The Theme

The theme for this year's yearbook is "we're out of this world." We students at PCDS pride ourselves on performing at our highest level of achievement in all aspects of life, not just school-related activities. Consequently, our in-school achievements rightly deserve praise. We regularly showcase our intellectual abilities not only in everyday homework and class discussions but also in various extracurricular activities, ranging from math contests to peer tutoring, from debate competitions to chess tournaments.

On the athletic field, we have had a host of championship teams in the past few years in both the Middle and Upper Schools; furthermore, many students are involved in outside-of-school athletic clubs and teams, including year-round club teams for soccer and individual competitions for horseback riding. To help you think in this frame of mind, we take you “out of this world” with various images from space scattered throughout the book; some of the pictures are actual photographs from telescopes while others have been drawn by resident student-artists. Enjoy!

Jonathan Lorentzen and Brandon Norem eagerly anticipate the adventures of seventh grade.

Opening Day

The first day of school at PCDS builds community bonds, beginning with the annual senior-kindergartner walk into the all-school assembly in the gym. Everyone in PCDS's community--the teachers, students, and the Board of Trustees--listens to Mr. Brewster's opening-day speech about school unity. As the assembly concludes, the students and faculty embark on a new year of academic, athletic, and extracurricular endeavors at PCDS. Interaction and communication in and among the Lower, Middle, and Upper Schools abound, affirming the school unity that really shines in our environment.

Center: Jenny Papp, Anthony Conyers, Jack Mattern, and Chris Gibbs catch up on summer events.

Right: Juniors Valerie Garagiola and Michelle Lisa stop their conversation about summer vacations to give us some smiles.

Right: Sophomore teachers Mr. Flail and Ms. Clarke plot how they will thoroughly confuse their new students/victims.

Far Right: Sofia Long and Matt Kostrivas smile for now, but they have not found out about their new teachers' plans.

Far Left: Kyle Wade's mohawk did not scare Ian Burke.

Left: Seniors Elizabeth Engle and Ashley Becker stand on either side of kindergartners Katie Dickerson and Meryl Ax.

Below: Juniors Alisha Blischok, Tara Wieger, and Sara Fastenberg hang out.

Blue and Gold Day

Blue and Gold Day at PCDS brings together the students and faculty of the Lower, Middle, and Upper Schools for a common cause: to show school spirit. Students dress up in blue and gold and support their sports teams this day above all others. To get into the spirit, the all-school assembly in the gym provided a time for everyone to celebrate together: Lower School bingo, the inter-age scooter race, the Middle School relay race, Upper School guys' dance team, jazz tunes from the Upper School varsity jazz band, and a morning diving show put on by the men's and women's diving teams. Everyone celebrated Blue and Gold Day before, during, and after school. The men's varsity soccer game, the Blue and Gold Day Picnic with fireworks, and the Upper School's sophomore-sponsored Fall Ball dance gave after-school entertainment.

Right: Lauren Hanneman and Katie Haenel are happy that Blue and Gold Day is here at last!

Right: The guys' dance team builds a pyramid to perfection. Pretty good dance routine, too.

Far Right: Lower School bingo--live!

Master of Ceremonies.

Left: Thunder the Eagle
shares the love.

Below: The trumpets jazz up the assembly with the rest of the Upper School varsity jazz band.

Far left: Danika Cooper feels the thrill of the ride during the scooter race.

Left: What a dive in front of the whole school! A perfect 10!

Student Life

Right: Seniors Bernard Hunt and Humberto Duarte discuss the best way to accelerate a Macintosh. At 9.8 m/s^2 .

Right: Elizabeth Engle, Ashley Becker, and Tua Long lounge poolside during the seniors' School at the Pool event.

Eighth-grade boys? We'll let you decide.

Left: As always, sixth-grader Michael Tree is enthusiastic about learning.

Left: Sophomores Will Alkhoury, Alice Gaston, and Brianna Eller find a way to make the benches in the quad somewhat comfortable.

Senior Class of 2003

Building a Brighter Future

Division Heads

Listen planets, newly formed,
Departing the system that shaped you:
After the craters and surface tides,
Near misses with cold moons,
Deeper mass takes hold.
The gravity of hidden things shapes the arc,
Pulling you back toward the same sun
That gave the love you will become.

