EDITORIAL NOTE

A college is more than just classrooms; it is a space where voices are discovered and ideas take shape. This magazine reflects that journey, bringing together the creativity and experiences of students who observe, question, and express the world around them.

In this inaugural volume, our contributors explore identity, social realities, and the human side of technology through essays and poetry. Beyond showcasing talent, this publication serves as a platform to encourage dialogue and critical thinking within our community.

We extend our sincere gratitude to the Buzz Student Society and all contributors for their dedication. We hope these pages inspire you to think deeply and engage meaningfully with the world.

نعتِ رسولِ مقبول ﷺ

وہ شافعِ اُمم ختم الانبیاء
محبوبِ خدا و تاجدارِ انبیاء
ہوا نازل جن پر کلامِ الہی
عطا ہوئی جن کو نبوتِ آخری
وہ جو قییموں کے ملجا
وہ جو غریبوں کے مادی
کرے سلام جن کو آسمان و زمیں
پکاریں دوست و دشمن صادق و امیں
خواہ ہو فتح مکہ یا غزوہ بدر
دشمن کو کرتے تھے درگذر
بسائے دل میں اپنی اُمت کی محبت
پکاریں میری امت میری امت
دل میں دھڑکتا نام ہے جن کا
محمد عربی پیارا نام ہے اُن کا
سلام اُن پر درود اُن پر
تمام جانیں قربان اُن پر

The Age of Intelligent Machines

We are living in the Age of Intelligent Machines, a time when technology feels more powerful than ever before. Machines can now learn from data, recognize patterns, and make decisions on their own. What once seemed like science fiction is now part of everyday life. Intelligent machines are shaping how we communicate, work, and understand the world around us.

One of the most noticeable changes can be seen in our daily routines. Smartphones can unlock with our faces, recommend music we might like, and answer questions instantly.

Virtual assistants help us manage schedules and find information in seconds. These small but meaningful tools show how deeply intelligent machines are woven into modern life.

In education, intelligent machines are transforming the way students learn. Online platforms can adapt lessons to match a student's pace and learning style. This makes learning more personal and engaging. Students can receive instant feedback, which helps them improve faster and feel more confident.

Healthcare has also been greatly improved by intelligent machines. Doctors use advanced technology to detect diseases earlier and more accurately. Machines can analyze medical data quickly, helping save lives. With this support, healthcare professionals can focus more on caring for patients.

The workplace is changing as well. Intelligent machines handle repetitive tasks, making jobs more efficient. This allows workers to spend more time on creative and problem-solving activities. While some jobs may change, new opportunities are also being created in technology and innovation.

In conclusion, the Age of Intelligent Machines is shaping the future in powerful ways. When used wisely, these machines can improve lives and open new possibilities. By working together, humans and intelligent machines can build a future that is smarter, more balanced, and full of hope.

POETRY

I PURPLE YOU

*There are seven shades in the rainbow sky,
Yet I Purple my dreams, and I'll tell you why.*

*Not Gray that fades, nor Pale Pink that flies away,
I choose the hue that stays till the final day.*

*It stays till the end, serene and true,
A promise that whispers, "Dreams will Purple you too."*

*If I Purple my dream and give it my all,
It will lift me high; it won't let me fall.*

*It holds a promise, calm and deep,
A vow that dreams are mine to keep.*

*If I Purple my dream with all my might,
It will guide my path; it will gift me light.*

*I've known the Red of pain and fight,
And Blue of sorrow in the quiet night.*

*Yet Red and Blue, when faithfully combined,
Become the Purple prize I'm bound to find.*

*I dream big now, with steadfast will,
The climb is long, yet my heart is still.*

*If I don't change my color true,
My dream will Purple me back, it's true.*

*Though all may leave, my dream will stay,
Through storm and calm, through night and day.*

