A LETTER FROM HOME

"Every place has a story. Every family leaves a legacy. Welcome home."

There is something about Montana that changes you.
Maybe its watching the sun rise over the prairie or the mountains, hearing an elk bugle on a crisp September morning, casting a line into a stream, or simply driving a backroad with your favorite person or pooch. Whatever it is, this place has a way of getting into your soul.

To me, Montana has always been more than a place to live. It's home. Its where familes build traditions, where neighbors still wave when they pass, where hard work means something, and where the stories that came before us continue to shape the generations that follow.

That is why I created Montana Legacy Journal. This magazine isn't simply about real estate. While you'll certainly find beautiful Montana properties thourghout these pages, my hope is that you'll discover something much deeper.

Each issue is designed to celebrate our Montana way of life. We'll explore our rich history, unvoer hidden places worth visiting, share stories from remarkable people, highlight local businesses, offer seasonal recipes, showcase outdoor adventures and provide insights into the ever-changing real estate market that impacts our communities.

As a broker, I have the priviledge of helping people buy and sell some of the most meaningful places they'll ever own. But what inspires me most isn't the transaction- it's the life that unfolds afterward. The family dinners, the opening day of hunting season, kids catching their first fish, and generations gathering around a dining table built on Montana values. Those are the stories worth telling.

Thank you for being a part of this journey and supporting Stahllion Real Estate Co. Your trust means more than words can say and I'm honored to share this with you!

Welcome to Montana Legacy Journal.

An Untold Story of Montana's Past, Present & the Legacy Yet to Come

"The mountains remember what we often forget. Long before state lines were drawn or towns appeared on maps, Montana was already telling its story."

History often remembers the loudest moments.

The first expedition. The riches gold strike. The famous battle. The day Montana became the 41st state.

But the true story of Montana was never written by history alone.

It was written by the people who quietly endured.

It was written by Indigenous families who cared for this land for thousands of years before borders existed. By immigrant miners who descended into darkness each morning hoping to return home to their families. By ranch wives who held entire operations together through bitter winters while their husbands were gone at war. By railroad workers who crossed impossible terrain. By schoolteachers in one-room school houses. By volunteers who answered the call when neighbors were in need. By generations who never made headlines but built the communities we cherish today.

CROW TRIBAL CHIEFS
t to right: Top row—Medicine Crow, Shows A Fish, Big Magpie, Old Crow.
Bottom row—Wolf Lies Down, Gray Bull, Old Dog, Unidentified.

The untold story of Montana isn't one of conquest-it is one of stewardship.

Long before the first maps labeled this place, Native nations understood that the land was not something to own but something to respect. Rivers were lifelines. Mountains were sacred. Wildlife was both sustenance and responsibility. Their wisdom shaped this landscape long before newcomers arrived.

When prospectors flooded into Montana in search of gold, most never struck it rich. Many left with little more than worn boots and broken dreams. Yet the merchants, carpenters, blacksmiths, and families who stayed behind built towns that still stand today.

Their greatest discovery wasn't buried beneath the earth-it was the opportunity to create a home.

In Butte, miners from Ireland, Finland, Italy, Croatia, China, and dozens of other places came together beneath one skyline. They spoke different languages and carried different traditions, but deep underground they depended on one another. Montana's communities were forged by not only one ore, but by courage, trust and sacrifice.

Across the plains, homesteaders learned that survival required more than determination. Drought, wildfire, blizzards, and isolation tested every family. The stories that endured were not always about success-they were about perseverance. About neighbors helping neighbors without being asked. About sharing seed, horses, food, or hope when times were hard.

That spirit still defines Montana today.

It lives in volunteer firefighters who leave the dinner table to answer a call. In ranchers helping repair miles of fence after a storm or fire. In strangers pulling one another from snowy ditches without expecting anything in return. In communities that gather to support a family facing hardship.

Perhaps the greatest untold story is this: Montana has never been made extraorinary by its scenry alone.

Its rivers are beautiful. The mountains are breathtaking. Its skies seem endless.

But without the people who have loved this place, protected it, and passed it to the next generation, they would simply be landscapes.

Every family that has planted roots here becomes a part of Montana's history.

Every child who learns to fish in a lake or a stream. Every veteran who returns home. Every ranch passed from parents to children. Every small business that opens its doors. Every handshake that still means something. Every sunset watched from a front porch.

Those moments will never appear in most history books. Yet they are the true legacy of Big Sky Country.

As Montana moves into its next chapter, out greatest responsibility is not simply to remember the past. It is to preserve the values that carried this place through the last 250 years: resiliance, honesty, stewardship, community, and a deep respect for the land and each other.

Because someday, the story we are living today will become history.

And the greatest chapter may still be waiting to be written.

