Mindful messaging, the emerging product trend

The categories and choice of products available in the promotions industry has rapidly expanded in recent years, influenced by the fast pace and exposure of social media. This has brought an increased appetite for promotional merchandise of retail quality and style. Buying patterns now reflect how seriously business is taking its impact on the environment and also how their sustainability goals are showcased in the marketing materials they choose.

Products promoting mindfulness are following a similar trend. It could be said that well-being and sustainability go hand in hand, as one of the core pillars of sustainability is the social and human element.

How is business displaying mindful messaging
There are three key trends with mindful messaging when utilising promotional merchandise.
The positive or health benefit the product itself will have on the recipient; the encouraging message that can be branded on the product alongside a logo; and the footprint that products leave on the planet.

Drinkware is one of the fastest growing categories of branded products. It has evolved far beyond a mug or thermal drink cup. Drinkware is now seen as a promoter of health; it is a reminder to the recipient that hydration is essential and selfcare is important. A branded water bottle will usually have a large print area that allows for a full colour printing option, which will bring a logo to life whilst acting as a positive tool for the recipient.

Notebooks are another top contender for promoting mindful messaging. Not only do they encourage reduced screen time, brands are requesting positive affirmations or inspiring texts to run alongside their company logos and slogans. Brands are using the edge-to-edge print areas to let the recipient know they care, along with promoting who they are.

Writing instruments are the trusty partner of the notebook and are often paired together. Writing has huge benefits for the mind, it allows us to connect with ourselves, to process and make sense of our thoughts and emotions. The management of mental health is a big topic for business and choosing promotional products that encourage this type of wellbeing is a winning combination.

There is now a root and branch approach to how companies portray their business goals. It is no longer enough to say what you intend to do; society wants to see you doing it. Made In Britain or Carbon Neutral products have grown in popularity in recent years, as they give the recipient peace of mind that what they are using has been made with limiting impact on the environment. The business choosing this merchandise is also able to leverage those credentials to portray their brand mission in action.

Mindful messaging tool kit
As society moves away from single use, it is more important than ever to choose a product that will be used again and again. Mindful messaging, whether it be the benefit to the user, the peace of mind the product gives or the inspiration the product creates, should not be overlooked in any marketing strategy. It may well be your most powerful marketing tool yet.

Welcome to UltraHD

What is UltraHD?

Within the last decade the promotions industry have benefited from advances in print technology where full-colour images can be printed directly on to the product. This allowed product decorators to offer clients the added advertising appeal that a full photographic image can offer and consequently it has been very well received in the industry. Although this was a big leap forward in technology, the process produces relatively low resolution images with a very restricted colour gamut when compared with, say, magazine quality images.

Our technical team set about developing a new print system for product decoration with the aim of dramatically improving both the resolution and colour gamut of the printed image. We are now ready to launch this new system as Ultra HD printing. A picture speaks a thousand words so have a look at the comparison below of the standard system and our new and unique Ultra HD system of printing.

As you can see, Resolution, Edge Definition, Colour Gamut and Colour Gradation have been dramatically improved to near magazine quality. This service is now available on a range of round pens and some flat items. We believe this print service will augment our current product offering and allow marketers to exploit the full potential of high definition print. Products available with this service will have the Ultra HD log next to their images in this catalogue.

Sustainable Packaging

The quest for sustainable packaging solutions is reshaping our industry. Traditional materials, usually plastics, are being rethought, ushering in innovative alternatives. Paper sleeves for pens, predominantly made from FSC®-certified paper, ensure the responsible management of forests while reducing waste. Card tubes for bottles, leaning away from plastic, championing a circular economy. Bespoke paper boxes, crafted from sustainable sources, merge environmental responsibility with refined aesthetics. Similarly, bespoke display cards made from FSC® paper elevate brands, conveying a commitment to sustainability. As consumer awareness grows, these packaging solutions don't just protect products; they symbolise a forward-thinking approach to our planet's well-being.

The Pen for Life™

Whatever your stance on sustainability, there's no denying that its in our long-term interests to cut down on non-recyclable waste.