*It paints my soul in a loyal hue,
A shade that whispers, "I trust in you."*

*My dream, I give my heart to you,
With steady hands and vision true.*

*And working now with spirit whole,
You'll Purple back my waiting soul.*

*Of the future, calm and true,
Purple my dream. I do."*

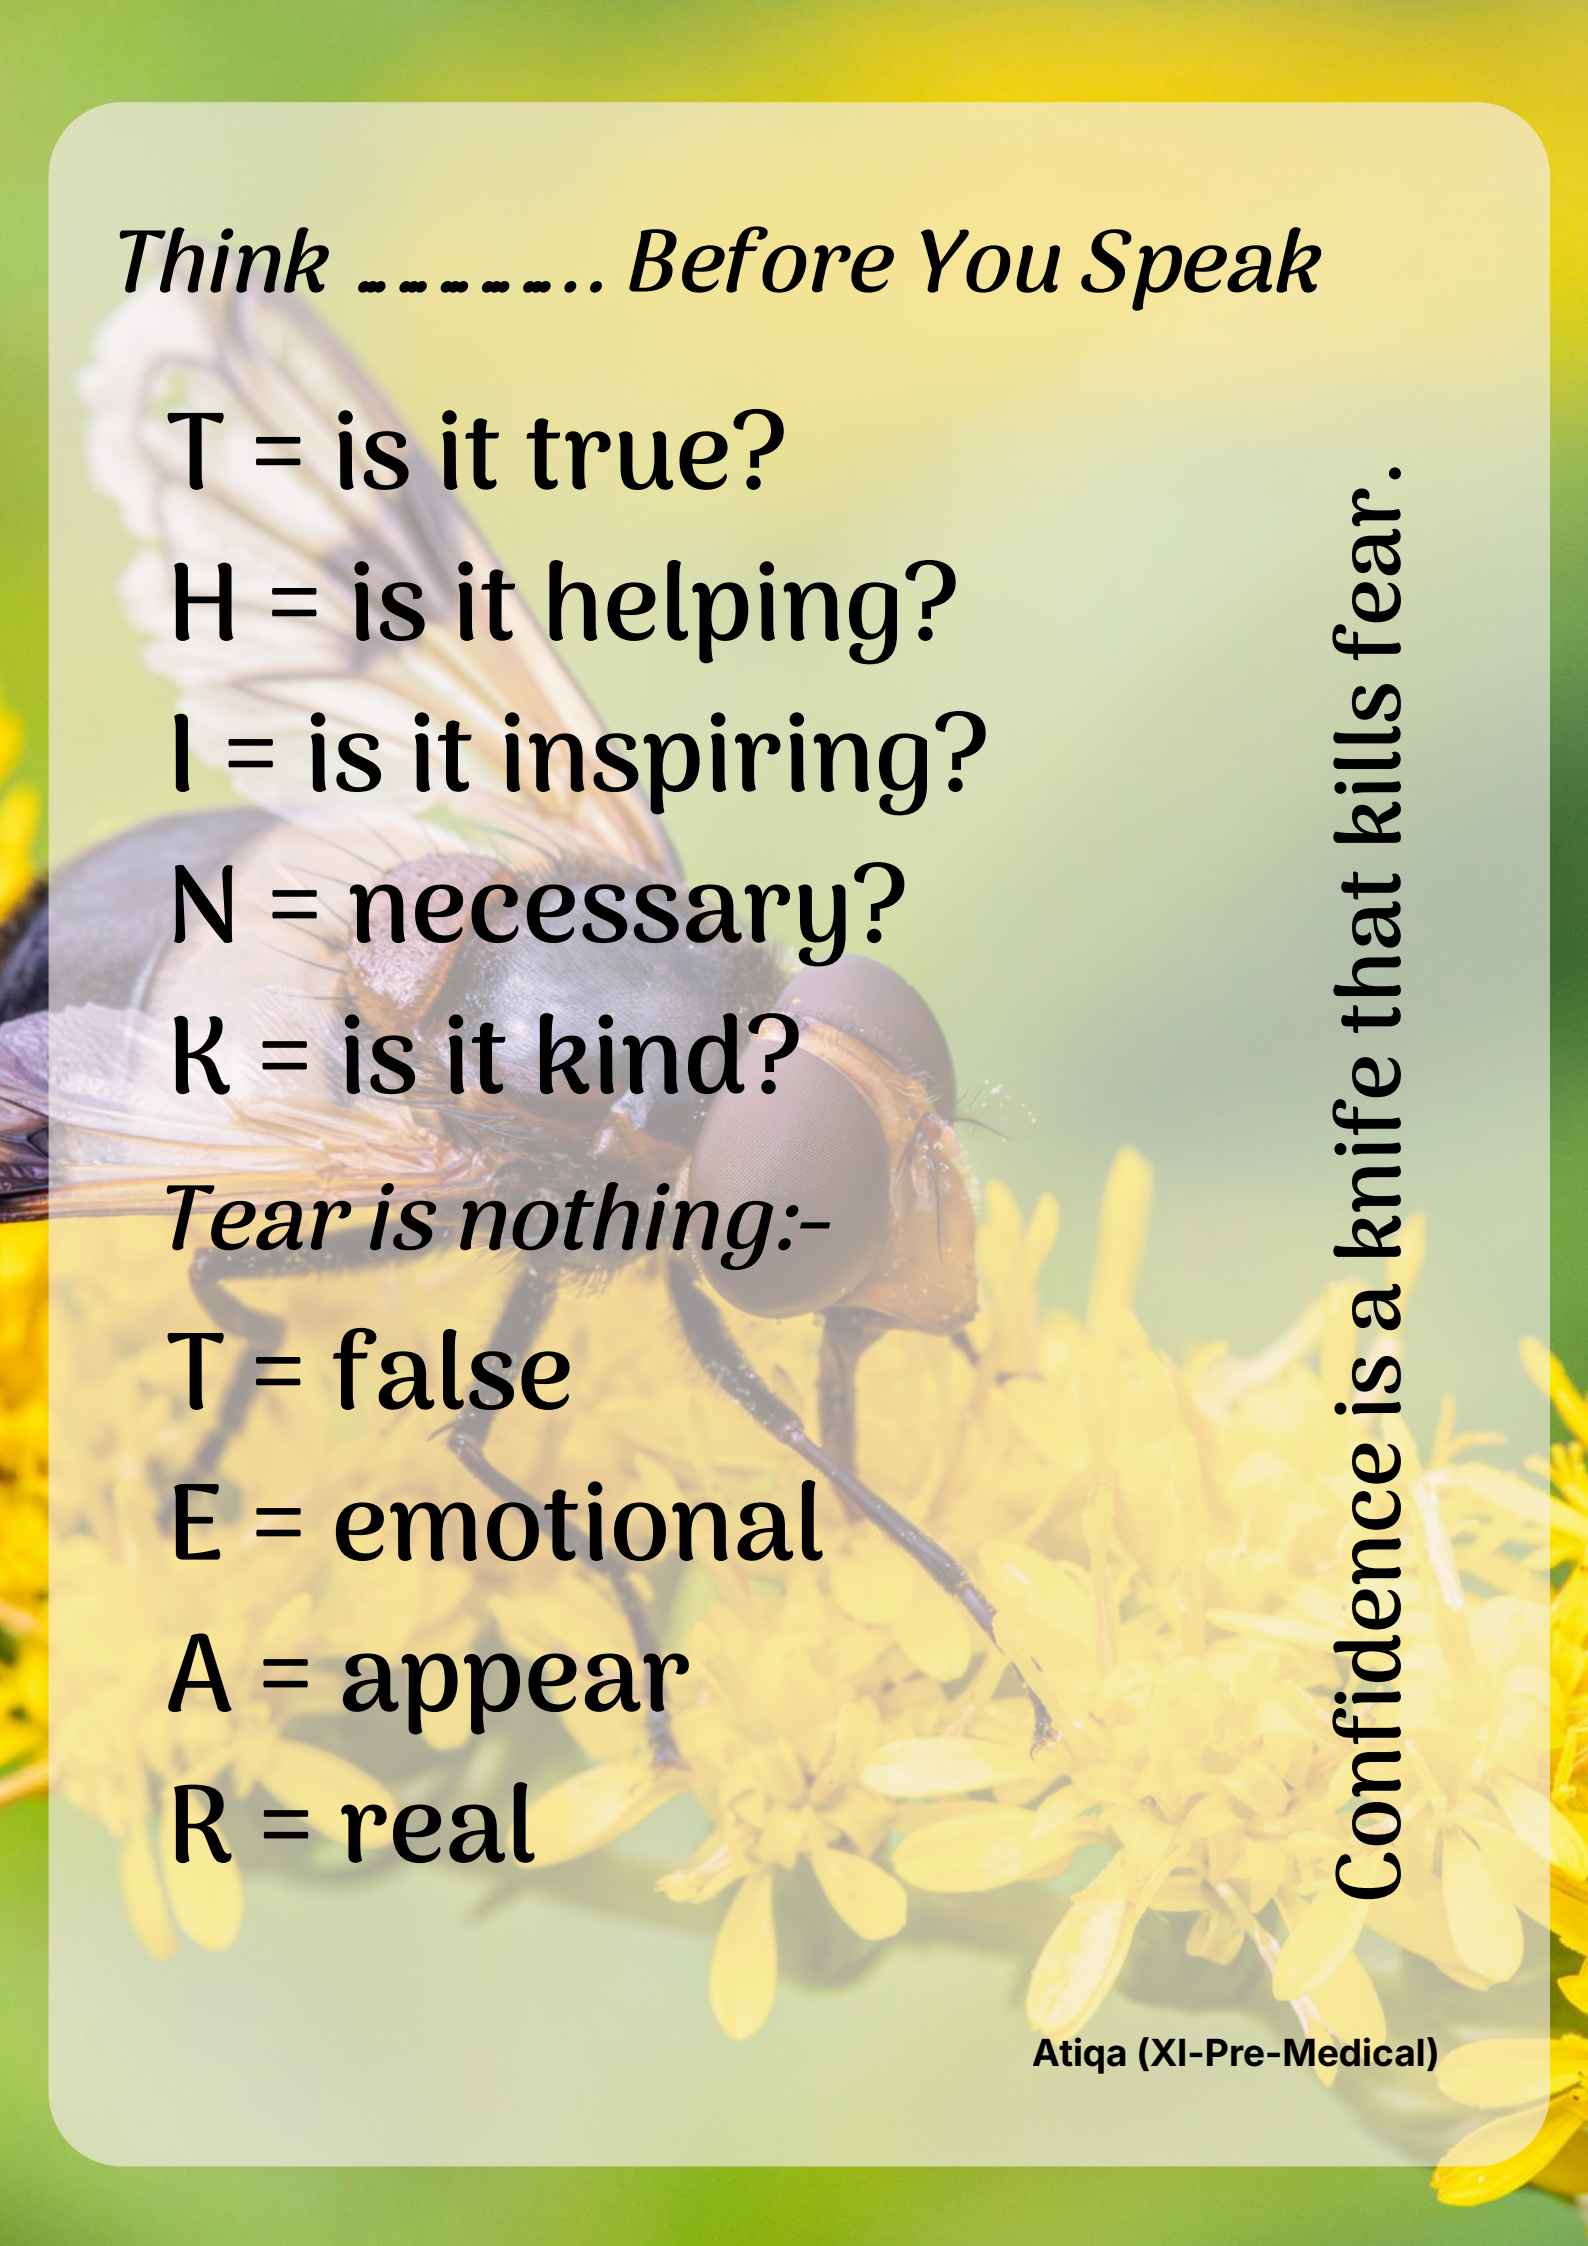

*For it I Purple my dream today,
My dream will Purple me back someday.*

Author's Note:

"I Purple You" expresses my belief that dreams respond to the love, loyalty, and effort we give them. Just as purple is born from red and blue, from pain and sorrow, our dreams also grow through both struggle and heartache. To 'Purple' my dream means to stay true to it with honesty and faith, trusting that one day it will return that light to my soul.

