Dear Jedheads,

In 2013, Edith and Jolly approached me with an invitation to join creative forces and bring to life a venture that would share artistic pursuits, wilderness travel writing, and witty banter with the world, all under one roof. I was intrigued but not sold — not until they told me the whole thing would bear my name and be an homage to my wisebuckery. That, and they said art shows would be loosely themed after Alfred Hitchcock film titles.

So I said yes, and over the past decade we've had a jolly good time with it all. We've hosted dozens of art exhibits, unleashed creative ruminations on themes both traditional and contemporary, and shared countless travelogues about destinations ranging from the mountains of California and the deserts of the Southwest, to Inca ruins of Peru and thin-aired passes of Nepal.

As you flip through, click on any of the 👣 links to saunter over to some bonus e-content — an art gallery, a video, a blog post. If you like any of the art, head over to dearantler.com/shop to see if it's still available for purchase.

As we celebrate over a decade of shenanigans, we hope you find something to fawn over amid the staggering array of offerings. If you doe, tell your deerest friends; if you doen't, keep it to yourself.

Eleven years is nothing to sneeze at. But if you do sneeze, remember we're not the ones who gave you that cold.

Yours,

Jedediah "Jed" Cornelius Antler

STRONG BIRDY LEGS
The SOBO HOBOS

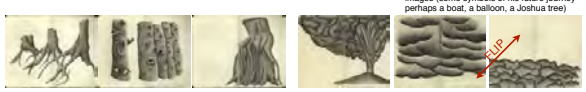

Intro (4 measures)
Opening scene: clouds open up to reveal a mountain peak, then more mountains.

"You finally climbed..." 0:16
We spot a small figure walking at the foot of the mountains, then a tree or two and then a forest. Dense forest opens up and reveals Sasquatch (maybe in parts - eyes first).

"Rain up..." 0:46
He walks through a forest and mountain landscape, left to right. More trees and mountains.

"Rain up" 0:59
He encounters a talking tree with eyes and mouth. The talking tree shares messages as images (some symbols of his future journey - perhaps a boat, a balloon, a Joshua tree)

"You figured out the subtext..." 1:15
Sasquatch nods in approval - he will take on the adventure. He takes his leave and continues to walk. He walks through a forest of fantastical trees. The trees seem to be animated, like people or animals.

"Rain up..." 1:44
He encounters a geyser (Old Faithful); the geyser steam drifts up and becomes clouds. The clouds flip upside down and turn into a bison stampede. Sasquatch runs with bison stampede

Notes on Images

There are 5 elements here. One complete set and 4 individual ones. We were thinking of having the set of clouds fade and dissolve and while the 4 remaining small clouds move to the left and right side.

Talking Tree. A new file is uploaded on the drive. Almost similar to the sasquatch blinking, by alternating the two "mouths" it gives the impression of talking.
This has several elements: tree, talk bubble, boat, joshua tree, lotus, tentacles, 2 mouths, red balloon.

4 elements of mountains.

This is just one of many stumps I uploaded. There are 18 total.

Sasquatch complete. this one has several elements. Arms, legs, body, head, eyeball, eyelid. It has a lot of moving elements. I created an eyelid where from time to time he can blink, if you go back and forth in showing and hiding the layer it'll give you the impression of blinking/

The eyes are separate elements and can move around so they appear to look right, left, up or down.

I have this uploaded on the drive and not part of the story board. This is just in case if you need more individual mountains. There are seven mountains.

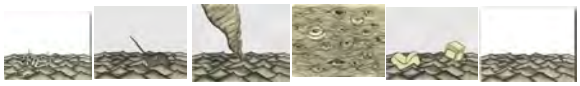

updated the file. This one has separate elements: geyser, steam, mound.

"All the other water..." 2:07
Sasquatch and the bison stampede arrive at the edge of a tree-lined shore. The bison leave him there. They have led him to a part of the journey he must take alone. He gets into a red rowboat.

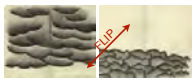

"All the water..." 2:21
Embarking on the rowboat he crosses the threshold to another world.

