New Titles for Autumn/Winter 2026–2027

Welcome to Script Publisher Services’ latest seasonal catalogue, featuring new titles publishing this coming Autumn and Winter from across our range of distributed publishers.

Inside, you’ll find titles arranged by subject. The catalogue is organised in line with Script’s two main divisions, with Script Academic & Professional subject areas first, starting on page 4, followed by Script Trade subjects from page 21 – providing booksellers with a wide range of titles to choose from.

We’re pleased to present four new publishers that have recently joined Script Publisher Services. You can discover more about these new publishers at the beginning of the catalogue, on pages 2 and 3.

Throughout the catalogue, titles are labelled as either Long Discount or Short Discount. Please note, this denotes whether booksellers receive a trade (long) or academic (short) discount, based on the usual discounts set on your account. If you’d like to discuss your account details or would like to open a customer account with Script, please don’t hesitate to contact us.

You can find a full list of sales contacts, along with ordering information, on the inside back cover.

Prices and publication dates are subject to change without notice.

Bettina Buck –
Finding Form
PHYLLIDA BARLOW ET AL
EDITED BY BUREAU
BETTINA BUCK

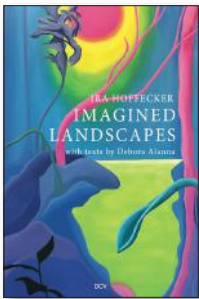

The sculptor Bettina Buck (1974-2017) called attention to herself with her 'performative sculptures', which she often presented vis-à-vis museal objects. Buck's preferred materials came from the hardware store: corrugated cardboard, ceramic tiles, pressed foam, or plastic foil, which are all not meant to last. This book presents Bucks complete sculptural works.

ELASTE 1980-1986
MAXIM BILLER, DIEDRICH
DIEDERICHSEN & JON
SAVAGE
EDITED BY THOMAS
ELSNER & MICHAEL
REINBOTH

The story of ELASTE is the story of a movement – that of the New Wave generation in West Germany. Founded in 1980 in Hanover, the magazine was a beacon of cultural revolt and the first glossy indie magazine of the Federal Republic: a statement somewhere between pop avant-garde, subversion, and a sharp sense of style. This book looks back at the pioneering spirit, the minds, and the stories behind the magazine.

Ira Hoffecker
Imagined Landscapes
DEBORA ALLANNA

Imagined Landscapes is an ongoing series of paintings by German-born artist Ira Hoffecker that begun during Covid lockdown. Due to restricted movement, she started growing a garden and painted the emerging plants. The flowers served as visual and tactile anchors during isolation, while her more recent paintings invent and imagine floral environments. This book features over 70 works from the last six years, each accompanied by an essay by Debora Allanna.

The White Owl Collectables imprint runs alongside Spink Books and is focused on the increasingly popular collectables market, covering all areas from coins to medals, treasure to jewellery, classic cars to trading card games.

Victims of Violence from the Early Roman Fort Velsen 1 (Netherlands)

Scenarios for a Cold Case Review
EDITED BY MARK DRIESSEN & CAROL VAN DRIEL-MURRAY

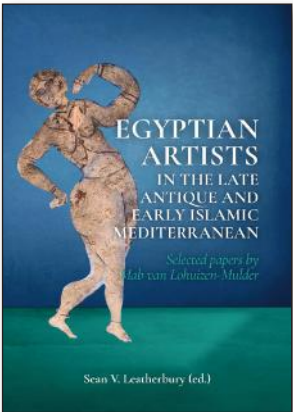

Series: Analecta Praehistorica Leidensia

In 1977, a remarkable discovery was made at the early Roman fort of Velsen (Netherlands): on the bottom of a well lay the skeleton of a man with traumatic injuries. Who was he, how did he die, and what circumstances led to his deposition? This book revisits this 2,000-year-old 'cold case', combining archaeological, historical, and scientific evidence to reconstruct the final moments of the victim and the events surrounding his death.

Capitalism

Analytical and Historical Dimensions

EDITED BY HARDY HANAPPI

What is capitalism? This book attempts to sketch some important answers to this question. The chapters combine insights into the historical development of capitalism with the analytical advances and insights it enabled. This is a book on capitalism, but it also points beyond capitalism, as the apparent shortcomings of this mode of production threaten the survival of the human species.