"Rebellious Art"

No lens can capture your style is rapture
Your colour's so fierce they make my sight fracture

Each brushstroke of yours is a story teller
A story that burns a rebell-yeller

From Kandinsky's storm to Piet's straight line
You breath freedom, chaos, calm and design.

From Pollock to Rothko design rebellion breathing something divine.

from brush to soul, you broke the chain from reality's rule to emotion reign

Through chaos and calm you still remain
Colour symphony is the wild domain

POETRY

MOTHER'S EMBRACE

She never let you in rain
But slowly let herself drain

She feeds you first
While keeping herself last

Melancholy for your pain
Travels to her every vein

Your attainments — strengths matter her the most
Counted upon in her duas the most

The listener to your dramas
And solution maker for your traumas

In tears of sorrow, she is the solace
The safe harbour to rely on in every race

Looking in her eyes, full of cinnamon and honey
The end to your menacing worry

Her subtle lessons and authority
Like the rivetting river, guiding your maturity

MOM is just a
Reflection of WOW

MOM
WOW

She caresses your hair
And her hands tangled in your hair

Her voices are heard by your ears
While her wishes echo in your wears

The expectations are like a running train
When life is full of heart-felt efforts
Not in vain

Have we ever wondered about the hidden Support, selfless love and vastness of wisdom In precious MOTHERHOOD — a milestone blessing

THE MIRROR OF SOCIETY

In streets that hum with restless sound where dreams are lost and hopes are found
The crowd that moves on, a faceless sea
Each soul a world, yet none feel free

We build our walls of glass and pride hide truth and pain we keep inside
We praise the rich, forget the poor and guard our hearts behind closed doors

The young are taught to chase the gold
To buy respect, to not grow old
While kindness sleeps in shallow graves and fashion crowns the silent slaves

The voices weak are seldom heard
Their cries dissolve in empty words
Justice wears masks, and truth is frail while greed still writes the holy tale

So let the students rise and speak
For peace and truth the brave still seek let books and pen, not swords decide
The world we shape, the dreams we guide

Society's a mirror clear
Reflecting all we hate and fear, but if we dare to see anew
the world will change because of you

“MY BOOKS”

Books are a treasure
They give me pleasure
Preserved in my chest
Cause they are the best
They are a source of light
That makes me smile
They are my friends
Who make me smile
When I read books,
I forget every thing
For my precious book,
I can neglect anything
Books are knowledge, Pleasure and fun
And I like books more than anything
The give me pleasure,
Preserved in my chest
Cause they are the best

Because it means: "End of Thinking Capacity"