-Galen Brewster, Headmaster

The Lower School is a very special world. Students love learning and enjoy their special friendships. It is a place where each individual is his/her own person in a larger community of caring and respect.

-Barbara Heal, Lower School Head

PCDS is "out of this world." What more is there to say?

-John Crabb, Middle School Head

Go forth, out of this world, released from the bounds of time and place. Take your knowledge of things, of justice, and of peace. Be thoughtful in your steps and share your zest for life and your love of learning with everyone that you meet. The next world will be enriched by your presence.

-Geoff Campbell, Upper School Head

Senior Dedication

As a teacher, advisor, sports fan, and friend, you spend countless hours at PCDS, ceaselessly giving your time to lend a hand to every student you meet. Whether you make yourself available for extra help or just for a brief chat, we appreciate your interest in our studies and our lives. Your warm spirit, friendly personality, and calming nature eased the pressures of entering high school, and your magnificent teaching style not only taught us volumes about English grammar and composition but also prepared us for college and beyond. We have been affected by your dedication to knowledge, your love for your students, and your insistence on grammatical perfection. Your undying devotion to PCDS--who else gets to school before dawn and leaves after the sun sets?--makes us realize how special we are to you and how special you are to us. We, the Class of 2003, are honored to dedicate this yearbook to you, Dr. Allison.

With love forever,

In Memorium

Mrs. Lovie Peterson was a remarkable woman who had an enormous impact on many PCDS students. She taught Kindergarten and in the music department for twenty-one years, and she shared her love of music with all of her students. No one could make the alphabet come alive like Mrs. Peterson. With her one-of-a-kind "Letter People Show," we all learned the alphabet through song and dance. Mrs. Peterson always found creative ways to teach and she made learning fun. Her classroom was known for the piano, which she played all the time, and her students will always remember eating graham crackers and singing along.

During the time I spent with her last summer, Mrs. Peterson received many letters from PCDS students who had her as a Kindergarten teacher. It is amazing that she had such an enormous impact on so many, and we all cherish the memories we have of her. Mrs. Peterson inspired all the children she taught and will always be in our hearts.

5th-Grade Trip

Astrocamp is the fifth grade's exciting three-day trip to the Desert Sun Science Center in Idyllwild, California. Astrocamp provides a science program in which students actively work on topics in all areas of science: astronomy, space technology, meteorology, geology, and physics. The students have the opportunity to experience the effects of micro-gravity while building a satellite. Classmates cheer each other on to higher levels in rock climbing, and rockets are designed and launched. Within this unique educational experience, the fifth-grade students learn to work together, gain more independence, and appreciate the resources of our planet Earth and its connection to the universe.

Assembly of space probe is ahead of schedule. Time for a hot chocolate break.

Right: For Spenser Gwozdzik, Cole Goodyear, Max Eller, there's nothing like basking on the rocks under the sun.

Far right: When asked why she climbed the wall, Ariel Gordon, a success story, said, "Because it's there."

Feel the G's! Shannon Galloway and her partner are hooked on the blood-rushing experience.

Adam Galloway discovers the joys of angular momentum.

Balance boards--these fifth-graders are a little young to be subjected to such strenuous balancing devices.

Far left: Austin Ingersoll, prepare to be dizzified.

Left: KP duty is the bane of most people's existence, but Mandy Bard, Peter Brown, and Mike Perry are enjoying it.

What is your favorite memory of the trip?

My favorite thing about Astrocamp was rock wall. Sunny Lake-Laubach

6th-grade Trip

The sixth-graders went to the Headlands Institute near San Francisco, California, for the class trip in early September. In addition to learning about science at the camp, the students and teachers had a chance to get to know one another. This Middle School trip included not only the regular sixth-grade faculty but also two Upper School seniors, Humberto Duarte and Clint Corcoran, both of whom assisted the teachers as counselors and interacted with the students. Activities on the trip included walking across the Golden Gate Bridge, exploring the natural surroundings in hiking groups, going "ponding" and then examining the pond critters under microscopes, learning about the local and national environment, hiking through Muir Woods, visiting the beach and the "secret spot," and having a lot of fun during free time every day. Everyone reports that the trip was a positive and enjoyable experience.

