Phoenix Country Day School Welcomes Mr. Brewster

Mr Brewster:

Although this is your first year at Phoenix Country Day School, your influence can be seen everywhere on campus.

You are the biggest fan of our sports teams, supporting us in every athletic event...

your school spirit can be seen at every Blue and Gold Day...

but most importantly, you have become our friend.

We thank you for the humor and friendship you have brought to our school.

Galen Brewster On Trees:

Trees speak. When there is wind, they have motion and sound. They have always been metaphors for human beings. Like people, they have roots. Like families, they have branches. Perhaps that is why wood always seems more alive than the other materials we use in our homes.

My small farmhouse in Maine is made of wood. The town records show that the whole town met there in 1820 to celebrate its completion. That's because they probably all pitched in to build it. Carpenters who worked on sailing ships cut the small wave patterns that line the stairs. They carefully shaved walnut curves in the bannisters that go up to the second floor rooms where you can see the wooden pegs that still hold the old beams together. The rooms have doors which are less than an inch thick, yet very heavy, made of hardwood panels crafted to expand and contract with the seasons without changing the perfect trueness of the whole door. This is a lost art from the days of sailing ships, as any door built this thin now would warp. The house at night makes creaky noises when the wind blows, like an old ship at sea.

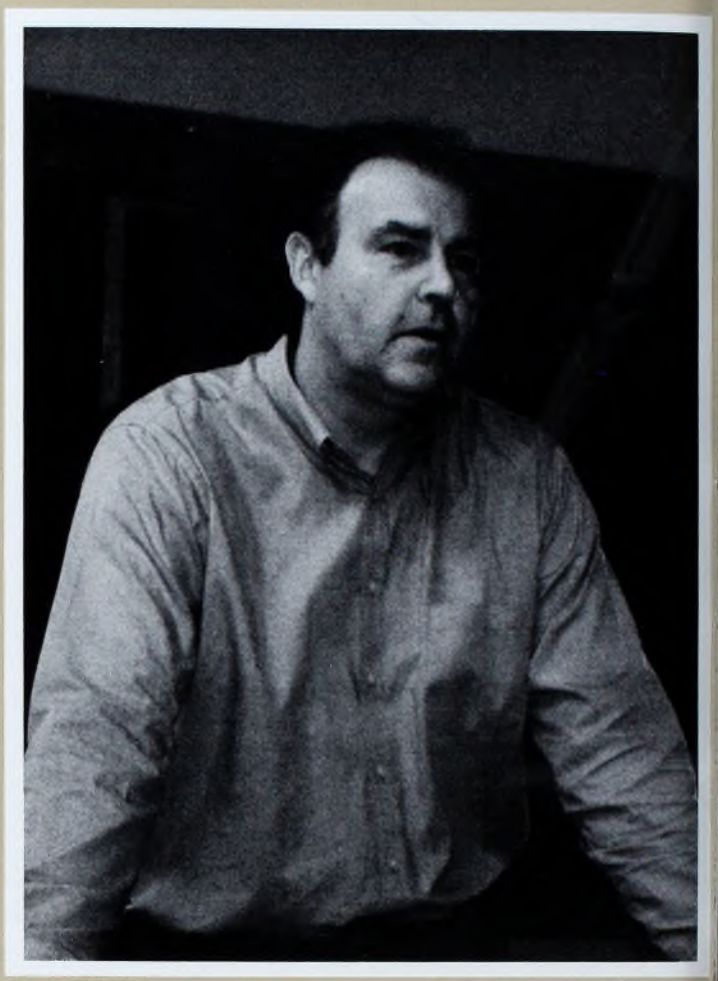
Outside the front door is a giant silver maple whose branches spread across the front of the house, giving shade in summer. It was planted for that purpose. Now its size speaks to years of service. Many the Nor'easter roaring in from the Grand Banks has stretched its limbs, but still the tree stands. In the summer, the evening breeze whispers in all the leaves.

What is the message here in wood both living and used since forty years before the Civil War? Or even more, from Redwoods standing since the time of Julius Caesar? No message at all if there is no time to stop and listen, no message at all for those who do not care for the history of each place or for the moment of mystery that someone else stood where we stand and wondered what we wonder.

