WELCOME

Welcome to our September / October Edition of our Libra Drinks Headlines Promotional brochure.

As we bid farewell to long nights and sticky heatwaves, we step out of the fire and into the witching season, welcoming the coolness of autumn. With this we look forward to CASK ALE WEEK and Halloween. The craving for a cold, refreshing lager shifts to the warmth of comforting IPAs and hearty Sunday dinners as children return to school and we brace ourselves for the falling leaves. This autumn, we have an exciting lineup of guest ales featuring VALE BREWERY, Birmingham's renowned Attic Brewery, gluten-free champions BRISTOL BEER FACTORY, and some fantastic brews from local favourites like STANCIL, BLACK SHEEP, and PURITY. Our guest ale offerings are always enhanced by our exceptional permanent selection and some outstanding seasonal specials that you definitely won't want to miss.

As we explore the world of lagers, we begin to shift our focus from the Mediterranean classics to the hearty European lagers hailing from Germany and Belgium. Oktoberfest presents a wonderful opportunity to experiment with fantastic selections from ABK, VELTINS, and BITBURGER, or to try the flavourful yet lesser-known BAVIK from Belgium. It's the perfect occasion to host a party, so why not reach out to one of our representatives to find out how we can assist you?

On the wine front we find ourselves gravitating towards intense, richer wines as most do this time of year. Nothing shows that as well as our new listing of MT. BEAUTIFUL ESTATE PINOT NOIR, from NORTH CANTERBURY, NEW ZEALAND. We take time and effort to ensure we can give you the best version of any varietal or style and this is wine definitely does that is spades. The CODORNIU SPARKLING TRIO also consistently showcases these traits. Even though PROSECCO remains a must, and ours over deliver as represented by the awards they keep winning; the traditional method sparkling wines are the place to be. CAVA as well as CRÉMANT represent amazing value for money as well as providing a trade-up option when your customers are not reaching for Champagne but still want quality and prestige at a price point. The LANGLOIS CRÉMANT DE LOIRE created by BOLLINGER gives you all this and more.

The on trade has a unique opportunity to transform early evening occasions into premium revenue drivers with a curated portfolio of spirits and mineral brands. As daylight hours shorten, consumer preferences naturally shift toward a slower-pace, premium products, comforting serves, and sophisticated non-alcoholic alternatives that elevate the seasonal experience. RUDDY FINE GINS, the multi-ward winning craft gin made in Ruddington, Nottingham showcases the quality and value we can deliver at a local level.

We have some idea to elevate your serves with the return of students and with ideas for Hugo Spritz with EDINBURGH GINS alongside exciting offers VK ENERGY and a basket deal from ABSOLUT and the SAZARAC stable of spirits. Minerals category features familiar promotions from leading brands such as BRITVIC and COCA-COLA, alongside exciting offers on CAWSTON PRESS.

Hopefully there is plenty of offers and ideas in this edition to ensure a profitable change in seasons for all.
Best regards from the team at Libra Drinks.

The oldest wine merchant in Bordeaux, add some affordable class to your summer menu.

Thomas Barton left his native Ireland in the beginning of the 18th century and emigrated to Bordeaux when he was just 30 years old. As a true adventurer he founded his wine-shipping company in 1725. Very quickly, his efforts brought an unbelievable level of prosperity and by 1947, Thomas Barton was considered Bordeaux's number one shipper and his loyal clients nicknamed him "French Tom". He was the first shipper to have his own wine estates. In 1802 Hugh Barton, his grandson and successor, teamed up with Daniel Guestier, a French trader, to create Barton & Guestier which is today the oldest wine merchant established in Bordeaux.

Cask Ale in the UK:

From Brewing Tradition to Modern Pub Revival

Cask ale is one of the defining products of British brewing and is synonymous with the traditional British Pub. It is also one of the most loved and crafted products to be sold over the bar. Cask beer is naturally conditioned, unpasteurised and matured to be served from the cask, traditionally at cellar temperature and needs more care and attention than your steel keg lagers and IPAs. Its history and tradition is closely intertwined with the development of the British pub, the rise of regional breweries and the social culture of drinking locally produced beer.

Today, however, cask ale stands at an important crossroads. Overall volumes have declined, but the category is far from disappearing. A new generation of brewers, drinkers and pub operators is demonstrating that cask ale can be both a product of heritage and a platform for innovation. We work hard to ensure our customers have a range to choose from that highlight those key traditional styles but also the option to choose from more modern style of ale as well.