One of the hiking groups takes time to circle up and discuss important environmental issues related to the "compost bins" behind them.

Right: Devon McLaughlin, Nicole Swinford, and Arianna Rose relax on the sunny beach.

Far right: Erin Malone, Mayan Zeitlan, and Ms. Buelow are amazed by the height of the Golden Gate Bridge's supports.

Brett Hennessy, Schooner Sonntag, and Elliot Ginsburg enjoy the serenity and solitude of the "secret spot." (Actually, these kids just like to climb trees.)

Nicole Lopez reacts hysterically to Matt Tibi's presentation about the willow tree, whereas Robert Adrian and Noah Bucon are intellectually stimulated by the willow's importance to nature.

Mayan Zeitlan, Erin Malone, and Taylor Leonesio are fascinated by the beach.

Far left: Even sixth graders can get tired from hiking all day.

Brett Hennessy and Robert Adrian are involved in Zen meditation while Elliot Ginsburg gives a creative wave.

What is your favorite memory of the trip?

I really liked the solo hike because I'm never allowed to be alone and I like the solitude.

-Kendra Simon

I liked the pond because we got to see different animals that you never knew were there.

-Lizzy McGroder

The food was really, really good. I especially liked the pizza and talking with my friends.

-Zach LaPrade

I enjoyed our free time because we got to climb trees, play sports, play cards, and read.

7th-Grade Trip

The seventh-grade trip was an exhilarating experience for the students, senior counselors, and faculty members. The trip was to Tonto Rim Baptist Camp in northern Arizona, and students were given the opportunity to get to know one another better, bond, and discover themselves. Some of the students' favorite activities included hiking through the caves and to the waterfall, as well as canoeing, night hiking, telling campfire stories, presenting skits, and playing Bernard Hunt's guitar. The faculty members were assisted by eight senior counselors: Rachel Chase, Veronique Millon, Carlos Saldaña, Bernard Hunt, Lauren Perlow, Patrick Furniss, Vincent Devlin, and Tua Long. One particularly memorable activity for everyone was when the seniors had to perform, otherwise known as making fools of themselves, in order for their respective groups to act out their skits.

As Jack Mattern and Mr. Rowe would say, the peaceful atmosphere of the camp lends itself to philosophic interludes.

What is your favorite memory of the trip?

The best part: 62 students, 8 seniors, 6 advisors, 3 days, 2 nights, 1 camp. Anything can happen.

-Lizzy Burton

I had the most fun playing ping-pong with the senior counselors.

-Anthony Conyers

The best part of the trip was the cave hike. I enjoyed getting to crawl through small underground tunnels.

8th-Grade Trip

This year's class went to the Catalina Environmental Leadership Program at Catalina Island. Everyone reports that the week-long trip was fun, especially the activities. The eighth-graders enjoyed all that they did: kayaking, snorkeling, hiking at night and stargazing, doing ropes courses, learning about marine life, staying in cabins with senior counselors (Cherilyn Gain, Beau Kenworthy, Sarah Smiley, Cody Sonntag, Jessie Weiser, and Joseph Yeargan), sitting around a campfire, and performing skits, the most memorable of which was the guys' rendition of the Ms. Catalina beauty contest. Through this five-day out-of-school excursion, the eighth-graders bonded and got to learn about the environment around us, each other, and their teachers.

Upper right: Laura Reahard and Michelle Spigner are amazed at what they see in the compost garden.

Hint: Across

Upper School

Rebecca Allison: Becca is hailed as a national hero after punching out a foreign diplomat who turned out to be a spy. She becomes known as "America's Secret Weapon" in historical lore.

Eric Austin: As he grows older, Eric leads a group of anarchists to single-handedly bring down Jack in the Box after discovering unidentifiable objects in the chicken.

Ashley Becker: As a professional artist, Ashley breaks the heart of nude models around the world.

Alexa Binns: After years of courting Gary, Alexa discovers that this "man" is actually the alter-ego of her close friend Divya. Deeply disturbed, she funnels her angst into playwriting and creates the award-winning show "Kinda Gary, Kinda Not."

Lindsay Bodell: After eating her way through college, Lindsay spends her time as a judge on American Idol.

Jenna Boykoff: Having survived mosquito attacks and the Moab virus, Jenna knows she can handle anything; however, images of calculus and U.S. History haunt her forever.