More Great “What Ifs” of the American Civil War

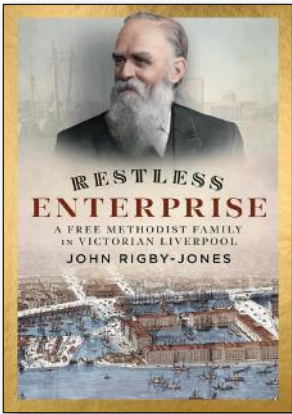

Historians Tackle More of the Conflict’s Most Intriguing Possibilities

EDITED BY CHRIS MACKOWSKI & BRIAN MATTHEW JORDAN

Each essay in this book focuses on a key event of the war and, much like an army staff ride, examines the options of the moment. To understand what happened, we must look at what could have happened, with the full multitude of choices before us and a clear and objective eye. ‘What if’ becomes a tool for illumination.

Restless Enterprise

A Free Methodist Family in Victorian Liverpool
JOHN RIGBY-JONES

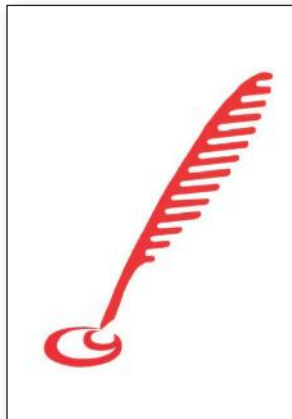

Set against the background of Liverpool's rapid development as a port, this book explores the achievements of the author's three-times great-grandfather, Richard Lloyd, and his family – one of four generations of his family to hold the ancient post of Official Gauger to the Port of Liverpool. The Victorian nonconformist conscience epitomised in the commercial, literary, social, and political achievements of the Lloyd family in Liverpool during its rapid development as a port in the nineteenth century. United by its strong Methodist faith, the family included successful businessmen, ministers, academics, and activists.

Richard III
The Road to Bosworth Field
PETER HAMMOND & ANNE F SUTTON

Richard of Gloucester became King of England as Richard III in June 1483. His reign lasted a mere twenty-six months, and he was only thirty-three years of age when he was killed at the Battle of Bosworth. Despite this short career he is one of the best known of English monarchs, and one of the most vilified. This book tells the story of his life in a way that has never been told before – from the personal and official documents written during his lifetime. From these emerge the picture of a hitman being, subject to the influences and ideas of his violent times, rather than the monster of the later Tudor writers.

A History of Britain in 100 Coins

The Hidden Messages in 2,000 years of Iconic British Coins

GRAHAM BIRCH

Takes a dive into some of the many ways that coins have been used to convey information to the public. Warlords, Kings, Queens and Governments have all used coins as social media to spread political messages, broadcast their news and deliver propaganda. One hundred 'Focus Coins' have been selected, each of which showcases a key aspect of Britain's rich historical heritage. The designs of these special coins have been decoded to reveal the remarkable stories that they convey.

Everything You Need to Know About Trading Cards

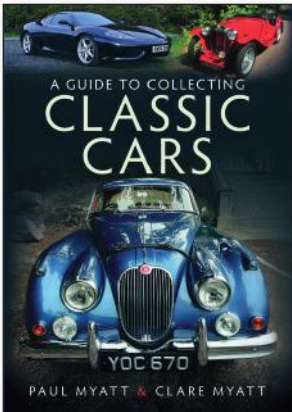

A Guide for Collectors

ROY RAFTER

This timely book looks at the impact on a generation of the three major trading card games that have stood the test of time – Magic the Gathering (1993), Pokemon (1996) and Yu-Gi-Oh! (1999) – the creation, the story behind them, scandals and key cards and the, sometimes staggering, prices which can be achieved at auction. Along the way the author covers how the games are played and why this matters to their success; banned cards – how certain artwork caused problems for European releases; printing problems in the early days and how to spot these.

Roman Imperial Coinage, Volume IV, Part 3: Companion Volume: Gold Coinage

Gordian III – Aemilian
ROGER BLAND

This volume is a corpus of 2,315 gold coins of the reigns of Gordian III, Philip, Trajan Decius, Trebonianus Gallus and Aemilian (AD 238-53), and is intended as a companion volume to the revised edition of Roman Imperial Coinage IV.3. During the work of the new edition of RIC the author gathered details of all specimens of gold coins of the period, but the format of RIC did not permit their publication in that volume. A die-study has elucidated questions of dating of the coin issues and all specimens are illustrated in 78 plates. An introduction tackles problems relating to the circulation of gold coins in this period.

The Secret Hitchcock

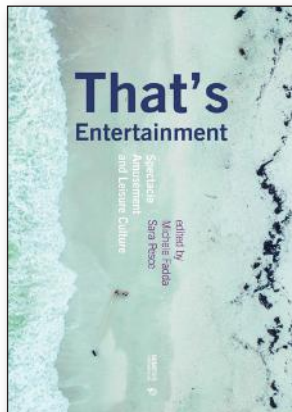

How Hollywood's Legendary Director Lived Through Cary Grant & James Stewart

NAT SEGALOFF

Series: Screen Classics

Cary Grant and James Stewart were everything Alfred Hitchcock was not. Grant radiated charm and sophistication. Stewart embodied resilience and depth. Here, Nat Segaloff pulls back the curtain to reveal the profound connection between Hitchcock and his art. Through the actors, Hitchcock could do what he never dared: expose a killer, rescue a child, solve a crime, or fall in love. Behind these creative partnerships lay a web of secrecy that Segaloff unravels with precision, offering a fresh, compelling portrait of the Master of Suspense – and the stars who embodied his imagination and brought his darkest dreams to life.