FACES THAT SHAPED MONTANA

The People. The Courage. The Legacy

From Indigenous leaders and fearless explorers to ranchers, visionareies, artists, and everyday Montanans who built our communities-these are the faces behind the story of the Treasure State

WHY THEIR LEGACY MATTERS TODAY

Their stories remind us that Montana was built on resiliance, respect, hard work, and a deep connection to the land and to each other.

Their legacy lives on in every sunrise, every small town, and every family who calls this place home.

A TIMELINE OF LEGACY

BEFORE 1800s

Indigenous nations thrive across the land we now call Montana.

1805-1806

Lewis & Clark Expedition travels through Montana with guidance from Native leaders.

1860s-1880s

Gold & Copper discoveries bring prospectors forever changing the landscape & powering the nation's growth.

"Montana is not just a place on the map. It is a story written by the people who came before us, lived beside us, and the generations that will follow." — Unknown

CHIEF PLENTY COUPS

1848-1932

Respected leader of the Crow Nation who chose diplomacy over conflict, protecting his people, their land and their way of life during a time of great change.

"A man's worth is measured by what he does for his people."

LEADER ✦ DIPLOMAT

FANNY SPERRY STEELE

1881-1942

Very accomplished ranch woman, who earned respect as a cattle woman, frearless bronc rider, excpetional horse woman, and wilderness guide. She helped build one of Montana's premier Hereford cattle operations while preserving the traditions of the American West through her work and storytelling.

COWGIRL ✦ RANCHER ✦ OUTFITTER

CHARLIE RUSSELL

1864-1926

"The Cowboy Artist" who captures the spirit of the American West through his paintings and stories, preserving a way of life for generations to remember. Today, he is remembered through his artwork, museums and millions of acres of public land named after him.

"I had a frontier childhood and it has never left me."

ARTIST ✦ STORYTELLER

F. AUGUSTUS HEINZE

1869-1914

Bold business man & fierce legal battles against large mining companies helped him build a mining empire that challenged the Copper Kings & helped shape Montana's mining industry. His ambition and determination left a lasting impression on Butte.

BUSINESS MAN

JEANNETTE RANKIN

1880-1973

Born in Missoula, she became the first woman elected to the U.S. Congress in 1916–four years before women had the right to vote nationwide.

TRAILBLAZER ✦ PEACEMAKER

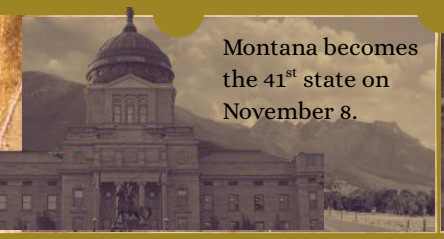

STEWART UDALL

1920-2010

As Secretary of the Interior, he championed conservation and protected millions of acres of public land, including much of Montana's natural hertiage.

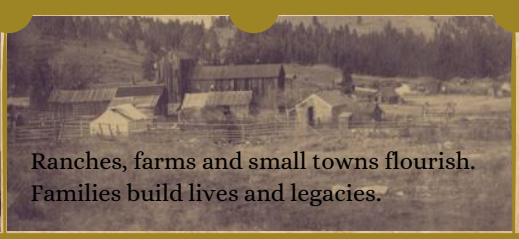

CONSERVATIONIST

1889

Montana becomes the 41st state on November 8.

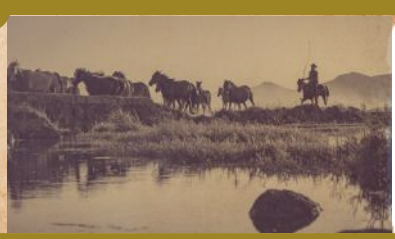

1900s

Ranches, farms and small towns flourish. Families build lives and legacies.

Today

Montana's story continues throught the people who live, work and care for this incredible place.

MARKET INSIGHTS

- Despite higher mortgage rates, Montana home values remained resilient throughout Q2, demonstrating continued confidence in the state's long-term real estate market.
- The second quarter brought a noticeable increase in closed sales compared to the winter months, as buyers re-entered the market during Montana's busiest real estate season.
- Unlike the ultra-competitive markets of recent years, today's buyers often have greater negotiating power. Thoughtful pricing, strong marketing, and local expertise have become more important than ever for sellers.