Traci Brinkman: After settling down with a perfect (swimmer) husband, Traci becomes a world-known baby doctor and has 2.2 perfect (blonde-haired, blue-eyed) children.

Emily Burnett: After becoming the next Anna Kournikova and winning three consecutive U.S. Opens, Emily retires to a life of celebrity appearances.

Julie Carland: In disbelief that wonderlands such as Middle Earth do not exist, Julie writes best-selling fantasy novels under the pseudonym J.R.R. Carland.

Rachael Casselman: As supreme ruler of the world, Rachael commands the masses with her sign of authority: her red pinstripe zipper suit.

Katie Caughlin: Katie becomes the first successful engineer/cheerleader . . . even in the history of the (extremely) liberal Pomona.

Emily Charlson: A sudden global fascination with red hair launches her to stardom; by 25, Emily is touring the world in her private jet.

Rachel Chase: Charming her way to leading roles on Broadway, Rachel eventually retires to her dream penthouse apartment on 5th Ave.

Danika Cooper: After designing the world's first "food room," created only for the purpose of food consumption (especially Doritos), Dinky achieves her goal of weighing 800 lbs., including 500 lbs. of quality cellulite.

Clint Corcoran: As Clint expands his sports-card business to global proportions, he still finds time to return to PCDS to chat with Dr. Allison about pressing grammar issues.

Rebecca Dalton: Not entirely sure what her favorite activity is, "Becky D" drifts from digging in the Valley of the Kings to writing new Scooby-Doo episodes, and then she goes to school to take more classes because they "sound interesting, you know?"

Reid Davis: After skating through college without having to do too much work, Reid becomes a trophy husband and retires at the ripe old age of 24.

Sabrina Delafield: Wanting to utilize her dancing talent to its potential, Sabrina starts a pre-teen dance troupe called "Road Sisters" in hopes of winning a spot on the new Star Search and getting the opportunity to meet Arsenio Hall.

Vincent Devlin: After mourning the loss of his 94-year-old wife, Vincent collects his inheritance and undergoes major reconstructive surgery in order to steal Tua's identity.

Simi Dhillon: Founder of the "Indian Dentists' Pride" group, Simi uses her explosive laugh to seduce a man who looks like Moses from The Prince of Egypt.

Christo Dru: By kissing up to some gullible producers, Christo hosts a TV dating show . . . but will he ever truly understand women?

Humberto Duarte: Under the code name "Dragon," Bert takes on the "Evil Empire" and defeats Bill Gates as he becomes the technology mogul for Macintosh.

Elizabeth Engle: After garnering praise from Hollywood producers, Biz fulfills her lifelong dream of being a lion-tamer (only the lion puts its head in her mouth).

Lauren Etkorn: Etzy slips through college quiet and unnoticed (due to eye-level, perhaps?), but she emerges as a successful, authoritative CEO in the "micro"-chip business.

Elizabeth Foglesong: "Blondie" sacrifices successful careers as both a diver and an engineer to crusade full-time for short people's rights.

John Patrick Furniss: After getting arrested in Mexico for trying to smuggle 4 tons of toilet paper into the U.S., Patrick awaits trial indefinitely.

Cherilyn Gain: Perennial recipient of the Humanitarian of the Year Award, Cher "Net" Gain selflessly gives up her own gain to help everyone else in the world.

Laura Garrity: After deciding that flying her friends to Disneyland every weekend is not economical, Laura becomes the CEO of her own self-designed theme park.

Jessica Green: The world comes to revere Jess's musical talent during her tenure as first-chair everything in every major band . . . even groups in countries in which she hasn't bothered to learn the official language.

John Haddock: Contrary to expectations, John does little more in college than start the club "Longboarders' Paradise." He is later the first person kicked out of Harvard Law for skateboarding in "Hahvahd Yahd."

Senior Time Warp

Bernard Hunt: Once his film career has taken off and he becomes one of those rich, eccentric directors, Bernie realizes his one true love was always educational math videos.

Divya Jayachandran: Despite promising runs as a news anchorwoman, Divya is finally exiled by the entire media industry after she reads one of her . . . "odes" . . . on air.

Beau Kenworthy: Beau and his boy band are featured in every Volvo commercial in the United States.