Hollow Sovereignty

Political Order Without Legitimacy
DEAN CAIVANO

What sustains political order once legitimacy no longer secures authority and institutional purpose begins to thin? This is the central question animating this book. Dean Caivano is concerned with the state of contemporary political systems, observing that they continue to function even as the basis of their authority appears increasingly uncertain. Sovereignty, Caivano argues, has not disappeared; but it persists in a hollow form, sustained only by administrative processes and institutional routines that function without requiring justification.

A Story of Tragedy & Farce
YOUSSEF AHMED

Looking at the fractured nature of the Muslim Brotherhood's existence from its inception in 1928 to its decimation in 1954, and then from its second incarnation beginning in the 1970s, Ahmed explores how the profoundly differing political systems and institutions of the two periods shaped the movement's Islamist project, its patterns of politicisation, and its relationship to authority. His work sheds light on the evolution of more than a century of Egyptian politics.

Politics, State, Communism

Álvaro García Linera

EDITED BY AGON HAMZA & FRANK RUDA

Series: Politics

Examines social movements and different forms of political and subjective autonomy in Bolivia; with democracy and its function in late capitalism; with the discrepancy between national and capitalist spaces; with the Russian October Revolution as an event, and its resonances in other parts of the world; with the concept and function of the state; and, finally, with the idea of communism in its relation to necessity and contingency.

The State of Happiness

Public Policy that Makes Life Better
NOEL SEMPLE

What should government do? Welfarism holds that it should always try to make individuals' lives go better, for them, than they otherwise would. This book offers a fresh perspective on the potential of public policy. Five historical episodes – from mandatory seat belt laws in the USA to economic liberalisation in India to the legalisation of same-sex marriage in Canada – show how government really did make life better.

Giverny – A Colorful Silence

Four Seasons in the Gardens of Monet
PHOTOGRAPHS BY JANET RUSSEK & DAVID SCHEINBAUM WITH AN ESSAY BY PAUL HAYES TUCKER AND CONTRIBUTIONS BY JAN HUNTLEY & JEAN-MARIE AVISARD

When Claude Monet purchased a house and land in Giverny, France, during the 1890s, he soon set about creating gardens on his property, including a water garden inspired by the Japanese art that influenced so much of his work. These gardens would become a focal point for his art for the rest of his life. He made more than 250 paintings of them, including hundreds of paintings of the water garden that make up his famous Water Lilies series.

In Giverny – A Colorful Silence, Monet’s gardens are the subject of photographers Janet Russek and David Scheinbaum. That experience inspired them to delve more deeply into Monet’s life and work and to seek special permission from the Monet Foundation to visit and photograph the gardens in Giverny. They proceeded to make four more trips over three years to photograph the gardens in each of the four seasons, and the stunning photographs they made reveal the changing beauty, light, and colour palettes of the gardens throughout the year. Russek and Scheinbaum’s colour photographs are accompanied by heartfelt and informative essays in English and French.

Iraq: Under an Ancient Sun

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM FREJ AND TEXT BY DIANA K MCDONALD

Offers a striking present-day view of some of the world’s oldest cities in Mesopotamia, the ‘Cradle of Civilisation’. Even today, thousands of years after reaching their historic pinnacles, these cities offer an incredible vision of the splendour and magnificence of Mesopotamia’s ancient world.

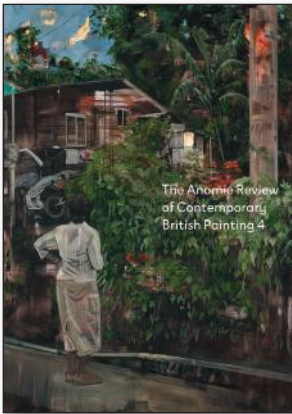

In addition to Frej’s compelling photographs, Iraq features a foreword by renowned scholar Willem McCloud and an introduction by William Frej, both of which set the stage for the visual journey within. This visually stunning book features 132 duotone photographs by award-winning photographer William Frej, who documents twenty-three ancient cities in present-day Iraq, from Eridu in the south to Erbil in the north.

This is a book that informs, inspires, and enlightens readers about a place where human civilisation began.