This is especially pressing when we consider the tens of millions of plastic pens sold globally every day. Virtually none of that plastic is recycled because each pen is essentially a mixture of components manufactured from different types of plastic.

The primary non-recyclable component of a pen is the ink refill or cartridge, which unfortunately has to go to landfill because the residual ink could contaminate an entire batch of recycled plastic. Despite the issue of sustainability forcing us to direct our attention to the future, the answer to this problem may actually be found by casting our gaze to the past.

Long before the invention of the ballpoint pen came the fountain pen, but not as we know it today. Early fountain pens worked in a similar fashion to a syringe, drawing ink from a bottle up into the pen itself with the use of a device commonly called a 'converter'. What makes the traditional refillable fountain pen the perfect environmentally friendly pen is the notion that, apart from requiring the odd top up with fresh ink, nothing else is used or disposed of. There are no empty cartridges to throw away, minimal mess and no risk of ink contamination.

While the sustainability factor of a refillable fountain pen was never a motivation amongst the original models of the past, it is now a very welcome benefit when considering the preservation of the future.

The Pen for Life™ is a delicate balance of design ingenuity and practicality, with hand-engraved accents to the barrel and plain upper parts for unrestricted branding or personalisation. Manufactured from brass and triple chromium plated, the Pen for Life™ promises superior, long-lasting performance that endures the test of time.

To refill the Pen for Life™, simply use the included converter to pull ink from a bottle up into the chamber within the converter. Bottled inks come in a wider range of types and colours than cartridge inks, giving you greater opportunity to tailor your writing experience to your exact preferences.

Set for Life

The ultimate in sustainability, the Tournier set comprising refillable fountain pen and ballpen will be a life-long companion. Replacement refills are available from www.refillogy.com. Please ask for prices.

Glossary

The terminology used in graphics can be bewildering to the casual user and the following will hopefully demystify the more frequently used industry terms.

Bitmap
This casually refers to an image similar to Raster images but unlike raster images it can have it's own file format represented as .bmp.

CMYK
This refers to the subtractive colour process based on Cyan, Magenta, Yellow and Black. It is also a term that is casually used to describe the printing process that produces a 'four colour' or 'process' photographic image. CMYK are consequently referred to as the four 'process' colours. Typically, a CMYK image should not be lower than 300 dots per inch (dpi)

Definition - High
Optically, this means that the edges of a line, a dot or a pixel is sharp. However, casually it also refers to pixel density because high pixel or dot density can produce high definition.

Definition - Low
Optically, this means that the edges of a line, a dot or a pixel is not sharp. However, casually it also refers to pixel density because low pixel or dot density can produce low definition.

Four Colour Process
See CMYK.

Image Definition
Optically, this refers to the edge quality of a line, a pixel, or a dot. However, it is also casually used to describe the quality of an image based on its resolution. eg. a line may have a dense array of pixels which makes it high resolution, but if the edges of that line are blurred it will be described as having low definition.

Image Resolution
This refers to the amount of pixels or dots in a given area (usually per square inch) of a raster or bitmap image. The higher the concentration, the higher the resolution and the more it can be magnified before the pattern of dots can be resolved by the human eye. Resolution is not used as a term when referring to vector images.

Font
Also referred to as 'typeface', this refers to particular styles of letters, numbers and symbols.

Paths
Not all images are pixel based; some are defined by paths. This system uses algorithms that define the colour and shape of an outline and also the colour that fills the area confined by the outline. The benefit of vector images are that they can be magnified infinitely without losing edge definition.

Pixel
This is an abbreviation of 'Picture Element' - It is represented as a dot of a colour, and when combined with other dots can form a complete picture on a display device such as a computer monitor. A standard monitor will display 72 pixels per inch. However, if the image is output to a printer it must be converted to a minimum of 300 dots per inch (dpi).

RGB
This refers to a digital image as seen on a monitor or a scanner in which the additive primary colours Red, Green and Blue light are combined together in various ways to reproduce a broad array of colours.