Yuki Kondo-Shah: After law school, Yuki becomes a disturbingly successful politician, eventually running for president and making sure Joe Volk doesn't get too many votes.

Lance Labun: After a 30-year stint as a nuclear physicist in a windowless laboratory, Lance remembers that once upon a time he communicated with humans.

Lauren Limbert: Lauren will be sepia-toning photographs and performing as a Marilyn Monroe look-alike with her hit song, "Ow, My Eye!"

Tua Long: Tua breaks the record for number of languages spoken fluently by a human, learning even the African languages composed entirely of tongue clicks.

Christian Lorentzen: Christian becomes a professional paintballer . . . even though there's no professional paintballing league.

Katie Luciano: Once Katie finally "captures" her dream husband (Craig Counsell), she decides to become a professional photographer; her photos are often seen on the cover of National Geographic.

Chris Macdonald: This PCDS astronaut will not be able to go to the moon with the school's space program because he refuses to wear the helmet, but he will have Judith Butler to "console" him.

Becky McLaren: After stalking Bright Eyes's Conor Oberst for years, her friend Divya finally gets the money (borrowed from Vincent, of course) to open a farm so that Becky can immerse herself in the pleasures of animal products.

Veronique Millon: Between giving her time to others and being everyone's best friend, "Frenchie" still finds time to win that Nobel Peace Prize.

Shreya Patel: After placing a restraining order on Becky McLaren, Shreya retreats to the lab, working 18-hour days and driving a car with the bumper sticker, "I don't need friends. I have my rats."

Lauren Perlow: After being kicked out of her dorm room for reorganizing her roommate's things, Lauren is offered a prestigious job at the BMW corporation, but she is forced to decline because her mother won't let her.

Carlos Saldana: After years of touring, Carlos settles down to raise a new generation of punk stars/pro wrestlers.

Christie Sanghi: After becoming the star Lakers dancer, Christie lands the cover of the Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition.

Nathan Saper: The corporate head of the Missouri branch of Gucci, "Sathan Naper" still manages to juggle the responsibilities of the Safety Brigade.

Danny Schwartz: An actor in regional theaters, Danny also performs his impersonations of authority figures and Jewish grandmothers.

Michael Scullin: Having failed to convert any sane people to believe in the eternal supremacy of Texas, "Cowboy Mike" returns to his homeland.

Sarah Smiley: Thirty years of professional riding leaves Sarah a little odd. She later retires from the public eye after being caught running through people's yards, jumping fences and hedges.

Allison Smith: As Americans fall in love with Allison's unique personality as a TV host, her daytime soap opera becomes more like Jerry Springer with every episode.

Cody Sonntag: Despite a background that would normally be considered a national security risk, Cody gets a job writing outlandish speeches for the president.

Josh Stark: After winning American Idol, Josh quickly becomes enveloped in himself and buys his own island.

Lizzie Vieh: Forced to accept a job at California Pizza Kitchen while pursuing her acting career, Lizzie finds her soul mate in the cold-hearted Gregor after finally ordering an item off the adult menu.

Joseph Volk: When employer after employer figures out that Joe only appears to be working, he decides to take his steadfast work ethic to Washington in his Presidential Campaign for the Libertarian Party.

Kyle Wade: After being recruited as a spy for the CIA, Kyle blows his cover by saying, "I'm not supposed to tell you this, but . . ." Unemployed, Kyle lives off of his parents' six billion dollars.

Jessie Weiser: Rabbi Jessie markets the first Jewish action figure and uses the proceeds to feed the poor.

Michael Wiss: The only consistent one in the grade, Mike seems to enjoy his clowning career a little too much.

Joe Yeargan: Joe will be smacked by the popo for takin' a photo.

Stephanie Yee: After publicly admitting that country music "isn't all that bad," Stephanie changes her name, moves to Canada, and spends the rest of her life skiing and writing for The New York Times.

Upper School

Foreign Languages

The Upper School Foreign Language Department offers a breadth of opportunities for students to become proficient in a multitude of the "common" foreign languages. With respected faculty in French, Spanish, and Latin, PCDS students can achieve a mastery of a second language through a multi-year study of a language or, for some talented students, many languages. PCDS students have a chance to show that they truly are "out of this world" with superiority in these languages in the spoken and written components. The International Club and Latin Club have provided outlets for enthusiastic students to showcase their love for foreign cultures.