A history rooted in British brewing

The story of cask ale begins with the development of naturally conditioned beer. Before modern filtration, pasteurisation and pressurised dispense systems became widespread, beer commonly continued to mature in the cask after leaving the brewery. Yeast and natural carbonation were part of the product, while publicans played an important role in storing, conditioning and serving the beer.

The traditional British ale styles that developed through the 18th and 19th centuries, namely bitters, pale ales, milds, porters and stouts, were shaped by local ingredients, water, brewing techniques and the needs of regional markets.

The expansion of the railway network helped breweries distribute beer further, while industrialisation led to the growth of major brewing centres such as Burton upon Trent, London, Manchester, Edinburgh and Yorkshire. Many of the beers that remain familiar today have roots in this period.

The 20th century brought major changes. Brewing became increasingly consolidated, with independent regional breweries absorbed into larger groups. At the same time, lager and keg beer grew in popularity. Keg dispense offered consistency, longer shelf life and a different drinking experience, while cask ale increasingly became associated with traditional pubs and older consumers.

The creation of the Campaign for Real Ale, or CAMRA, in 1971 was a major turning point. Its campaign helped preserve traditional cask-conditioned beer and brought renewed attention to independent breweries, regional styles and the importance of traditional dispense.

The craft-brewing revolution that followed in the late 20th and early 21st centuries added another important chapter. While much of the modern craft movement focused on keg and packaged beer, its emphasis on flavour, provenance, experimentation and independent brewing has also helped create new opportunities for cask. What we are also now seeing is those craft brewers who had previously focused so much into can and keg, now putting greater emphasis on quality cask beer that entices younger drinkers to try.

For many consumers, cask ale still means a traditional bitter or pale ale. Those beers remain important, but the modern cask category is significantly more diverse with contemporary styles recruiting younger drinkers to the category. The most successful modern cask beers tend to retain the qualities that make the format distinctive such as freshness, natural conditioning, texture and a strong connection with the pub while offering flavour profiles that appeal to today's drinkers. This allows brewers to be more playful with their styles, offering more hazy beers or more fruit forward styles.

The current performance of cask ale

The overall market picture is challenging. According to NIQ figures reported in The Morning Advertiser's 2026 Beer Report, 1.28 million hectolitres of cask ale were sold on draught in the UK on-trade during 2025. That was down 7.1% from 1.40 million hectolitres in 2024 and 11.2% from 1.46 million hectolitres in 2023.

Longer-term pressures include pub closures, rising operating costs, changing drinking habits and the competition for limited bar space. Cask ale also faces the challenge of communicating its value to consumers who may be more familiar with modern lager, craft beer, stout and packaged beer than with traditional cask.

www.libradrinks.co.uk

Yet the headline decline masks a more complicated picture.

Research and trade commentary increasingly suggest that premium cask is proving more resilient than standard ale. The Morning Advertiser reported in 2026 that around six million consumers still drink cask beer, while premium products are performing better than the wider category.

This points towards a significant opportunity for the trade: the future of cask may be less about defending every traditional product and more about improving the quality, visibility and relevance of the beers that remain on the bar.

Premiumisation is helping cask remain relevant

One of the clearest trends in the category is premiumisation.

Consumers are increasingly willing to pay more for products that offer a stronger experience, provided the quality is clear. In cask ale, that can mean a well-kept pint, a recognised premium brand, a distinctive brewery story or a beer with a flavour profile that cannot easily be replicated by mainstream lager.

Timothy Taylor's Landlord provides a notable example. The beer became the UK's leading cask ale by both volume and value in the latest Morning Advertiser Drinks List, based on CGA data for the 12 months to October 2025. Its volume was broadly stable, while value sales rose 3.6%.

Fuller's London Pride also demonstrated resilience, with volume sales rising 1.6% to 78,113 hectolitres and value sales increasing 6.7% to £65.2 million. These figures suggest that a strong cask proposition can still deliver significant value in the on-trade, even while the wider category contracts. Here at Libra we are seeing an ever growing demand for 'Seasonal' cask beer as established brewers offer a more varied range to their core, often leading with more challenger styles to their traditional core range.

Modern styles are supporting the future of cask

The strongest argument for the future of cask ale is that it is no longer limited to a single style or consumer profile.

Newer cask beers increasingly use expressive hop varieties and brewing techniques associated with the wider craft-beer movement. The result is a cask beer that can offer citrus, stone fruit, tropical, floral and resinous flavours. This is particularly important for attracting drinkers who may not identify as traditional ale drinkers but are already interested in flavour-led beer.

Modern pale ales and IPAs can provide a bridge between craft beer and cask. They offer recognisable hop-forward flavour while retaining the softer mouthfeel and natural conditioning associated with cask dispense.