Raster
This refers to images composed of dots or pixels. It can be a dot of a single colour or dots that represent a full photographic image.

Typeface
Also referred to as 'font', this refers to a particular style of letter, number or symbol.

Vector
This refers to an image that is composed of paths.

How to Supply Your Artwork

Resolution: minimum of 300 dpi.
File format: JPG, PSD, TIFF, PNG.
Fonts: To be rasterised
Vector Images
Resolution: Not Applicable
File Format: PDF, EPS, AI.

Printing on Coloured Products
The substrate colour will nearly always influence the shade or hue of a printed image. Therefore, accurate colour matches cannot normally be achieved when printing on colour substrates. If you are in doubt please order a printed sample first.

Branding Methods Explained

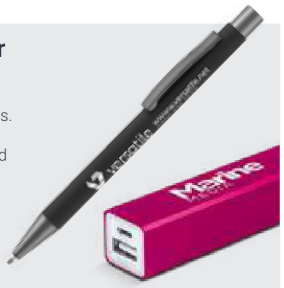

Direct Digital Printing

Direct digital printing utilises inkjet technology, firing microscopic droplets of ink on top of one another to create an almost limitless spectrum of colours, gradients and shades enabling photo realistic images to be printed directly to the product surface.

Laser Engraving - Fiber

This particular type of laser engraving is used to engrave metals. The process relies on a fine beam of light, collimated for precision and intensity to burn an image into the surface of the metal product. The resultant image is permanent and has a high perceived value.

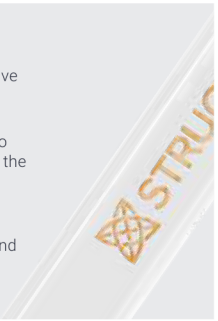

Pad Printing

Pad printing utilises a silicone-rubber pad to transfer the printing ink from an etched plate to the surface being printed. The etched areas of the plate represents the artwork that is to become the printed image. Ink is spread across the surface of the plate using a hard 'Doctor Blade' which results in the etched areas being filled with ink. This ink is then picked up by the pad and transferred to the product. The process is ideal for small print areas and where the product surface is not flat.

Laser Engraving - CO_2

This type of laser engraving is used to engrave plastic, leather and wood. Similar to Fiber lasers, the process relies on a fine beam of light, collimated for precision and intensity to burn the surface of the substrate. Generally, the light beam is not as fine as with Fiber lasers and they operate under completely different wave modulations to that process. It is ideal for engraving wooden pens, leather goods and rubberised aluminium pens.

DTG

DTG stands for 'Direct to Garment' and is the latest technology for replicating full colour and intricate images and logos onto clothing. Water based inks are inkjet printed directly onto the garment and produce stunning results which soak into the fabric making it feel part of the clothing. Only available on white clothing.

Screen Printing

This utilises a metal or wooden frame that is stretched with a very fine-woven polyester mesh. The mesh is coated with a light-sensitive emulsion, exposed to film and then developed. A stencil of the artwork results and ink can be forced through the developed areas of the stencil on to the surface of the product with remarkable precision. This process is fast, inexpensive and suitable for an almost limitless range of substrates.

Digital Transfer

Digital transfers are produced using state of the art digital technology where photographic full colour quality images can be reproduced on a specially formulated film and heat transferred directly onto the product.

Resin Domed Labels

Digitally printed, full colour self-adhesive labels dosed with hardener and resin to create a raised 3 dimensional dome over the surface. The dome has a soft feel and gives any product suitable for this process a higher perceived value. All domes are manufactured mercury free to conform to EU standards.

Debossing

This method of branding utilises a heated etched metal die that represents the artwork which is pressed into the surface of the product being printed under high pressure. The resultant image will be in relief with very striking visual effect. This process is the same as foil blocking but without the foil being present.

De-Doming

This method of branding combines two processes, debossing and doming. The debossed area houses the domed label perfectly and with stunning effect because the domed part now appears to be part of the product rather than just a self-adhesive label. This carefully thought-out process is perfect for branding soft substrates such as notebook covers.