Mrs. Anderson gives her Latin I class some good words of advice:
Carpe diem.

James Yurka takes a break from Latin to smile for the camera while other students focus on their work.

Shannon Malone and Rebecca Dias parient (for non-linguists, that means speak) in French.

Freshman Natasha Fazel, Danny Curzon, Shannon Malone, David Hunt, and Stephen Vrla take time out of their important French class to give us some smiles.

Dr. Correa reviews Shreya Patel's Spanish assignment. Just for the record, she is not happy with her grade.

Stephen Vrla enjoys an exciting French class.

Katie Fish and Natacha Petersen dress up during French class.

Upper School

Humanities

Below: Seniors Becky McLaren and Mike Wiss
Romeo and Juliet?

Humanities courses at PCDS give a foundation for studying literature and history with a sharp mind. From Dr. Allison's insightful explanations of grammar to senior-year electives in Shakespeare and Modern World Literature, from Mr. Flail's multiple-guess tests to Mr. Martin's seminars, PCDS Upper School students accrue a wealth of knowledge to be used not only in high school and college but also in life. Daybreaks, the literary-arts magazine of the Upper School, is a year-end compilation of students' magnificent work in poetry, writing, photography, and art. Having a strong academic education in the liberal arts and humanities is characteristic of all PCDS students.

Right: Mr. Coon, the all-powerful tyrant of senior English classes, decrees homework
assignments from his mighty throne.

Far Right: Dr. Allison dictates the rules of grammar so that her students ain't a speakin' bad.

Reid Davis is fully attentive to today's lecture in Macroeconomics. The teacher, Mr. Reese, is very amused.

Mr. Martin pauses a moment, pondering the possibility of assigning a third ID paper.

Grady Wieger and the rest of his freshman class scramble to learn the lesson Dr. Allison is giving on page 184.

Upper School

Math and Science

The Upper School Math and Science Departments are committed to full integration (pun intended) of everything learned in all core classes and electives, from Algebra I to AP Calculus BC, from first-year Biology to AP Physics C. Weekly labs reinforce the concepts developed earlier in class. To supplement the rigorous courses offered, a group of motivated students put together a quarterly math journal, The Radical. Additionally, throughout the year PCDS students showcase their talents in many national contests that force critical thinking in math and science concepts. The individual accomplishments and TEAMSworK that show up in everyday PCDS classes prove that our students challenge themselves to infinity and beyond.

Freshman Will Fielder shows caution while working with his lab partners in Advanced Biology class.

Hi, Morris and Eric.

Lance "From the Corner" Labun, thinking about things other than math.

The students in one of Mr. Wilkins's Advanced Chemistry classes watch gummy bears explode in a chemical reaction.

Senior Clint Corcoran makes sense of the confusing star charts in Astronomy.

Seniors Julie Carland, Rebecca Dalton, and Liz Foglesong discuss the best way to tackle a tough AP Calculus BC problem . . . maybe they'll use Dr. Cags's "voodoo math."

Ms. Lowe watches as Sarah Watson, Anand Jayachandran, and the rest of her students work diligently on an in-class assignment.

Fall Play

This year's fall play, directed by drama teacher Chloe Keller, was Pride and Prejudice, adapted from Jane Austen's novel. Throughout the entire course of the play, Mr. and Mrs. Bennet, played by sophomore KC Lewis and senior Elizabeth Engle, discuss the prospects of their five daughters, all of whom are of marrying age. In order to carry out such a wonderful acting performance of nearly three hours, the entire cast practiced hard every day after school to make the play a success. Additionally, many thanks to the crew for building and constructing the on-stage scenery and for taking care of the behind-the-scenes work, especially the lighting. For the many Upper School students, faculty, and parents who attended the weekend performances, the play was truly a sight to be seen.

Life as seen from Matt Guthrie's unique point of view. His debaters take after him quite well . . .