Silent Pressure to Be Perfect

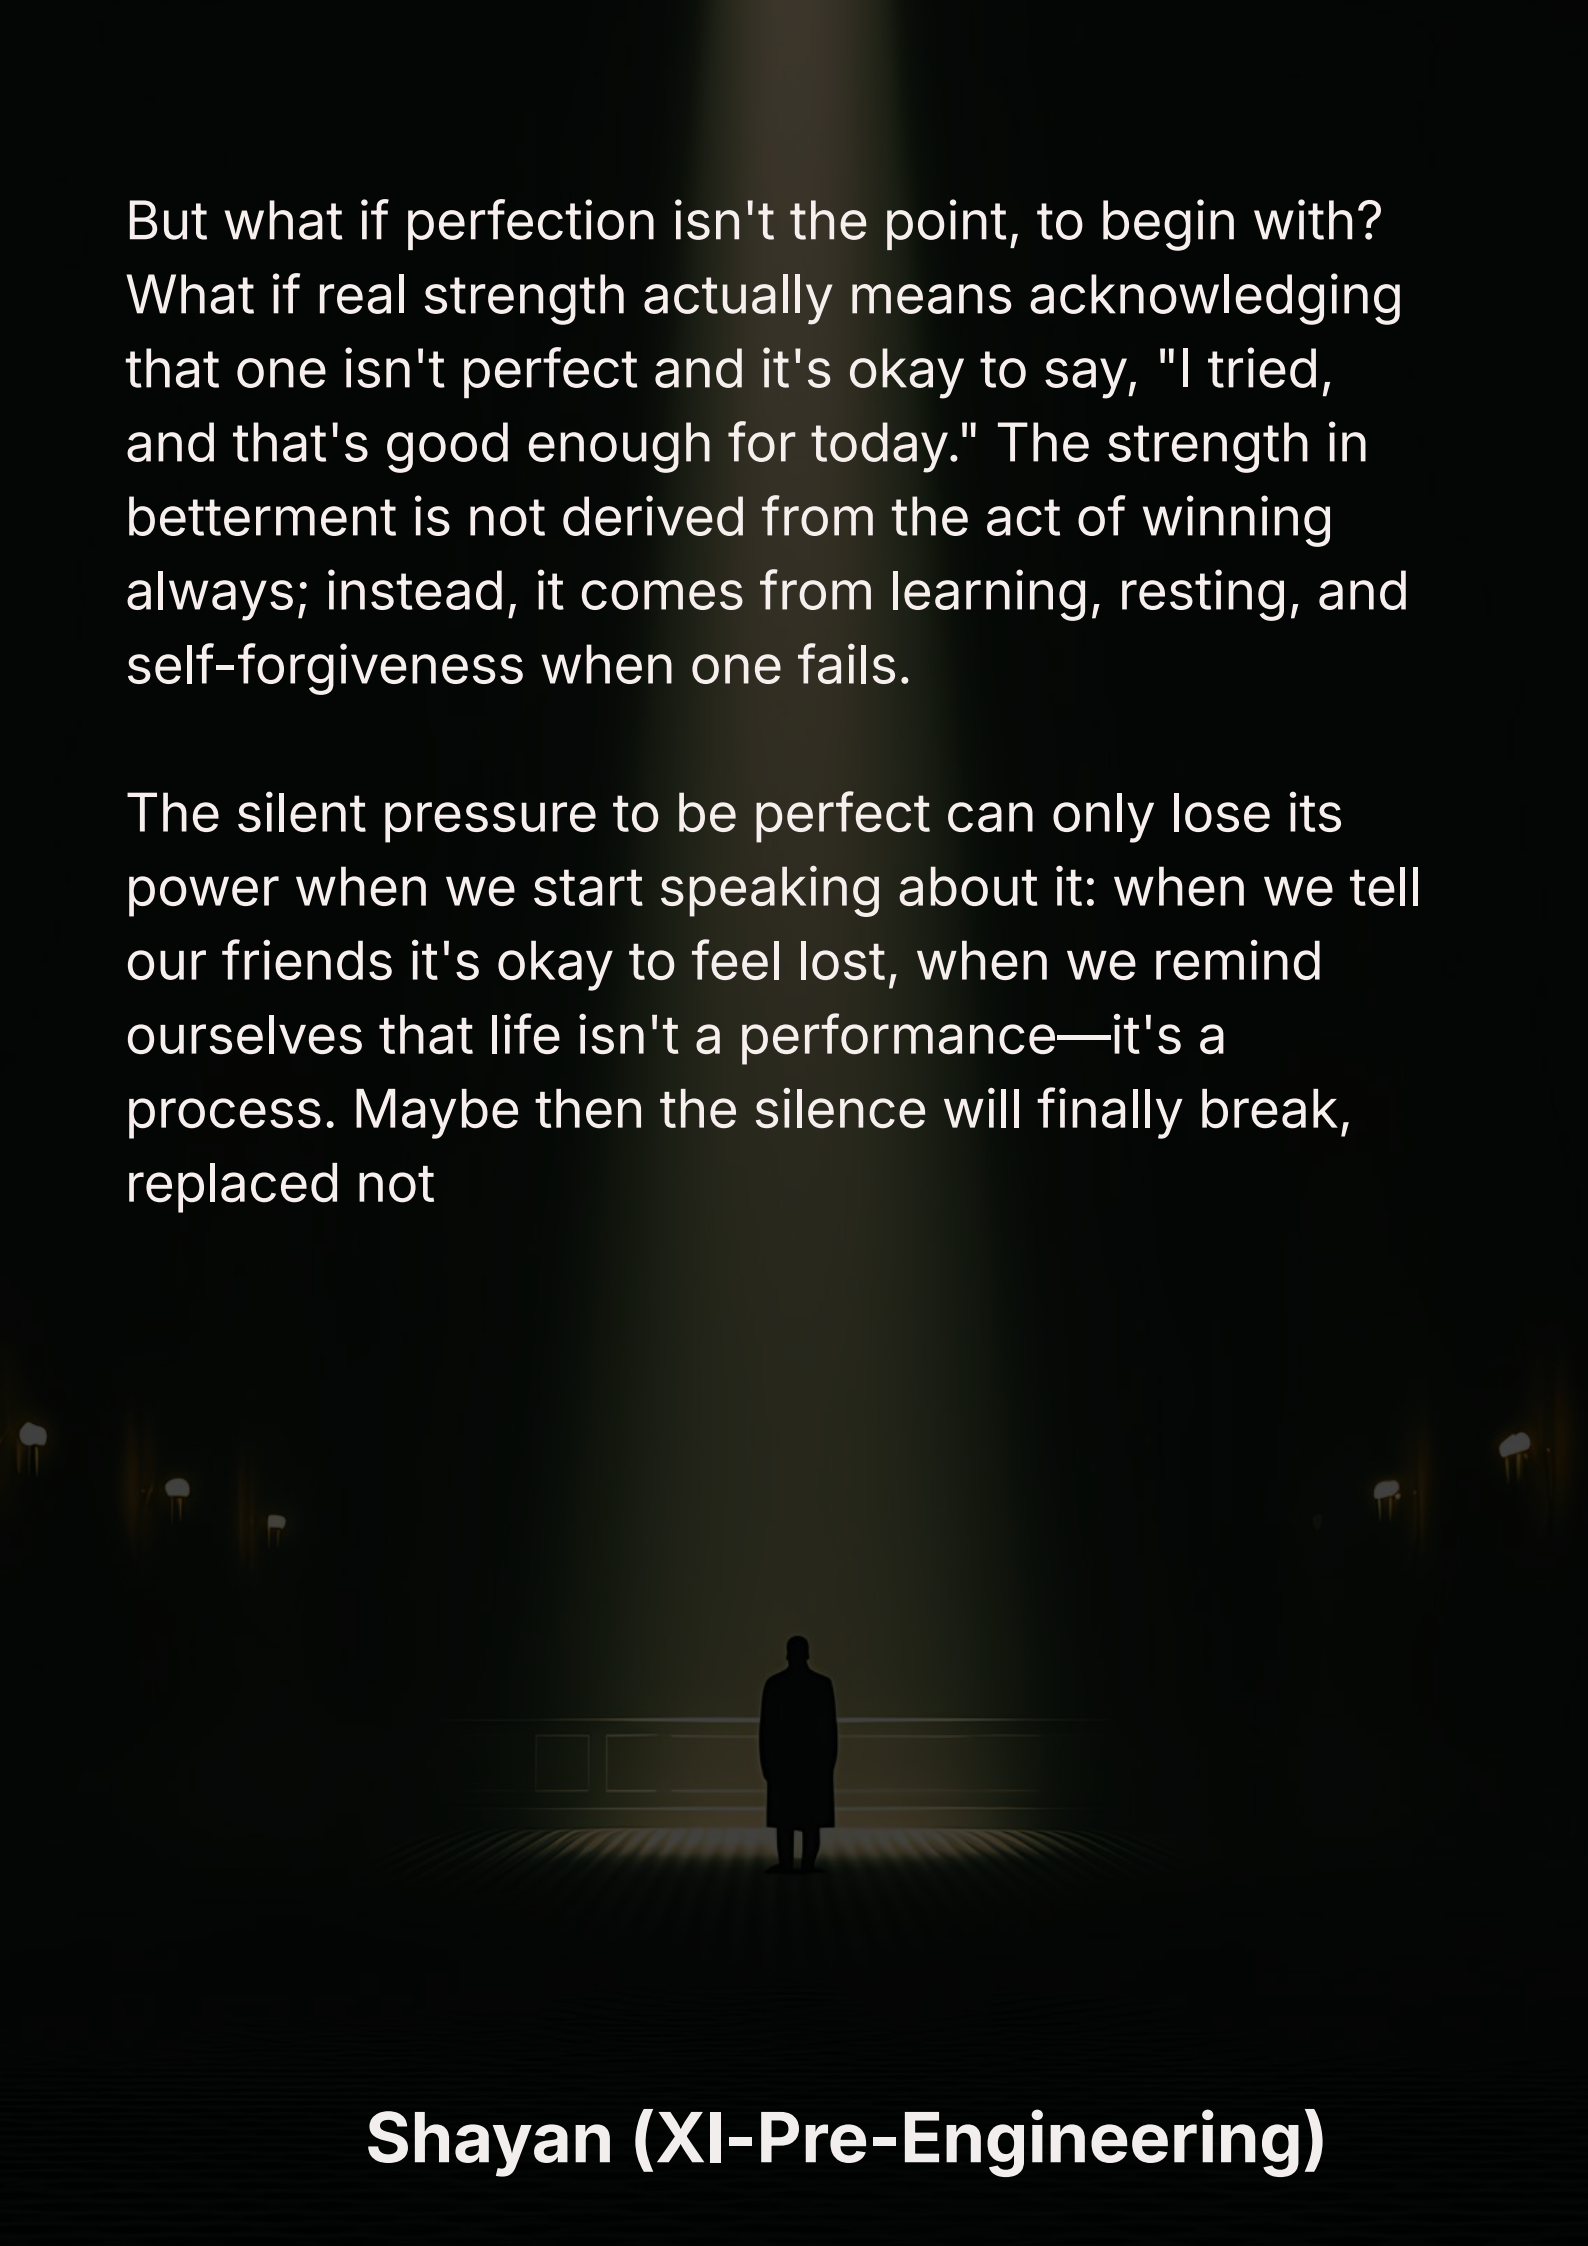

Perfection is quiet; it doesn't scream, but it whispers always. It tells us to smile even when we are tired, to perform even when unsure, and to compete even when we no longer know why. Somewhere between grades, goals, and expectations, we've learned to measure our worth in achievements instead of peace.

Today's world cheers on success stories but rarely speaks of the weight they carry. We scroll through perfect-life pictures, listen to stories of people who "made it," and silently compare our behind-the-scenes to someone else's highlight reel. The pressure to be perfect doesn't always come from others; it quietly grows within, fed by the fear of falling behind.

In classrooms, students chase flawless results; in friendships, we hide flaws to appear composed; online, we curate our lives like exhibitions. We've become so busy proving we're okay that we forgot how to actually be okay. Even failure, once seen as a step toward growth, now feels like a personal flaw rather than a human experience.

But what if perfection isn't the point, to begin with? What if real strength actually means acknowledging that one isn't perfect and it's okay to say, "I tried, and that's good enough for today." The strength in betterment is not derived from the act of winning always; instead, it comes from learning, resting, and self-forgiveness when one fails.

The silent pressure to be perfect can only lose its power when we start speaking about it: when we tell our friends it's okay to feel lost, when we remind ourselves that life isn't a performance—it's a process. Maybe then the silence will finally break, replaced not