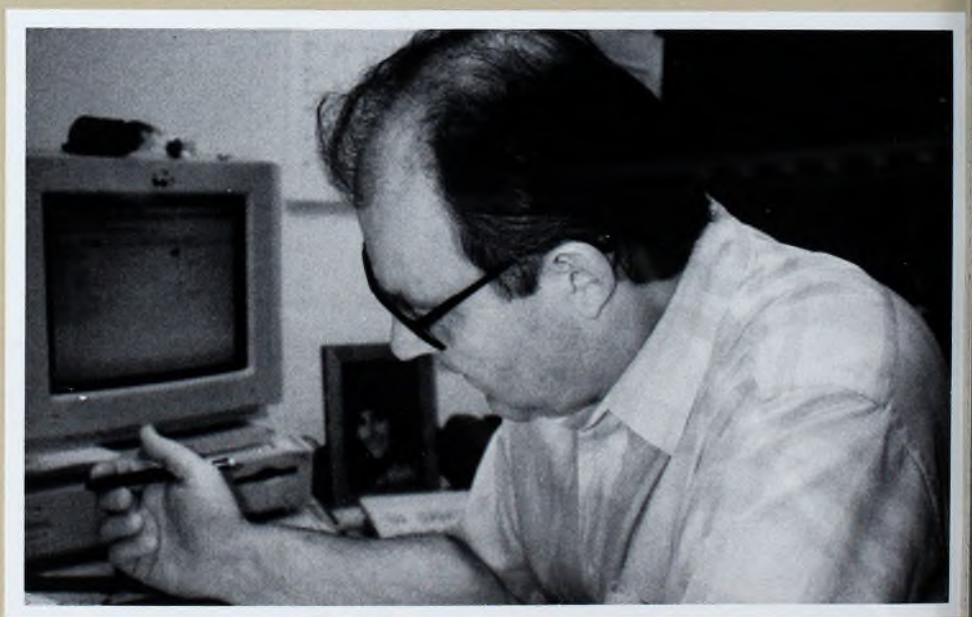
We, the senior class of 1996, dedicate this yearbook to

Mr. Swingler.

You have been an inspiration to our class as a whole, not only in the classroom, but also to each of us individually. Your sense of humor has kept us awake through many a physics class, and your wealth of knowledge reaches so far beyond. Thanks for years of fun and dedication!



We'll Always Remember You!



Mr. Swingler

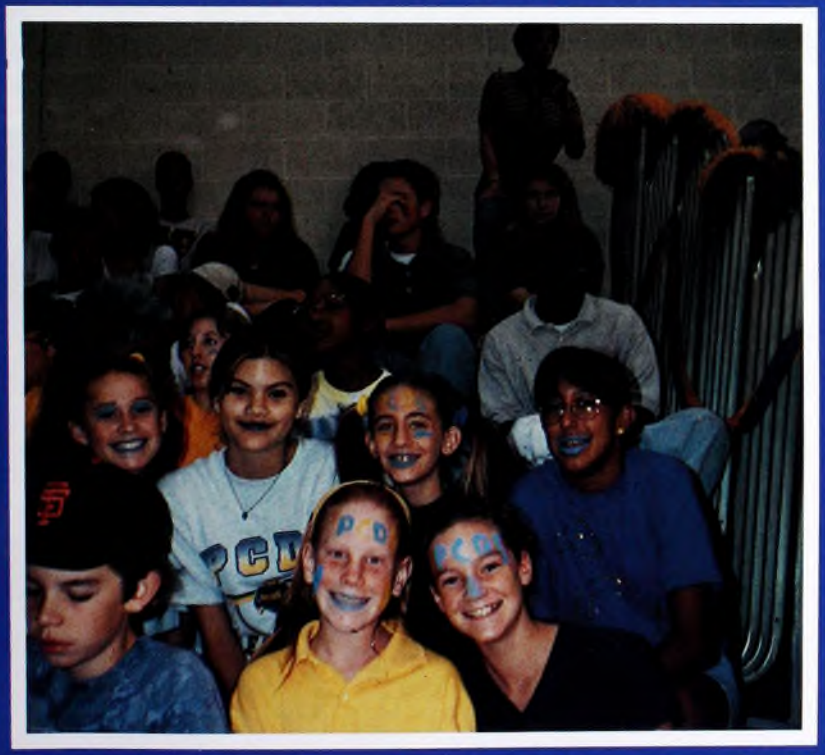
Blue and Gold Day

Go Eagles!
Beat That Cougar

Blue and Gold Day is a celebration of PCDS school spirit and pride. The day begins with a pep rally where everyone from Pre-K to Senior joins in the fun. The Lower School's tug-of-war, the flag football game of the Middle School, and the athletic moves of the faculty and Varsity Volleyball team (a tie game!!) are enthusiastically cheered on by the entire school community. Festivities continue with an afternoon filled with exciting sports competitions and culminates in the annual picnic hosted by the Booster Club. A great day!