Debate

The essence of PCDS Debate: "The move from a structuralist account in which capital is understood to structure social relations in relatively homologous ways to a view of hegemony in which power relations are subject to repetition, convergence, and rearticulation brought the question of temporality into the thinking of structure, and marked a shift from a form of Althusserian theory that takes structural totalities as theoretical objects to one in which the insights into the contingent possibility of structure inaugurate a renewed conception of hegemony as bound up with the contingent sites and strategies of the rearticulation of power."

see that there is still room for love, for faith, for idealism, for creation; and perhaps, who knows there may yet be worlds still undreamed of.

Jessie-

We are very proud of you for what you have accomplished. But, most of all, we are proud to be the parents of such a wonderful human being.

With Love, Mom and Dad

Congratulations, Joseph!

We are very proud of you.
Love,
Mom, Dad, and Ashley

Class of 2003,

You've all come such a long way.

As you go forward, remember:

You're never as alone as you sometimes may feel
The world is a wondrous place so don't hide

And don't be afraid of new things . . .

Just be mindful of precarious situations, even if they seem like a lot of fun.

But don't worry if you take some small missteps (we all do).

Don't forget to stop and smell the . . . well, stop and smell anything that smells good.

Be curious.

Study hard.

Looking ahead—Your futures look very bright.

Congratulations

Christo Dru

Christo,

Although we have had both wonderful and difficult years and experiences, raising you has always been an honor, a pleasure, and a delicious challenge. You have "done us" proud. Now it is your turn to soar solo. Be wise, kind, and humble. Strive for a high level of intellectual and physical fitness. Pursue your singing and songwriting; there may be more to this than any of us realize. Be alert for unexpected forks in your road and trust your heart when deciding which one to walk down. Never be afraid to take a chance if it intrigues you and if it feels right. Remember that the things that really matter in life are good health, a job that you enjoy, a mate whom you truly love, and feelings of satisfaction and contentment when you lay your head on your pillow each night.

Love, Mom, Dad, Alex, and Gadget

We want to thank you for being such a great son and brother, and for the wonderful times we shared. In fact, you might say its been a HAIR-RAISING experience for all of us. We love you.

To Sabrina, once the "little girl" in our midst -- and now the "one in charge."

With very special love and appreciation for all you have given! You have brought us laughter and love and passions beyond measure. May the next jeté be the best--and may all your dreams take flight!

Oh! The Places You'll Go!

Oh! The places you'll go!
There is fun to be done!
There are points to be scored.
There are games to be won.
And the magical things
You can do with that ball
Will make you the Winning-est winner of all.

Character cannot be developed in ease and quiet. Only through experience of trial and suffering can the soul be strengthened, vision cleared, ambition inspired, and success achieved.

Like a fresh and singular snowflake,
Like the break in the morning sky,
Like the burst of the sun's first ray of light,
Like the star so majestic and high,
Like the beauty of a song well sung,
Like a note so perfectly attained,
Like a leaf that thirsts for that moisturous drop,
of heaven's gentle and cleansing rain.
Like the tender touch of lips to skin,
the caress of confidence found.
Like the plant boring into sunlight,
through the oft-tilled fertile ground.
Like the ship once lost and drifting,
with the nudge of fate's unseen hand, to the womb of the distant harbor, and the sureness of dry land.
Like the love once new, and now reborn,
with each day that passes by,
That miraculous instant your life joined with mine,
was the first moment joy made me cry.

If wishes and dreams could at once come true with but words and thoughts newly formed, then my wish and thought for you, my love,
would be forever calm days before the storm.

With happiness and joy overflowing, and loved ones as far as the eye can see,
May the fullness of life keep your light shining bright.
May the beauty it offers spread long and deep,
like the branches and roots of the tallest tree.

Like grains of sand in a desert,
your choices are fluid and free.
Let your life be an icon to others,
be true to yourself, that's the key.

May you always learn something from all whom you meet,
and be a beacon to all that you touch.
As for me, every word ever written could never express how I love you so much.

As you look through the 2003 Phoenician, please join me in congratulating the dedicated students without whom this yearbook would not be possible.

This year the yearbook staff was led by a talented group of editors including Clint Corcoran and Humberto Duarte, senior editors; Elena Abarinov, junior editor; Veronique Millon, photo editor; and Lance Labun, technical editor. Your leadership has made this yearbook a reality and you all should be very proud.

In addition, I would like to thank all the new students who joined the yearbook this year and will carry on the tradition of excellence so well nourished by those graduating. The torch is passed!