"Rain up..." 2:29
While on the water, he encounters various water creatures, monsters, eyes looking up from the water, a waterspout, various objects, etc.

Break (2 measures) 2:44
He reaches the other shore, gets out of the rowboat and onto a sunny land of desert trees, boulders and rocks. He is safe and the dangerous journey on water is over. But he is in a new world that is different than what he left behind on the other side.

This one we were thinking of the clouds dissolving and transitioning to the bisons. I have the bison separated into separated layers and sasquatch can be in the middle of the herd.

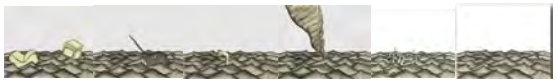

boat has a few layers to enable sasquatch being inside.

The trees are separated so sasquatch can walk between trees.

eyes are separate elements so it can move around.

Waves are uploaded with several layers. Another file is uploaded with all of the creatures and things in the sea all in one.

"Just open up the fountain..." 3:07
He walks through a saguaro and Joshua tree forest, past large boulders. He spots a red flower, stops to pick it, and carries it with him.

"Rain up..." 3:23
He continues his walk through the desert, then stops and looks up.

"All the other water..." 3:29
He sees rain clouds above. It starts raining, and video zooms into drops and they get bigger. Scene turns upside down.

"All the water up from..." 3:44
Continuing to zoom in and the drops are turning into floating balloons. One balloon is red.

"That's the day my love..." 3:58
Ending scene: Sasquatch grabs onto the string on the red balloon and floats up. He floats to the clouds and there he finds the beautiful creature (his mate); he gives her the red flower, and she accepts. Both of their chests glow red.

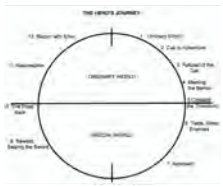

One frame zoom into sasquatch. He blinks. another frame zoom into lady Sasquatch. She blinks 3x and last blink frame stays black.

Saguaro cactus on the left has separate arms elements so it can move around, like it's alive/animated.

raincloud and rain are two separate elements. Maybe using the original cloud or a part of instead?

Dulce et decorum non est

music video

Dulce et decorum non est
By Edith B. de Guzman

One side demanding, the other recanting, they will not give Firing rockets in the name of a prophet, Tel Aviv
Hunger has deepened, and spirits have weakened, falling apart at the seams

Where is the end of this war?
When no one is left to keep score?
Where is the end of this war?

On one side a mother pleads of another to let her child live Firing missiles, say god will forgive them, Khan Yunis
Another incursion, attempted subversion, tragedy

Where is the sense in this war?
A dove, an olive branch to implore
Where is the sense in this war?

Civilian blood spattered, dreams of peace shattered, agony
A bone chilling darkness, faceless and heartless, kills their dreams
With sparse education, no summer vacations, what's it all for?
Between the oppression and continued aggression, can we hope for anything more?

Where is the end of this war,
When all that remains is rubble and gore?
Where is the sense in this war,
When patria mori all have sworn?

companion piece for Avenue 50 Studio's Art for Peace show

Well, Jedheads — you've made it to the end.

We don't know what the next decade will bring, but we're pretty sure it will involve more deerfoolery and antler antics. We invite you to stay engaged in 2025 and to mark your calendars for a series of programming we will be curating at Descanso Gardens in Los Angeles County. Roots of Cool: A Celebration of Trees and Shade in a Warming World will bring a series of garden installations, art exhibitions, and educational engagement events that invite visitors to connect to and cultivate an appreciation for the life-giving role trees play in making urban neighborhoods livable. Roots of Cool will run July 12 to October 12, 2025.

Wisebuckery aside, we believe that every corner of our richly diverse region offers opportunities for wonder and discovery. Like a network of roots, we can cultivate these opportunities through connections with each other and the resources that sustain us — and we hope to continue do so with you next year and beyond.

So stay in touch. Visit dearantler.com. Follow us on Instagram (@dearantler). Or join us on a local hiking trail.

May you relish in connection and enjoy being alive today,