Branding Methods Explained

Digital Embossing

This effect is produced digitally, which eliminates the need for plates, moulds and dies. High-resolution inkjet technology enable selective high-build ink deposits that mimic conventional embossing. The effect is very eye-catching as the process normally produces a contrasting texture to the original substrate. The process is ideal for soft-feel notebook covers where the contrast between matt and polish is stunning.

Large Format Printing

This term refers to the printing of very large digital inkjet prints for the production of banners, window decals, signage, exhibition panels etc. Two different methods are normally used, roll to roll printing for flexible media or flatbed printing for rigid materials.

Spot UV Varnish

Spot UV refers to the application of a UV coating to a specific area (or areas) of a printed piece rather than coating the entire surface. Used primarily as a design technique, Spot UV is a creative way to add depth and contrast through varying levels of sheen and texture.

Dye Sublimation

This very specific printing process is limited to products made from polyester or polyester-coated substrates. It involves the production of specialist transfers that are applied to the product being branded and then subjected to elevated temperatures for a given period. The colours from the transfer migrate into the polyester coating providing a near-permanent image that has no detectable 'feel'. This process is ideal for polyester garments, ceramic mugs and drinkware in general.

Foil Blocking

Also known as Hot Foil Stamping, this is one of the oldest printing processes for branding promotional products. Similar to Debossing, but with a coloured foil added to the transfer process. The benefits of this process are that the printed colours can be truly metallic and opaque. Ideal for softer substrates such as notebook covers.

Paper & Board Printing

This very broad category of printing can involve screen printing, lithographic printing or digital printing using high speed presses. It is used for the production of business cards, packaging, tags and numerous bespoke promotional products such as spiral hats, door hangers and loud hailers.

Transfer Wraps

For the ultimate branding impact, we can print around the entire circumference of the barrel on many of our pens. This 360° wrap is achieved by digitally printing onto specially formulated film and then heat-transferring the image onto the product.

Edible Ink Printing

Edible images used on food products such as cakes and biscuits are created using CMYK Inkjet printers enabled to use edible ink. Images are printed to a 1440 x 1440 dpi quality directly onto fondant icing topper producing a detailed image which is then cut out and dried overnight. Please make sure the image meets the guideline to ensure a quality print.

Labelling

This process involves the production of digitally printed images on self-adhesive paper or plastic, laminated and then die-cut to virtually any shape. Depending on the application, labels can be surface mounted or recessed within the product itself. Ideal for trolley coin inserts, keyring inserts and various forms of packaging and presentation.