Under the Milky Way

Abstraction, Autonomy, and Post-Vandalist Tendencies in Contemporary Art

EDITED BY CHRISTOPH PLATZ-
GALLUS & LARISSA KIKOL

In German and English. The outdoors is now a school, the urban underworld a studio, and unchained anti-authority supersedes the influence of the academy and the market. This is where art movements come to life; Hidden Masters emerge who have recently also been taking the institutional stage. Some have a background in graffiti, others have studied painting; some used to be urban trespassers painting in places where they had to be vigilant, eluding the all-seeing eye of the authorities. The resulting art is best described by three terms: abstraction, autonomy, and – depending on one's perspective – post-vandalism. The exhibition Under the Milky Way presents captivating positions from these scenes across Europe.

This is a book of writing by an artist – a book of writing about drawing, accompanied by drawings by the artist. Part memoir, partly for those interested in drawing, part guide for students and artists considering a life in art (and beyond) for themselves, this book shows the thinking going on in the mind of an artist and the various kinds of challenges and delights they might experience during their career. As well as a book about drawing, it is a book about walking/travelling and, in particular, the relationship between the two.

Richard III
The Road to Bosworth Field
PETER HAMMOND & ANNE F SUTTON

Richard of Gloucester became King of England as Richard III in June 1483. His reign lasted a mere twenty-six months, and he was only thirty-three years of age when he was killed at the Battle of Bosworth. Despite this short career he is one of the best known of English monarchs, and one of the most vilified. This book tells the story of his life in a way that has never been told before – from the personal and official documents written during his lifetime. From these emerge the picture of a hitman being, subject to the influences and ideas of his violent times, rather than the monster of the later Tudor writers.

Wesleyan Poetry Series

Brings together 35 extraordinary but under-recognised poets whose work has shaped and enriched the literary landscape of the 20th and 21st centuries, writers whose contributions were overlooked because of race, gender, sexuality, disability, region, language, resistance to prevailing literary norms, or plain bad luck. Selected and introduced by a vibrant community of contemporary poets and critics, these writers appear chronologically, allowing readers to trace an alternate, deeply pluralistic history of American poetry.

Drone Dominance

Seizing War's New High Ground
JOHN ANTAL

There is a revolutionary upheaval happening right now in warfare: the explosive rise of small unmanned systems – drones – has permanently and irrevocably shattered the old rules of battle, seizing the decisive 'high ground' from timeless physical landmarks like ridgelines and hilltops and thrusting it into fiercely contested low-altitude battlespace where swarms of cheap, lethal machines now hold absolute sway over life and death. In these pages, the author introduces, rigorously defines, and fully operationalises the game-changing concept of Drone Dominance.

Across the Pacific

The Secret Intelligence War
Between the United States and
Japan, 1941-45
PETER C OLESON

Drawing on U.S. and Japanese sources, this is an analysis of how intelligence was deployed in the war between the United States and Japan – examining espionage, codebreaking, and its analysis across Pacific and CBI theatres, from Pearl Harbor to the war's end, revealing how intelligence shaped decisions, battles, and outcomes across the Pacific.

The Doomed Dozen

OSS Team Dawes, Murdered at Mauthausen
DAVID A FOY

In 1944, the OSS Dawes Team joined British SOE agents in aiding Slovak resistance, thwarting German offensives, and collecting intelligence. Captured by German forces, twelve OSS members were executed at Mauthausen despite being uniformed soldiers. The war crimes trial that followed sparked lasting controversy.

More Great “What Ifs” of the American Civil War

Historians Tackle More of the Conflict’s Most Intriguing Possibilities

EDITED BY CHRIS MACKOWSKI & BRIAN MATTHEW JORDAN

Each essay in this book focuses on a key event of the war and, much like an army staff ride, examines the options of the moment. To understand what happened, we must look at what could have happened, with the full multitude of choices before us and a clear and objective eye. ‘What if’ becomes a tool for illumination.

Soldiering in Hard Times

A Junior Officer in the Post-Vietnam US Army

ROLAND J TISO, JR

The United States Army of the 1970s was a force in crisis. Emerging from Vietnam, it faced a stark reckoning: without the draft, it had to rebuild itself from scratch – its ranks, its doctrine, its weapons, its culture – while confronting racial tensions, societal upheaval, and the looming reality of massed Soviet armoured divisions.

Under the Sign of the Sunwheel

The History of SS-Panzerjäger-Abteilung 54

RICHARD DEVEAU-MAXWELL

SS-Panzerjäger-Abteilung 54, a Waffen-SS anti-tank battalion, fought for most of its existence on the northern Eastern Front. Tracing its formation and decline from hard fighting in Estonia to its final battles in 1945, this book examines not just the unit’s combat record, but the men inside its armoured vehicles – their motives, hardships, and fate.