The format can also make stronger beers more approachable. A cask beer's texture, carbonation and serving temperature can create a different experience from the same style served through a modern keg system.

Limited releases can also help cask generate excitement. Seasonal beers, anniversary brews and brewery collaborations give pubs a reason to change lines and give consumers a reason to return. This is especially important for independent pubs, micropubs and specialist beer venues, where variety and discovery are central to the customer experience.

Cask Ale Week: putting the category in front of consumers

Cask Ale Week has become one of the UK's most important annual promotional moments for the category. Organised by Cask Marque and supported by trade organisations, brewers, pub groups and CAMRA, the campaign encourages pubs and breweries to promote cask beer through events, tastings, ale trails and other activities.

The 2026 National Cask Ale Week is scheduled to run from 17 to 27 September.

So why is this important? It's important because Cask Ale is important. Cask Ale deserves the showcase and the opportunity to encourage new drinkers to the category who can keep it alive and thriving. Consumers who may never have explored the category and may have outdated perceptions of what it tastes like. Whether that be your very first taste of Titanic Plum Porter, or the realization that a Tiny Rebel seasonal beer can pack all the flavour of the Clwb Tropica. Encouraging trial with a well-kept pint of a modern pale ale or a limited-edition beer can challenge those assumptions and recruit a new drinker for the long term.

Cask Ale Week also provides a useful commercial opportunity for the trade. Pubs can use the occasion to:

- introduce new customers to cask;
- promote local and independent breweries;
- run tasting events and ale trails;
- highlight different styles;
- create social-media content;
- increase awareness of correct cellar management and dispense;
- encourage consumers to trade up to premium cask products.

In a declining category, events such as Cask Ale Week are particularly valuable because they turn cask from a passive product on the bar into an experience.

