

Stepping Up in Faith

FROM THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR

On behalf of the LIFE Ministry Kenya, congratulations to our graduating interns on completing this important season of learning, service, and growth. We celebrate your dedication and the impact you have made in advancing the Gospel and building multiplying disciples.

The Digital Strategies interns have helped expand our ministry's reach through content creation, social media, campaigns, and online outreach, connecting people with life-changing biblical content. The August digital maturity training further equipped our ministry to engage effectively in the digital space. Your creativity, innovation, and willingness to learn have made a meaningful impact. Thank you for helping us take the Gospel further in the digital world.

Resourcing Africa To reach Missional Gaps

On behalf of Africa Digital Strategies, I warmly congratulate each of you as you graduate from this internship journey that began on September 1, 2025.

This graduation represents much more than completing a program. It celebrates your growth, commitment, teamwork, and contribution to advancing the Great Commission through digital strategies.

Deborah, thank you for serving faithfully as the class representative and for your contribution in content strategy and training.

Nicholas, your strength in analytics and social media management has demonstrated the importance of using data to make our digital ministry more effective.

Ian, your work in content creation and partnership with the Jesus Film Project reminds us of the power of collaboration and relevant media in reaching people with the Gospel.

Jane, your contribution in communication and social media management has helped strengthen how we connect and engage with people in digital spaces.

I am especially proud that all four of you participated in our Africa Digital Champions Summit (ADCS) and became part of a much bigger continental vision.

When you began this journey, you were challenged to reach one million people through social media. Today, we celebrate that through this program, you achieved that goal. That is significant!

For Africa Digital Strategies, internships are not simply opportunities to gain experience. They are part of our strategy for identifying, developing, mentoring, and releasing the next generation of digital missionaries and leaders across Africa. Africa is young, connected, and ready. We need thousands of young leaders like you who understand that a phone, a platform, content, analytics, and communication can all become instruments for the Great Commission.

Congratulations! This graduation is not the finish line; it is your commissioning into a greater digital harvest.

May God continue to use each of you to reach, disciple, and mobilize many more across Kenya, Africa, and beyond.

With congratulations and blessings

Faith, growth, and fruitfulness

Today, I am filled with gratitude as I celebrate four interns who have successfully completed their 366-day internship with Digital Strategies. This is the fourth cohort that Digital Strategies has run, and each cohort has been unique in its own way.

The journey began with seven interns who were accepted into the programme. Along the way, three were unable to continue for different reasons.

One was unable to proceed due to parental concerns, despite making progress in raising support. Another stepped away because of concerns about Ministry Partner Development (MPD), while another chose to reconsider the journey. The four who remained chose to look unto Jesus and continue faithfully.

Although I lack enough adjectives to fully describe this amazing team, here are just a few qualities that stand out:

a. Teachable

They were always willing to learn and put what they learned into practice. Time and again, they were willing to go deeper and step outside their comfort zones.

b. Agile

They were willing to try new things, adapt to new situations, and respond positively to new assignments and directions.

The year was not without challenges. The interns learned to depend on God for provision and to step out in faith, trusting Him even when they did not know how their needs would be met. On several occasions, they experienced God's provision in unexpected ways, reminding them that He is faithful and that His resources are never limited.

As the fourth Digital Strategies internship cohort completes this significant chapter, we celebrate their dedication, courage, willingness to learn, and commitment to the mission. They began the journey as interns, but along the way, they became a family and emerged as young leaders prepared for the next season of service.

As they move forward, we pray that they will continue to look unto Jesus, trust Him for provision, remain teachable and adaptable, and stay available for whatever He calls them to do.

Their journey reminds us that challenges may come, but God remains faithful through them all.

A Year of Grace

I stepped into this one-year ministry internship with big dreams, excitement, and a checklist of what I hoped to accomplish. I imagined a season of mastering leadership tools, building practical skills, and seeing visible fruits in the Ministry. What I didn't realize was that God had a different curriculum for my heart, one that shifted my focus from what I could do for Him to learning to trust Him with the results.

That lesson began early through faith-based support raising (DMPD). Expecting smooth progress, I encountered silence and an unmet target, which made me question my path.

Was I doing enough? Was I truly called to this? Yet, in that uncertainty, God faithfully provided for every need. Support raising became more than raising funds; it was His gentle way of stripping away my self-reliance and teaching me that my security rests in Him alone, not in circumstances or numbers.

Stretched, Mentored, and Awakened

Through the New Life Training Curriculum (NLTC), my understanding of leadership was re-shaped. I learned that leadership is not about position or directing others, but about serving, nurturing, and helping people step into God's calling.

This became practical as a leader entrusted me with responsibilities such as facilitating training and supporting strategic initiatives.

Millions of people spend their lives online, making digital spaces a significant mission field.

I learned that digital evangelism is not primarily about likes, views, or numbers; it is about reaching real people, understanding their stories, and bringing them the hope of Christ.