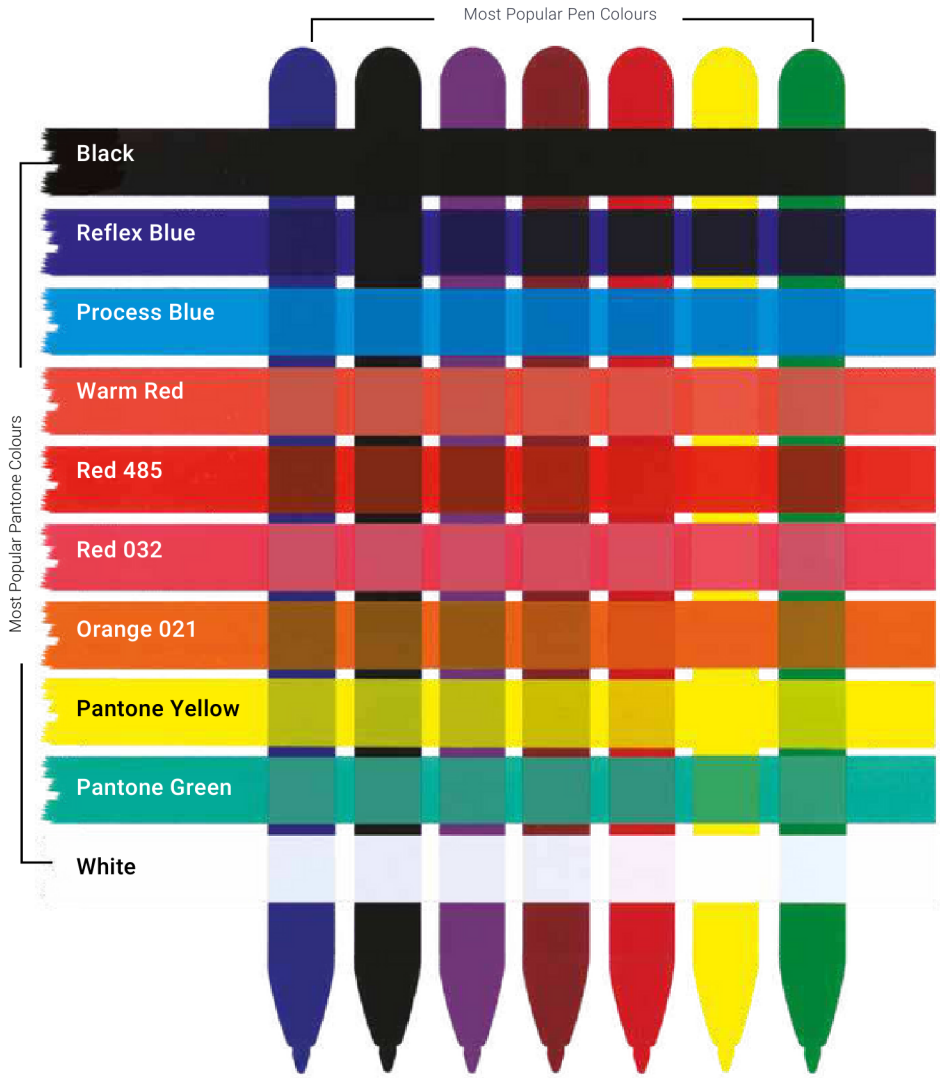

UltraHd Printing

A new print system for product decoration with the aim of dramatically improving both the resolution and colour gamut of the printed image.

Colour Matching on Non-White Materials

The most accurate colour matches can be achieved when Pantone references are provided and the surface being printed is white. In the absence of Pantone references, a colour swatch or previously printed sample is acceptable but colour matches are less accurate in this case. It is not possible to produce accurate colour matches on any surface that is not white. Surface colour always influences the printed colour (see adjacent image) and it is advisable to order a printed proof if the colour match is critical. If a printed proof is not ordered, we will assume that our best attempt to match the colour reference requested is acceptable to you, given the constraints or limitations of the ink system in use and the nature and colour of the surface being printed. As a general rule, orders for bright colours to be printed onto dark surfaces will be the least accurate, eg. white printed onto black will appear light grey when compared with true white and all basic Pantone colours and all central Pantone colours will appear very dull when printed onto black or coloured surfaces. The adjacent image shows how a number of perfectly matched Pantone colours appear when printed on coloured pens. This image is a simulation of the effect but it is derived from a precision colour scan of real screen prints on real pens. Every attempt has been made to preserve the authenticity of colour balance through each of the stages of reproduction to ensure that the finished scan reflects the true nature of how Pantone colours appear on different coloured substrates. The final stage, the printing of this page, was produced using conventional litho CMYK separations and this system, whilst not ideal, is the only feasible method for reproducing such a wide variety of colour effects. Therefore the colours achieved should not be taken as precisely correct but they are very close to the original screen printed swatch and, as such, can be safely used as a guide. Clearly, having to print Pantone colours on anything other than white is less than ideal. In reality, we usually modify colour matches to increase their opacity when overprinting non-white materials but this will always result in straying from the original Pantone reference. The resultant image may appear better than if an unmodified ink was used but it will never be an accurate Pantone match. In all cases, the colour will lose its clarity (brightness) by making it more opaque. Metallic inks (gold and silver) have a reduced life due to their formulation. No guarantee for adhesion, chemical resistance (including perspiration) or abrasion resistance can be given on these colours. Some products can be over-varnished (at additional cost) to protect metallic colours and this should be requested in writing at the time of placing the order.