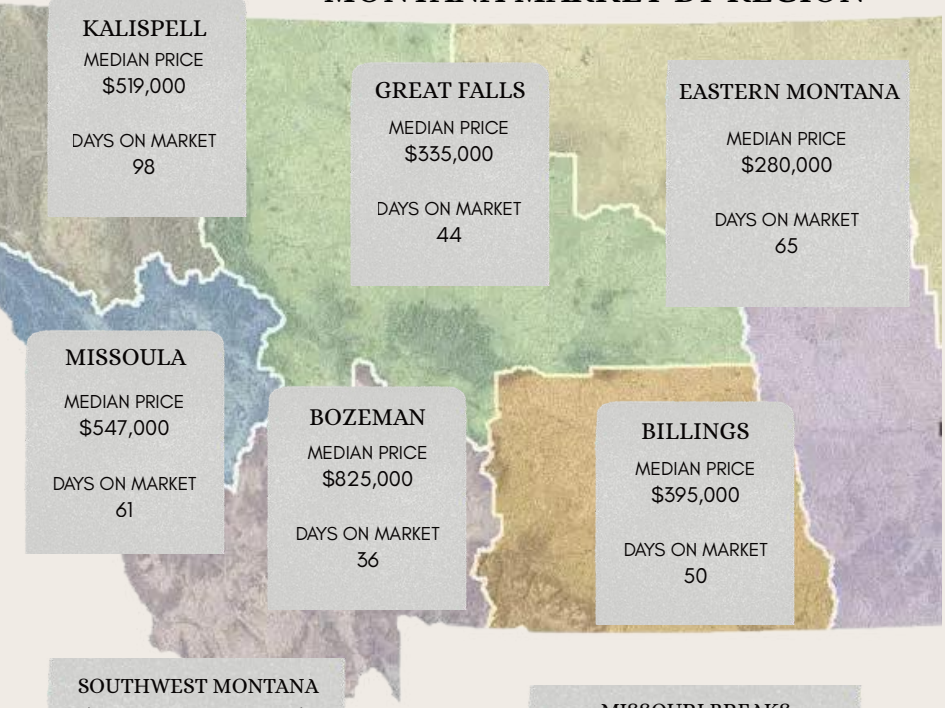

"Montana is more than a market- it's a way of life. People aren't just buying property, they're investing in freedom, legacy, and a future for generations to come"

PARK CITY MONTANA

A HERITAGE OF HARD WORK. A FUTURE OF HOPE.

Tucked along the Yellowstone River in Stillwater County, Park City is a place where history runs deep, neighbors look out for one another, and the next generation is writing the story of tomorrow.

RANCHING ROOTS

Ranching is the heartbeat of Park City. Generations of families have worked the land, building a legacy of stewardship, resilience, and pride.

RAILROAD HERITAGE

Founded along the rails in the 1800's, Park City was a vital stop along the Northern Pacific-connecting communities and building a brighter future.

GREAT PEOPLE

From lifelong locals to new neighbors, the people of Park City are friendly, strong, and always ready to lend a hand.

FAMILY TOWN

A place where kids grow up riding their bikes, the town gathers for Friday night sports & roots run deep.

STRONG ROOTS. STRONG FAMILIES. STRONG FUTURE.

That's Park City

BUILT BY GENERATIONS. CARRIED FORWARD BY GRIT

RANCHING HERITAGE

The ranching tradition in Park City is more than a way of life- it's a legacy. Families have weathered droughts, harsh winters, floods & changing times, while always staying true to the land and each other.

RAILS THAT BUILT A TOWN

The Northern Pacific Railroad put Park City on the map. It brought jobs, commerce, and people together. Shaping the town's identity and future.

A COMMUNITY THAT CARES

In Park City, neighbors help neighbors is more than a saying - it's a way of life. Whether it's showing up for a community event, supporting a local business, or helping a family in need, this town is built on kindness and connection.

A STORM THAT TESTED US

December of 2025, a powerful wind storm tore through Park City and badly damaged our school gym. It was more than just a building- it was a place where our kids play, train, learn and come together as a community. Thankully after 9 long months we finally have our gym back in one piece.

RESILIANT PEOPLE. STRONG KIDS. BRIGHT FUTURE.

Our students, teachers, staff, and community have faced this challenge with incredible strength. Classes continued, practices continued and spirits remained high. Because that's what Park City people do. We take care of our town and never give up.

CLIENT STORIES

More Than a Closing

ELSA DRIVE / BILLINGS, MONTANA

I cannot recommend Dayle highly enough. She was an absolute godsend and a true angel during one of the most difficult times in my family's life.

We were navigating the sale of my family home while my father was battling ALS. The emotional weight, medical challenges, and logistics could have been overwhelming, but Dayle stepped in like a guardian angel. She handled every detail with incredible professionalism, compassion, and expertise. She went far above and beyond what anyone could expect - coordinating showings around medical appointments, being patient and understanding with our family, and making the entire process as smooth and stress-free as possible.

She truly 'killed it' in every way: marketing the property beautifully, negotiating like a pro, and keeping us informed every step of the way while also offering genuine emotional support. Her kindness, dedication, and skill turned what could have been an incredibly painful experience into one where we felt truly supported and cared for.

If you're looking for a Realtor who doesn't just transact, but actually cares deeply and delivers outstanding results even in the toughest circumstances, look no further. Dayle Stahl is the real deal. She has my highest recommendation and my family's eternal gratitude. Thank you from the bottom of my heart, Dayle. You were a blessing.