Refined by Grace

Engaging in online gospel campaigns brought this truth into focus. Interacting with people from different walks of life required patience, attentive listening, and faith. Each interaction reminded me that every soul matters deeply to God.

Looking back, the greatest transformation of this year is not measured by tasks completed or events hosted, but by the person I am becoming.

God used the triumphs, challenges, and even my need for greater discipline and spiritual consistency to teach me grace rather than perfection.

I finish this internship changed, with deeper faith, clearer vision, and a renewed passion to make Christ known. As this chapter closes and a new one begins, I move forward with confidence. I may not know what lies ahead, but I know the faithful God who holds my future.

DIGITAL STRATEGIES INTERNSHIP STORIES

Behind every Screen

It is strange how God can use something as ordinary as an internship to teach you something unexpected.

When I joined the Digital Strategy team at The LIFE Ministry Kenya, I expected to gain skills and experience. However, God was doing something deeper in me, reshaping how I understood ministry, mission, and my own calling personally. I began to think less about what I could achieve and more about people, the Gospel, and how my abilities could be placed in God's hands for His purposes.

Through NextSteps, digital evangelism initiatives, training, and social media campaigns, I discovered that ministry can happen through a phone screen, social media post, WhatsApp conversation, digital resource, or simple message.

I began to see technology as a mission field.

One of the most meaningful lessons was realizing that behind every screen is a person. Every username represents someone with a story, struggles, questions, dreams, and a deep need for hope.

I learned that digital evangelism goes beyond counting likes and responses. It is about seeing people, listening to them, meeting them where they are, and pointing them toward Christ. I learned to trust that seeds planted quietly can be used by God. Ministry Every Day

The internship stretched me in teamwork, communication, humility, and discipline. Starting a Bible study group with two friends reminded me that ministry is not something I prepare for in the future; it is something I can practice every day.

I now see the mission field in communities, schools, churches, and digital spaces.

The greatest lesson is that God asks us to surrender what we have, trust Him, and allow Him to do what only He can do.

Multiplying Disciples in Digital Spaces

I desired to be part of the Great Commission and to engage in online evangelism. I was passionate about using digital platforms to share the Gospel and reach people with the message of Christ. But one question kept coming to mind: Where should I begin?

God, in His faithfulness, opened a door for me to join the Digital Strategies team at The LIFE Ministry Kenya as an intern. What began as an opportunity to learn about online evangelism soon became a much deeper journey of understanding ministry, discipleship, and my own calling.

I discovered that ministry is not simply about sharing the Gospel and making disciples; it is about intentionally discipling people who will, in turn, disciple others. I began to see online platforms not merely as tools for communication, but as spaces where meaningful relationships can be built and lives can be transformed through the Gospel.

Through this experience, I have grown both spiritually and personally. My walk with God has been strengthened, and my understanding of ministry has expanded. I was particularly amazed by the intentional structure and equipping that goes into preparing ministers for effective ministry.

From learning about raising support and attending classes to receiving mentorship and practical ministry training, I began to understand that effective ministry requires more than passion. It requires preparation, discipline, humility, dependence on God, and a willingness to keep learning.

The internship also challenged me to look beyond immediate results. In digital evangelism, it can be easy to become focused on results instead of relationships and transformed lives.

I began to see online platforms not merely as tools for communication, but as spaces where meaningful relationships can be built and lives can be transformed through the Gospel.

As I look ahead, I am grateful for how God answered the question, “Where should I begin?” He led me to an opportunity where I could learn, serve, grow, and be equipped for the work of the Great Commission.

I may have started with a desire to reach people online, but I leave with a greater desire to see those people disciplined, equipped, and empowered to reach others. My prayer is that everything I have learned will continue to be used for God’s glory and for the multiplication of disciples.

DIGITAL STRATEGIES INTERNSHIP STORIES

A Harvest Beyond Measure

Building ministry partnerships strengthened my faith and taught me kingdom stewardship, faithful partnership, and dependence on God.

From cross-cultural outreach in Samburu to grassroots evangelism in Birika, Kajiado, where we partnered with local pastors, I witnessed how the Gospel breaks down barriers, transforms lives, and builds enduring spiritual communities.

When I began my journey as a ministry intern with The LIFE Ministry Kenya in September 2025, I carried a heart eager to serve and a willingness to step into uncharted territory.

Through the New Life Training Curriculum (NLTC), I gained essential tools for personal evangelism, discipleship, and mentoring believers toward movement-building.

The internship also expanded my understanding of digital ministry through the Africa Digital Champions Summit 2 in Dar es Salaam and an interactive online Easter campaign.

Integrating digital media with local follow-up showed me how technology can bridge distance, create meaningful connections, and foster genuine discipleship. I learned that effective digital ministry requires intentional engagement, relationship-building, and connecting people to communities where they can continue growing in Christ.