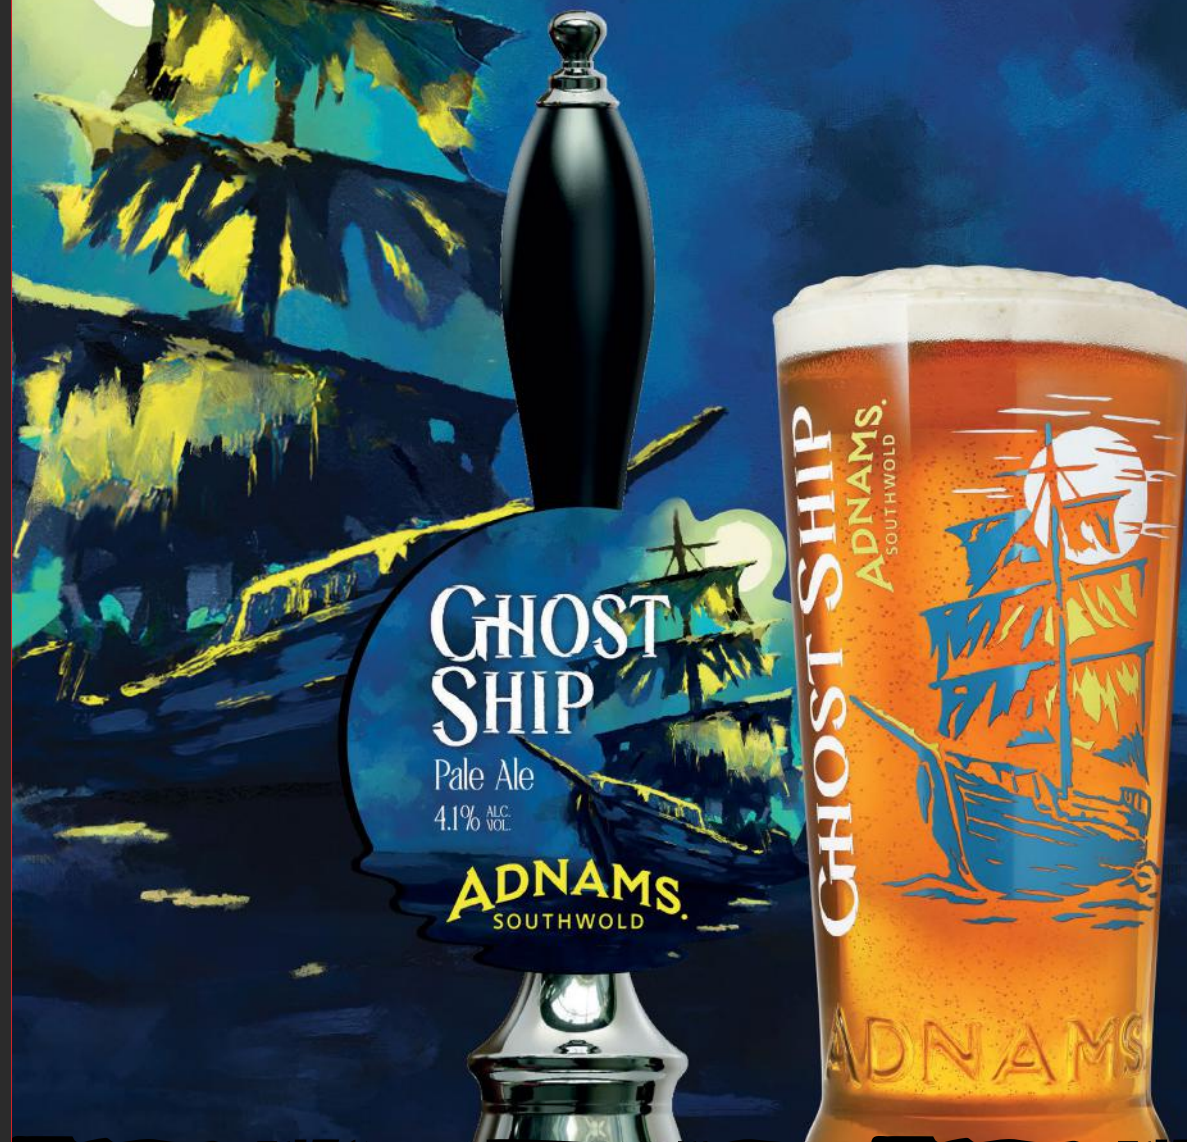

With Cask Ale week kicking off in September take a look at some of the brilliant beers in our guest slot or in our Permanent range to help you make the most out of the increased focus on the category. Our sales team will be on hand to guide you through any plans and can help introduce you to the right brands to give your customers the choice they want. Who knows, you may even play host to someone's first pint of wonderful cask ale.

OCTOBER

CASK-ONLY DRY HOP PALES, INSPIRED BY MUSIC FROM THE GREATS.

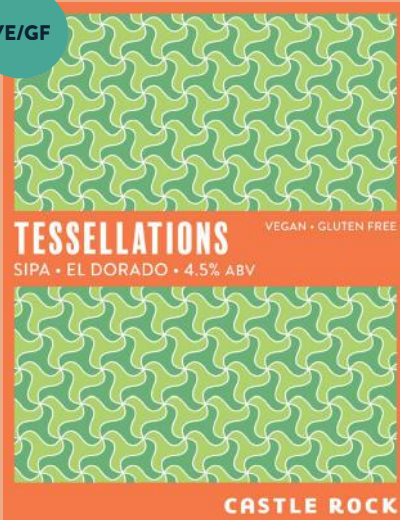

UNCHAINED MELODY

While widely known as a timeless love ballad, it can also be heard as a meditation on longing, separation, and the universal human desire for connection, hope and transcendence. 4.2% ABV

SPELLBOUND

The lead single from Siouxsie and the Banshees' fourth album, Juju. Rather than simply describing romance, the song captures the overwhelming, almost supernatural intensity of attraction, portraying love as an irresistible force that enchants, consumes, and leaves the listener willingly under its spell. 4.1% ABV

TESSELLATIONS

Part of our always vegan, always gluten-free, hazy pale cask range.

WHAT ARE GLUTEN-FREE BEERS?

Our cask beers marked as 'gluten free' are brewed much like regular beer. However, during fermentation, the beer is treated with Brewers Clarex® - a widely used enzyme that breaks down gluten proteins.

After this process, the beer is carefully tested to ensure gluten levels fall below the recognised threshold of 20 parts per million (ppm), which is the standard for gluten-free certification.

Giving up gluten doesn't mean giving up great beer. In fact, there should be no noticeable difference in flavour compared to beers that contain gluten - so you can still enjoy the same quality, character, and refreshment.

Terms and Conditions

1. All offers are available from 1st March to 30th April 2025 unless otherwise stated. 2. All offers are subject to regional availability and prices are exclusive of VAT. 3. We will not accept orders where they would breach a beer tie or other contracts that the buyer holds with a third party. 4. E.&O.E. 5. This brochure is not intended as an inducement to breach any contract, which may exist between a tenant & their landlord to purchase beers or any other products. In such cases only those products, which are excluded from such agreements, should be considered. 6. We treat the buyer placing an order with us as the buyer's confirmation that there is no such tie. 7. All prices featured may be subject to a duty increase