Thunder beats Judson's sly cougar yet again!

Yeah!!



Climbing Around In Lower School

The Heads of School

Lower School

In Lower School a seed is planted. With loving care and nurture the seed sprouts. A tree is born.

In Lower School our goal is to provide a firm basis for each seedling student. Solid roots are formed in a rich environment and spread out in all directions. The tiny tree gathers strength and confidence to grow upward and branch outward in Middle School.

--Alexandra McKinley

Middle School

In Middle School the main trunk of knowledge and skills is developed upon the solid foundation established in the Lower School. This trunk with its many branches needs to be united, firm and strong, in order for the smaller branches and leaves to develop. The Middle School provides the growing students the information, concepts, self-confidence and study skills needed for their branching out into the Upper School.

--John Crabb

All photos by Kristin Altman

Upper School

The Upper School becomes the branches that grow out in all directions, eventually producing beautiful leaves that fall away and are nurtured a mari usque ad mare by the winds of college challenges and future successes.

Vuestros hijos no son vuestros hijos,
son los hijos y las hijas de la vida
vienen a través de vosotros
pero no son de vosotros
y aunque estén con vosotros
no os pertenecen.

Podeís otorgarles vuestro amor
mas no vuestros pensamientos porque ellos poseen los propios,
podeís dar cobijo a sus cuerpos
mas no a sus almas
porque sus almas habitan
en la morada del futuro
la cual no podreís conocer
ni siquiera en vuestros sueños.

Podeís esforzaros por ser como ellos
pero no intenteís hacerlos como vosotros,
porque la vida no marcha hacia atrás
ni se detiene en el ayer.

Where'er you walk, cool gales shall fan
the glade,
Trees, where you sit, shall crowd into a
shade;
Where'er you tread, the blushing flow'rs
shall rise,
And all things flourish where you turn
your eyes.

Captain and Crew of Adventuress

You're grown up now and I want to say I'm sorry I have not always been there for you, but when you needed I tried. You have asked for my advice and I gave you my best. You listened, learned and avoided many mistakes I made. I want all the world to know you make me the proudest father in the world. The world is yours, Princess. Love, Dad

Erin,

What a joy you have been. We are very proud of you and know your hard work will continue to pay off. Keep that terrific smile. We love you.

For Summer...

Although you see the world
Different than me
Sometimes I can touch upon
The wonders that you see
All the new colors
In pictures you've designed
Oh, yes, sweet darlin'
So glad you are a child of mine.

You don't need direction
You know which way to go
And I don't want to hold you back
I just want to watch you grow
Oh, yes, sweet darlin'
So glad you are a child of mine.

Nobody's gonna kill your dreams
Or tell you how to live your life
There'll always be people
To make it hard for awhile
But you'll change their heads
When they see you smile
Oh, yes, sweet darlin'
So glad you are a child of mine.

From The Editor...

YEN: Thank you for countless hours of working on the computer. The Ads look terrific and we could not have put out this publication without you! Your choices of fonts, while a bit challenging, were great.

SARAH: Your work as photo editor helped us make it through those close deadlines. You were always ready and willing to work when we asked and your pictures came out great.

MS. HOWARD: You deserve a special amount of thanks considering the many long hours you put in on this publication. Your organization this year helped us get through our deadlines on time. This year's yearbook is better organized and more creative than any publication I have seen and much of this can be attributed to your work. Thanks again!

MARY: Thank you for helping us with all our little problems (the cover).

AMY: Without your help getting the senior pages together, it would never have been done. The seniors and I thank you for all your hard work this year...always ready to help at the last minute!

MR. NEUFER: Thank you for all your technological help. Whenever confusion and chaos came about on the screen, you were always there to fix it. Thanks!

MS. LONGUST: Thank you for your work this year. Although you were new at the yearbook process, you gave up your time to learn. Your proofreading was invaluable. Thanks!

SPECIAL THANKS: Thank you to these individuals without whose work this publication would never have been possible.

To the PCDS Community:

The Phoenician is a student-run publication produced entirely by students with the assistance of a faculty advisor. The staff of the Phoenician is composed of enthusiastic and dedicated students who are willing to make a significant effort towards producing a high-quality yearbook. The yearbook is an extracurricular activity which often meets several times per week and on weekends. The time and energy put in by these students is truly commendable.

The editors, staff, and advisor have made every effort to check for spelling mistakes, omissions, and photographic errors. Despite our efforts, we apologize for any errors which may have gone unnoticed. We hope that you enjoy this year's yearbook and appreciate the generous dedication of our students.

--Ms. Howard, Faculty Advisor
