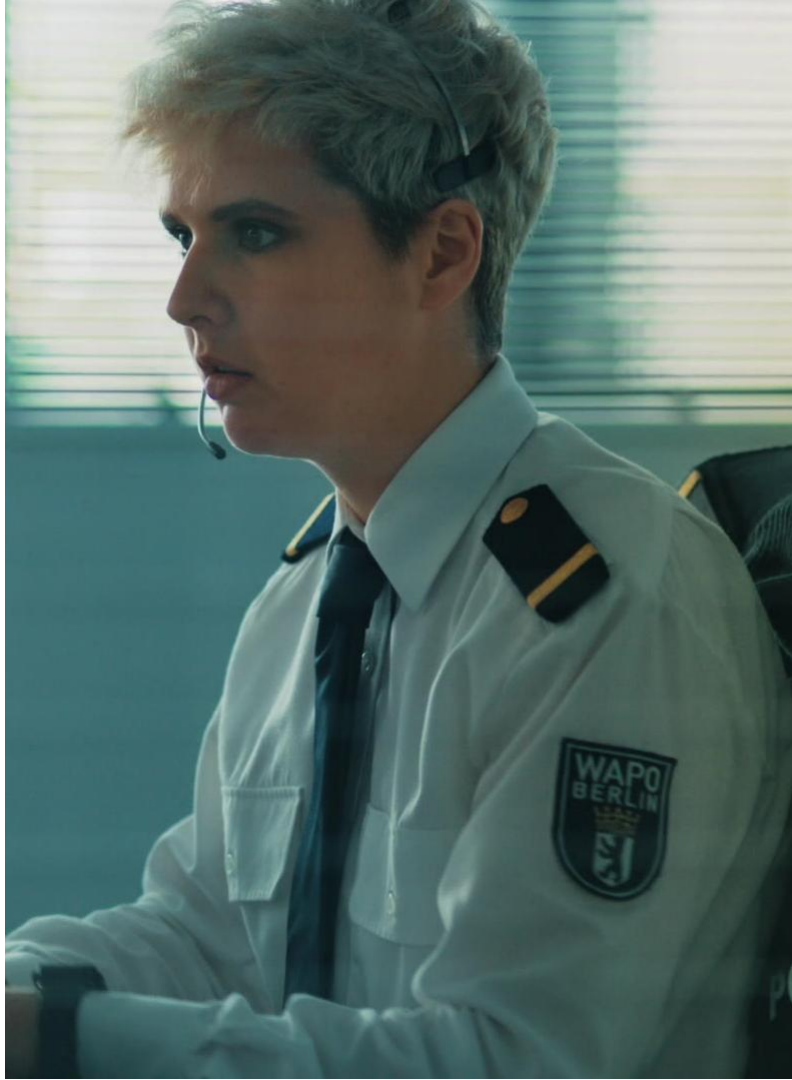

Marlene Weber

Trainee detective.

She works hard, she's a fast worker – and she loves her job.

Marlene is a computer specialist with a brain like a hard drive. She uses her IT skills to help with investigations and can quickly source and provide colleagues with relevant case data.

She also has access to data from the world outside her workplace: Berlin's culture and subcultures, which she knows better than anyone else on the team.

WaPo Berlin

Fahri Celik

Detective.

Always there when needed, with great sense of humour.

If the term “happy-go-lucky” applies to anyone, it’s Fahri. He is an eternal optimist and, as a connoisseur of two cultures, is always capable of seeing things from a different perspective.

He also knows his way around the Berlin club scene. As carefree and casual as Fahri may seem, when his colleagues need him, he's reliable, loyal and totally on the ball.

WaPo Berlin

Dr. Jan Conrad

Forensic pathologist.

Sharp-minded, diligent and dedicated to the truth.

A charismatic forensic pathologist with a rather checkered past, including a brief battle with drug addiction.

His assists the WaPo team with its investigations using his extensive medical expertise. He also keeps viewers guessing as to his intentions towards Jasmin Sayed.

WaPo Berlin

Stulle

Team member.

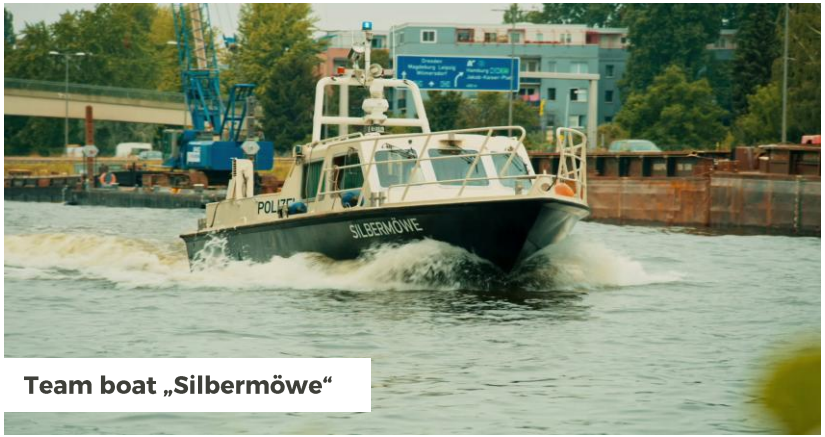

Wolf Malletzke's dog.

Stulle is Wolf Malletzke's faithful friend – and the only one Wolf could trust in his darkest days.

As a result, Stulle has earned his place on the "Silbermöwe" and is an integral part of the WaPo Team.
